McKeithen Urges Jonesboro Peace

By JIMMY HATTEN
State Editor

JONESBORO — Gov. John J. McKeithen Saturday interjected the state government into the Jonesboro racial situation in an effort "to prevent violence and chaos" and told Negro leaders that in so doing, "as far as politics is concerned, my neck is out about that far."

He urged them to help solve racial problems "without hurting and hating."

FLIES TO AREA

The governor, delayed two hours by adverse weather conditions, flew into Jonesboro in a state plane. He said he knew he was laying his political career on the line in making the trip, but said he was trying to do everything possible to prevent violence.

McKeithen's appearance came following weeks of protest demonstrations by students at the Negro Jackson Parish High School. The protests, led by F. K. Kirkpatrick, football coach, and Glen Johnson 17, a student, have been in the form of marches on the school grounds and to and from the Jackson Parish School Board office.

On arriving at the school, McKeithen first met with an overflow crowd of Negroes in a classroom. Then, he was taken on a tour of the school, with the Negroes pointing out improvements they said were needed.

Afterwards, he met with a "grievance committee" of eight, including the student leader Glen Johnson. Following a brief press conference, he viewed the football field, met with school board members, and went to Radio Station KTOC.

At the station, he made a brief appeal for passage of an $800,000 school bond issue Tuesday which would provide funds for a new gymnasium at the Negro school, plus improvements at the other schools, white and colored, in the parish.

The Negro demands have included a new gymnasium, improved facilities and curriculum, and at times, such things as improved mail service. They have also demanded resignation of school Supt. J. D. Kenner.

The press was excluded from the meeting, but the exchanges in the main meeting could be plainly heard outside.

"Don't you all get the idea I'm trying to do anything big," McKeithen said. "As far as politics is concerned, my neck is out about that far."

At the press conference, he said he was "very hopeful" that his visit had been fruitful. He said that he was trying to do "anything I can do to prevent violence and chaos."

He said, "I hope and pray" that his actions would be significant in this regard.

Gunmen Snatch $500,000 In Gems

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Four gunmen, wearing hoods and tossing a smoke bomb to cover their actions, took gems valued at possibly $500,000 from a jewelry shop within I. Magnin's fashionable Wilshire Boulevard department store Saturday.

No shots were fired and no one was reported injured, but at least a score of customers and employes were caught in the uproar and confusion of the robbery.

Thomas C. Wolfe, manager of Laykin et Cie — French for "and company" — said the firm would be conducting an inventory throughout the night in an effort to determine extent of the loss.

HAD TO LIE DOWN

[illegible]

Wolfe said the first that he knew of the robbery was when a man with a revolver entered his office and told him to lie on the floor. He did, but he also pressed a hidden alarm button.

"Then I could hear all the noise," said Wolfe. "I just got up and ran — right into some other man with a gun. It was long, a shotgun or rifle I guess.

"I dove behind a series of cases, then crawled along on my hands and knees to a telephone, pulled it down and called police.

"I could certainly tell they were still there, smashing away at the glass cases and making all kinds of noise — shouting, banging on things, trying to create a lot of ruckus. A charming bunch, just a charming bunch."

Wolfe said the position in which one gunman was standing was such that persons in other sections of the department store would have been able to see him.

"This one man was standing in the middle of the floor," Wolfe said. "He had people lying all over the place — about 12 of them at least, and he was standing over them with a gun."

Detective Sgt. R. L. Sauter reconstructed the robbery this way: The four came in the employe entrance at 10:20 a.m. and [illegible]

Officials have expressed concern about the Saigon base and one at nearby Bien Hoa. Both are the responsibility of the South Vietnamese. Bien Hoa, just outside Saigon, fell under heavy mortar attack last year.

Taylor, however, is expected to bear a much more optimistic report than the one he carried home in November.

He is reported to believe that the United States is making good progress in working with the South Vietnamese and that the government of Premier Phan Huy Quat is taking hold.

The ambassador can report good tactical results from bombings in the North, more moderate results on strikes against Communist supply lines through neighboring Laos, but only mixed to poor results on the fight against the Communist guerrillas inside the country.

One reason for the poor showing in the ground war is the fact that the swift jets now in use against the Viet Cong are not designed for guerrilla warfare.

A dozen B57 bombers raided suspected Viet Cong targets 50 miles northwest of Saigon Saturday but there was no report on whether the raid was successful.

Taylor possibly will discuss air strikes at the North Vietnamese capital, Hanoi, and its port city, Haiphong, in furthering the U.S. policy of trying to get the Northern Reds to call off support of the Viet Cong.

Informants said two squadrons — one of them jets — of U.S. Marine planes are expected to be brought to Da Nang, the chief jumping off points for air attacks on the North. The planes would be assigned the task of providing tactical support to the Marine ground forces, the sources said.

MAYOR OF YEAR

Mayor [illegible] Wilds of St. Joseph was chosen as Mayor of the Year on his record as mayor of St. Joseph and his chairmanship of the insurance committee of the LMA.

Street commissioner W. D. H. Rodriquez of Monroe, received one of the top awards, the six star service award, which indicates six or seven terms of city service.

Mayor Frank R. Burnside of Newellton and Mayor Wilds of St. Joseph were also awarded the six star honor.

Owen McBride of St. Joseph was among five to be selected as a city councilman of the year.

New officers for the group are Mayor J. Rayburn Butrand of Lafayette, president; and Mayor John W. Perritt of Ruston, first vice president.

W. E. Marioneaux of Winnsboro will serve as district vice president for the Fifth District. Other district vice presidents include: Mayors Victor Schiro of New Orleans, first; Rou C. Keller of Westwego, second; G. Leslie Broussard of Houma, third; George L. Nattin of Bossier City, fourth; Norman E. Heine of Baker, sixth; Harold Bordelon of Ville Platte, seventh; and Chester Fogleman of Colfax, eighth.

The diamond service award which was a gold pin with a diamond was accorded Mayor Charles Sinagra of Independence for having served eight four-year terms on the Independence City Council.

Mayor James G. Sherman of Columbia and Alderman C. B. Forgotson of Newellton both received four star service awards, representing four or five successive successful municipal elections.

The association passed a resolution to endorse Gov. John McKeithen's proposed north-south toll route to link Shreveport and New Orleans — and perhaps Monroe. The proposal was made on the convention floor during McKeithen's Keynote address Thursday. They also urged the Legislature to grant municipalities a share of the proposed bond issue.

RAPS SHERIFF

FBI Posts Alert For Slaying Car

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The FBI said Saturday night that it had alerted all Alabama police units to a Ku Klux Klan auto allegedly used in the slaying of Mrs. Viola Liuzzo only hours before the Detroit housewife was shot to death.

[illegible]

"They (FBI agents) have always worked closely with us in the past but this time, for some reason, they didn't advise us of this," Clark said.

"TYPICAL OF CLARK"

"If they had, we'd have been able to watch for the car and the men. There is a remote possibility that we might have averted the shooting," Clark added.

Responding to inquiries, the FBI said Clark's charges were "absolutely without foundation and typical of Sheriff Clark's weakness in handling his responsibilities."

However, the FBI said that at one point, it had observed the car allegedly used by four Klansmen in the slaying of Mrs. Liuzzo.

The car, belonging to Eugene Thomas, one of four Klansmen arrested in connection with the sniper slaying, was first spotted by the FBI March 21.

The FBI statement said:

"The FBI did, however, due to its saturation coverage of Klan organizations, observe this car among more than 80 others in a Klan motorcade in Montgomery, Ala., on the afternoon of March 21."

Sheriff Claims Crime Admitted At Hattiesburg

HATTIESBURG, Miss. (AP) — Sheriff Bud Gray said Claudies Shinall, a 20-year-old Negro, signed a statement Saturday admitting the fatal shooting of a Forrest County constable.

Constable Frederick L. Humphrey, 28, was killed Friday night by three shots from a small-caliber pistol after he halted a car occupied by at least four Negroes.

Gray said the gun allegedly used in the shooting was found along with a green car the four were last seen using Friday night.

The sheriff said three other Negroes were held as material witnesses. He identified them as William Leggett, 21, James Anderson, 22, and Louis Willie Smith, 25, all of the Palmer's Crossing community in Forrest County.

Andrew Wilburn, 13, and Larry Scott, 9, both Negroes, who were in a house near the scene of the shooting, provided a description of the green car. The boys said they were watching television when they heard a commotion.

Wilburn told investigators he heard the constable order the people out of the car shortly before the shots.

CBR ARSENALS

Mild Gas Tiny Part Of Toxic Weaponry

WASHINGTON (AP) — Tear and nauseating gases, like those used in Viet Nam with an ensuing worldwide clamor, are only a mild and minor portion of the chemical arsenal possessed by Communist and non-Communist powers.

They make you cry and vomit, incapacitate you for a few minutes or hours. But compared with other weapons in the Chemical Biological Radiological — CBR — arsenals, they are almost benign.

Some of the others can kill almost instantly or bring a slow and strangling death.

Even those not fatally toxic, some psychochemical compounds, can reduce men temporarily to something approaching idiocy or produce an anasthetized sleep.

Among the powers, the United States, Soviet Union and Red China have some or many of these types.

They were spawned first in Germany, which developed mustard, phosgene and chlorine toxic gases and used them on Allied forces in World War I.

From World War II, German laboratories came the first compounds for today's nerve gases. They were not used in that war. But when the Nazi forces were defeated, the data and production equipment fell into the hands of the victors, including the Soviet Union and the United States.

The Soviet Union passed along to Red China supplies and help in setting up the Chinese Communists for production of their own material. The Chinese Reds also may have captured some gas warfare material from the Japanese as World War II ended.

As both Secretary of Defense Robert S. McNamara and Secretary of State Dean Rusk have been emphasizing, the stuff used in Viet Nam was the least harmful of any of the CBR family of compounds. They are the tear and vomiting gases which McNamara says both police and military forces of the world use as riot control agents and which produce temporary effects ranging from three minutes up to two hours. They can be purchased commercially by anyone.

They were supplied to the South Vietnamese in the summer of 1962, but not used until last January, then again on two subsequent occasions.

Fleeing Cubans Seen Off Coast

KEY WEST, Fla. (AP) — The largest single group of Cubans to flee Fidel Castro's island by boat, 94 men, women and children, was spotted southwest of Key West on Saturday.

The Coast Guard said the exiles, riding in two open boats, were discovered by a passing freighter, which made the head count.

The cutter Cape Darby and two 40-foot patrol boats were sent to escort them into port.

The freighter, which was not identified, said one of the boats apparently was disabled because it was being towed by the other.

The weatherman said the mercury is expected to climb into the 60s during the day. Lows tonight will be 45 to 50.

The outlook for Monday calls for more partly cloudy skies but the temperatures are expected to be mild again.

FAA at Selman Field only recorded .02 of an inch of rain over the past 24 hour period. The high Saturday recorded by FAA was a cool 47 with a low of 37.

Today's winds will be out of the east at eight to 15 miles per hour, becoming southeast tonight.

Dog Perishes To Save Pups

MOULTRIE, Ga. (AP) — Duchess, a 3-year-old great Dane, burned to death Friday night when her dog house caught fire, but she saved her six puppies from the flames.

Ron Hannon, Duchess' owner, said the dog apparently backed the puppies into a corner of the house and protected them with her body. Her body was burned but the puppies escaped injury.

The fire occured, Hannon said, when Duchess apparently knocked a heat lamp to the floor.

Leukemia Cure Under Trial

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — A tentative and experimental vaccine against leukemia has been developed and is being tried on humans, a researcher reported Saturday.

But he emphasized that he has no results as yet and his work is strictly experimental. Leukemia is the so-far incurable cancer of the blood and blood-forming organs.

The researcher is Dr. James T. Grace of Roswell Park Memorial Institute, Buffalo, N.Y.

The possibility of a vaccine against leukemia arose from studies in mice, the relatively new-found ability to grow human leukemia cells, and the discovery in those diseased cells of particles that look like viruses.

It is known that viruses cause leukemia in animals but there is not yet proof that viruses also cause leukemia in humans, although there is circumstantial evidence, Dr. Grace told a science writers' seminar of the American Cancer Society.

Dr. Grace's laboratory found virus-like particles in the blood cells of a considerable number of human leukemia patients. Looking at the diseased cells under an electron microscope, researchers found a striking resemblance to viruses that cause animal leukemias.

Then researchers in England grew large quantities of cancer cells of the lymphatic system, and found that these also harbor particles that appeared to be viruses.

A remarkable discovery in mice led to the human trials.

Newborn white mice of a specific inbred strain of family were given a known leukemia-causing virus. The virus causes leukemia only in newborn mice.

The newborn mice developed leukemia, as expected, in a matter of months. Then leukemia cells from these diseased mice were transplanted and grew in adult white mice of the same family.

The leukemia cells are so potent that as few as 1,000 cells produces fatal leukemia in a mouse.

The same virus was injected into a family of black mice, and they also developed leukemia. The researchers then took leukemia cells from the diseased black mice and injected them into adult mice of the original white family. The white mice rejected the black mice cells because they came from a different family genetically.

Three weeks later, the researchers took the same adult white mice that had received the diseased black mice cells, and this time injected them with leukemia cells from the white mouse family.

But now — because of the exposure to the disease in the black mice cells, the white mice were immune to the leukemia cells of their own family. The immunity stood up — even in the face of doses as large as a million diseased cells.

Adult white mice that had not been treated with black mouse leukemia, but received only leukemia cells from their own family, died.

This indicates that something in the leukemia cells acted to stimulate protective antibodies in the white mice treated with black mouse leukemia cells. It confirmed too that the stimulating factor, called an antigen, was set up by the original virus, Dr. Grace said.

marchers and into the press room.

These are the things Mc Keithen said he could do for the Negroes as governor: obtain better playground facilities, replace "substandard" books and see that streets that needed paving are paved.

He said he wanted to see to it that the "educational system here will be as good as any in the state."

When the governor left the building, the students had massed outside, carrying signs. One said, "Freedom." Another said, "We need more teachers." He smiled faintly and told the crowd he "hoped a lot had been accomplished."

At one point on the tour, McKeithen stopped just outside the main building and was shown a plot of ground, crowded with underbrush. He told one of the Negroes, "I'm going to send some highway equipment up" to "clean off a playground."

One of the Negro looking on put his arms around another and said, "Boy, we've got them scared."

McKeithen told the Negroes earlier that "the only person who stands to get hurt here today is your governor." He urged them to stop insisting that the school board come to the school to confer with the delegation.

He said, "Negroes want first class citizenship, and first class citizens will go down to the school board office and talk."

Kirkpatrick said the Negroes have been mistreated.

The school board several times has offered to meet with a delegation of Negroes at the school board office, but Negroes have insisted the meeting be held at the Negro High School.

That was the situation when McKeithen showed up.

Noting that "everybody has to give a little," the governor said that what the Negroes want could not be accomplished "overnight." Then he added. "I am giving a whole lot, I've been told I couldn't win relection if I came here today. So the only person who stands to get hurt is your governor."

Afterwards, Kirkpatrick said, "We may cool off for a while." But generally, it was not evident whether the Negroes would continue demonstrations. Johnson said it would be left up to the parents and students.

McKeithen, along with school board member Harold Allen, appeared on a six-minute radio program to urge passage of the bond proposal next Tuesday.

He said he stood ready to "go anywhere, anytime" in the state where he thought the citizens needed the power of the governor's office to solve problems.

Meanwhile, a busload of Syracuse University students were due to arrive here today. They have said they intend to help rebuild two Negro churches that burned in January.

McKeithen noted that an investigation is underway into the church burnings and if arsonists are caught, "we're going to put them in the pen."

The white leadership here was caught by surprise by McKeithen's unexpected trip. Many said they didn't know the governor intended to make the trip until they read it in Saturday morning newspapers.

Following the meeting with the committee, the governor shook hands all around, and as he was about to drive to the football field, he turned to student leader Johnson and said to him, "Get in Glen."

Johnson slid into a seat and they drove off.

The situation at Jonesboro first erupted when students said they were protesting the firing of Kirkpatrick, but later learned he had not been fired.

From that point, the demonstrations continued, with the majority of students boycotting classes for several days.

What Type Book Are You Reading?

By ROBERT SIMONTON
World Staff Writer

Statistics leave most people cold, but these concerning the reading habits of the area should prove stimulating.

There are 99,159 volumes in the Ouachita Parish Public Library system, according to Miss Frances Flanders, head librarian.

The total number of persons in the parish who have library cards is 49,710.

Average number of books checked out each month is 50,000.

What types of books are most popular with area readers? Those most often checked out by adults are books dealing with contemporary life and problems, both fiction and non-fiction. Favorite types of children's books are fairy tales, horse stories and mystery stories.

NO SUPRISE

A national research panel, upon completion of an extensive survey of professional performing arts, has made an announcement that should come as no great surprise to those who are interested enough to keep abreast of such matters.

Music, dance and theatre in our country are in trouble.

The group suggests that, in order for a greater number of people to be exposed to the arts, additional opera and dance companies, symphony orchestras and theatres should be established across the nation.

If this, per chance, should come about (since it seems to be so difficult to stimulate the type interest needed to sustain programs of this nature), it is likely that the Twin Cities would not benefit because the design is for much larger metropolitan areas.

Our only hope in our provincial sort of situation is for individual and local support — not foundation, state or federal aid, as suggested. What would you suggest?

PROPOSAL

A number of folks, who work at downtown offices, have remarked how terribly strange it seems now that the old central grammar school building is actually gone.

The location seems almost unbelievably bare to those who have glanced out their office windows for so many years and seen the old tower gleaming in the sun.

Someone remarked recently that it would be nice to keep just the tower portion of the building intact and have it placed in the center, or at one end, of the city park proposed for the area. Just an idea, which is too late since all is gone.

BEAUTIFUL RIVER

Our Ouachita River has been described by National Geographic Magazine as "the nation's second most scenic river."

We can be justly proud of this fact. However, in our immediate area the banks of the river could be more attractive, it seems.

Next time you cross over one of the bridges, notice — scraggly trees, only a few but enough to spoil a view, and an unsightly amount of rubbish. Most of these are along the west bank. The east side generally presents a neat, green-carpeted picture.

Many adjectives could be used to describe "Hush, Hush, Sweet Charlotte" now playing at the Jim Theatre. The plot is solid, the theme unusual and the cast superb — Bette Davis, Olivia DeHaviland and Agnes Moorhead — who could ask for more? If someone can ask for more —sevan academy award nominations.

Complaints concerning the changes in the weather recently have been numerous. But, someone anonymously has said: "As a rule, man is a fool, When its hot he wants it cool; When it's cool he wants it hot, Always wanting what is not."

The old metropolitan opera building will close in the spring of 1966 and that fall will move into its new location in the Lincoln Center for the Performing Arts. The old building will be replaced by an office skyscraper. Rudolph Bing, who has been manager of the Met for 15 years, says the move will "improve the quality of operatic performances in New York."

GUIDE TO GOOD READING

Popular Book Now In Library

By FRANCES FLANDERS
Ouachita Parish Librarian

Probably the most popular book added to the library collection during the past week will be Nicholas Monsarrat's "The Pillow Fight." This is a sophisticated novel of a marriage and will appeal to many readers. Don't miss it. "Pretty Tales For Tired People" by Martha Gellhorn is a collection of three stories, which will appeal particularly to women. They are not great stories, but they do make good reading. "Rogue's Kingdom" by John Brick is a historical novel with a setting in up state New York in the years just preceding the Civil War. For a rousing adventure story this one is highly recommended. A new novel by P. G. Wodehouse always finds a ready audience. This latest one is "The Brinkmanship of Galahad Treepwood" and is another story of life in Blandings Castle. "The Final Beast" by Frederick Buechner is the story of a search for faith. It will help many people to an understanding of themselves. "Daily and Sunday" by Richard Powell is a very fine character study, woven around life on a newspaper. It will interest every one in this field and all others who want a good book to read. For Western readers there is a new title, "The Grabhorn Bounty" and there are two new mysteries, "The Hiding Place" by Carlton Keith and "The Thousand Doors" by Abraham Rothberg.

Those in top level management positions should read "The Management Profession" by Louis A. Allen. "The Miracle of Plastics" by James G. Cook contains much new information about the plastics industry. "Roman Art and Architecture" by Robert E. Wheeler will be very popular with students of classical languages. "Protestant Worship and Church Architecture" by James F. White will be most useful to those people who are planning a new church building. A lovely book which will interest artists and art students is "A Concise History of English Painting" written by William Gaunt.

Beginners at bridge should read "Bridge for People Who Don't Know One Card From Another" by Ray Young. "Winning Football Plays" by Dave Camerer is an interesting book of sports, while "The Spanish Riding School" by Mathilde Windisch - Graetz tells all about the training of the White Horses of Vienna.

Elizabeth Goudge has given us a lovely collection of poetry, which she calls "A Book of Comfort." "Three Coins in the Birdbath" by Jack Smith is a very humorous book of personal reminiscences. Two books which will be used by advanced students in English literature are: "A Reader's Guide to Geoffrey Chaucer" by Muriel Bowden and "George Eliot" by Walter Ernest. Two interesting new guidebooks are "Switzerland, and Uncommon Guide" by Lawrence and Sylvia Martin and "Passport To Greece," an informal guide to enjoying the country, written by Leslie Finer. "Ancient Mesopotamia" by A. Lee Oppenhein and "Daily Life in Ancient Egypt" by Wali-Al Din are two excellent additions to the history collection.

There are several interesting additions to the American History collection. "The Indian and the White Man" by W. E. Washburn is an excellent study of their relationship. "The Caribbean as Columbus Saw It" by Samuel Eliot Morison is a very fine early history of the Caribbean region. "Confederate Courier" by Helen Jones Campbell is the story of John Harrison Surrat and the assassination of Abraham Lincoln. A very beautiful book is "History of Homes and Gardens of Tennessee" published by the Garden Study Club of Nashville. It is profusely illustrated and contains much history about the people who built the homes.

Biographies are always popular and there are several new ones this week. "Atoms in the Family" by Laura Fermi is the biography of Enrico Fermi the famous scientist. Vincent Cronin has given us an excellent new biography of "Louis XIV". "Behold This Dreamer" is the autobiography of Fulton Oursler. "The Initials in the Heart" written by Laurence Whistler is a very moving story of the life and death of his beautiful and talented wife, Jill Furse.

One of the most popular sections in the library is that devoted to the study of genealogy. We have between 550 and 600 books in this collection in addition to much material on microfilm. We do not have enough staff members to do the research for you, but are always happy to help you locate the book you need.

Another Intrigue Variation

THE THOUSAND DOORS. By Abraham Rothberg. Holt, Rinehart. $4.95.

Though the hero of this novel is confronted with a motley assortment of secret agents, he is an agent of a different kind — literary.

Fortunately for his physical survival, literary agent Warren Stone had been an American paratrooper, so he is able to handle all the fighting and shooting he is drawn into.

Stone goes to Yugoslavia looking for Konstantin Karst, who once had risen to the post of vice president in the Red (but non-Soviet) nation, but had broken with the regime and now was a virtual prisoner. Stone hopes to get an ideologically hot manuscript and smuggle it out to the West for publication.

(The fictional Karst is in a position similar to that of a real-life figure, Milovan Djilas.)

It develops that Karst is eager to have the literary agent carry away four manuscripts, but there are many obstacles. The Yugoslav secret police, headed by Petar Decani, would like to use Stone as a cat's paw to get their own hands on the documents. Stone seeks help from American officials, but for some reason they fear political repercussions and don't want him to succeed. Also there are a couple of thugs on the Moscow side of this complex maneuver.

So the now secretive literary agent has a thorough lesson in Balkan intrigues, as well as some romantic adventures with the beautiful Eleanor Hvar — without knowing for sure whose side she is on.

The story is an interesting variant of the international thriller type, with enough action and color to make it lively.

Book Claims Lewis Bigger Than 'Clark'

MERIWETHER LEWIS, a Biography. By Richard Dillon. Coward-McCann. $6.95.

If you understand the need for a biography of Lewis without Clark, Dillion's volume is more than a satisfactory book.

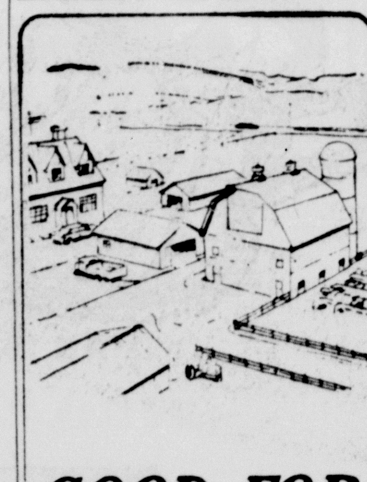
It is carefully done by the head librarian of San Francisco's Sutro Library, a competent historical job.

If you consider Lewis and Clark as Damon and Pythias, stay away. Dillon does not so consider them.

Although he goes out of his way to be fair to William Clark, the author makes it plain that he thinks Lewis the bigger man. As he puts it, "If any one man deserves to be considered as the person who opened the Far West, it is Lewis."

Most historians and biographers have not held Dillon's view. Neither did Lewis. But in this volume of 364 pages, Dillon makes a point for his views and even if the reader does not agree, it still makes for good reading.

The best parts remain the 1804-06 trip of Lewis and Clark up the Mississippi and Missouri on across the Rockies and down the Columbia River to the Pacific Ocean.



GOOD FOR FARMERS
Although Electric Cooperatives average but four meters per mile of power lines (compared to around 35 on company lines in cities), their rates are competitive—service second to none. Non-profit Electric Co-ops are the only way ALL widely scattered farmers can have electricity at rates ALL can afford. This is important to both Town and Country progress!

Wouk Contrasts Manners Of Two

DON'T STOP THE CARNIVAL. By Herman Wouk. Doubleday. $4.95.

Broadway meets the steel drum, the machete and the Caribbean's primitive spirit of irresponsibility here. The result is comically adventurous, sometimes pathetically touching and amusingly entertaining.

The story is about Norman Paperman, a Broadway press agent. His coronary attack has slowed him down, has given him a disenchantment with smart-talk Manhattan. He and his meekly loyal wife Henny have a problem with their daughter Hazel, who is having an affair with an absurdly pompous young literary fraud.

Paperman ventures to a small Caribbean island with his wealthy friend Lester Atlas, a bull-voiced, crude plunger noted for raiding moribund corporations and milking them of their assets. They find a small offshore winter resort, called the Gull Reef Club, is for sale. With Lester's encouragement (more talk than financial, as it turns out), Paperman takes it over, renouncing Broadway.

Even before he becomes the new proprietor, he meets an ex-actress he had known years before, and starts a flirtation that ends tragically. He also finds a frogman from the local Navy base, who soon will distract Hazel's attention from her fraudulent friend.

Of course the inexperienced Paperman runs into mountainous troubles with the resort — quixotic native help; water shortages; a young bartender who proves to be a satyr; a bankrupt contractor who supposedly is fixing up new quarters; and local bureaucracy. His resort is kept afloat by a wonder-working cook and a mad old Frenchman, Hippolyte, who carries the macheet.

One doesn't expect Wouk to write literary works of social significance. He is a story-teller. He has lived for several years in this West Indian locale, knows and savors its odd atmosphere.

Secret Agent Really Cooks Book Claims

IT CAN'T ALWAYS BE CAVIAR. By Johannes Mario Simmel. Doubleday. $5.95.

Novels about secret agents are very popular these days. Usually their heroes relish gunplay, excel in boudoir athletics and possess certain sophisticated touches.

What we have here is a long, rich, overwhelming feast of such fare, goumet style. It exaggerates the secret agent formula to the point of slapstick. Yet oddly enough, the comedy itself has a great many engaging tensions, switches and surprises. So the reader is free to savor the hocus pocus on two levels at once.

The story is about Thomas Lievens. Just before World War II he was the youngest private banker in London; a German-born adventurer, who has a magic touch with the ladies and is an amateur chef.

We're Told To Prepare To Retire

LIFE BEGINS AT FIFTY. By Walter Pitkin Jr. Simon and Schuster. $4.95.

Back in 1932 the author's father wrote a book called "Life Begins at Forty." It created quite a sensation.

Believe it or not, in those days before Social Security and geriatrics, hardly anyone had paid attention to people who were no longer young. And those were the days when there weren't many volumes that we now call "self-help" books. The elder Pitkin stirred up quite a storm.

Chilean Novel Won Faulkner Prize In 1962

CORONATION. By Jose Donoso. Knopf. $4.95.

This novel by a 41-year-old Chilean critic and educator won a William Faulkner prize in 1962, and it isn't hard to picture Faulkner himself enjoying it.

All the elements of the Faulkers school of writing are there; a decaying mansion, presided over by a half-mad nonagenarian; a 50ish bachelor grandson living on inherited wealth while deluding himself that he is a man of letters; servants devoted equally to their masters and their religion; a tragicomic love affair involving master and a servant.

And above all there is an air of tragedy that makes it obvious that the remnants of this once distinguished family are rushing toward oblivion — the question is how and when.

BROAD PROGRAM

Pro-Aid Senate Gets School Bill

WASHINGTON (AP) — The administration's House-passed $1.3-billion program for elementary and secondary schools heads now into the Senate which repeatedly has backed broad programs of federal aid to education.

The House made history Friday night with its 263-153 passage of the measure which is aimed principally at helping the children of poor families. It covers parochial as well as public schools.

President Johnson hailed it in a statement Saturday as "the greatest breakthrough in the advance of education since the Constitution was written."

Although the House never before had voted for any such general aid to education at the elementary and secondary level, the Senate has done so on several occasions.

The latest was in 1961 when it gave 49-34 passage to President John F. Kennedy's bill for a three-year, $2.55-billion program which would have been limited to public schools.

This exclusion of help for parochial schools ultimately doomed this legislation when the House Rules Committee voted 8-7 not to submit it for floor action.

A Senate Education subcommittee already has completed its hearings on the current bill and Chairman Wayne Morse, D-Ore., said he will summon the group into closed sessions, probably next week, to begin voting. It then will have to clear the full Labor and Public Welfare Committee before going to the floor.

Morse said the bill as passed by the House seems generally acceptable and he will resist any major amendments to it.

The Senate's record on general aid-to-education measures, plus the Democrats' 68-32 margin in that chaber seem to insure passage of a measure to Johnson's liking.

IN VIET NAM

U.S. Will Increase Propaganda War

WASHINGTON (AP) — The United States intends to increase its Viet Nam propaganda efforts, including sending more Americans to guerrilla-infested provinces.

In disclosing this Saturday, U.S. officials said also thought is being given to a program for ridding guerrilla defectors of false notions planted by the Communists.

Ambassador Maxwell D. Taylor is returning to Washington for a week of consultation on the U.S.-backed Viet Nam campaign, which includes psychological support for Saigon's cause as well as military and economic aid.

Asked about reports of a sizable increase in the U.S. Information Agency's Viet Nam operations, USIA Director Carl Rowan outlined what he termed the unique functions performed by the U.S. government's information service in Viet Nam as compared with its activities elsewhere around the globe.

"This ranges far beyond the traditional, simple USIA role of explaining what U.S. policy is, what America and its people are like and what their goals are," Rowan said.

According to the USIA chief, who has just returned from South Viet Nam:

The Communists are using psychological warfare as well as guerrilla terrorism in trying to alienate the South Vietnamese people from their government. The Reds threaten those who cooperate with the government, and promise a better life once Saigon's rule is overthrown.

The South Vietnamese government is so busy fighting the Red Viet Cong that it has had little time to take its case to the people. And it lacks knowhow.

In this situation USIA undertakes to help the Saigon government present its case to the people, aim propaganda at Communist North Viet Nam, and tell South Viet Nam's story to the world.

Rowan said that over the past year the number of USIA officers in South Viet Nam has been increased from 24 to 55 and perhaps another 20 will be sent out.

He said the number of South Vietnamese employes of USIA has been increased substantially, shortwave broadcasts from USIA transmitters in the Philippines have been strengthened and the daily hours of broadcasts in Vietnamese have been raised from two to six. A strong mediumwave station has been put into operation at Hue, South Viet Nam, which is heard by North Vietnamese too.

Another project which may be undertaken, he said, is a program to induce Viet Cong to quit the guerrilla ranks and go home.

THE WARM RAPPORT among the members of the Dutch Royal Family at Queen Juliana's 54th birthday celebration two years ago has cooled somewhat in the past year. Princess Irene (second from right) married the pretender to the Spanish throne and became a Catholic, much to her mother's disappointment and Princess Margriet (second from left) has become engaged to a commoner. The Royal couple has also had its personal conflicts. Left to right, the Dutch Royal Family includes, Princess Beatrix, Princess Margriet, The Queen, Prince Berhhard, Princess Irene and Princess Christine. (AP News Features photo)

Dutch Royal Famliy Major Lively Conversation Topic

By PRESTON GROVER

THE HAGUE, Holland, (AP) — The Dutch sense the presence of the royal family in Holland far less than the French feel the presence of President Charles de Gaulle, but at the moment it is a fairly lively subject of fireside conversation.

Largely it has to do with Crown Princess Beatrix, who has just passed her 27th birthday, and has not yet found a prince to her liking.

Twenty seven is by no means a very advanced age for a woman not to be married. The problem is that the princely prospects are not very abundant these days. One serious source in The Hague said it could happen that she might marry an American if a suitable one showed up. But he hastened to add that none was in sight, and that a more likely probability was that the princess' royal eye would turn toward Germany where her mother, Queen Juliana, and her grandmother, the late Queen Wilhelmina, found their husbands.

NO SPANISH

"It won't be a French or Italian prince, and above all note Spanish," a well-placed informant prophesied. Princess Irene married Carlos Hugo of Bourbon-Parma, prince of Madrid, pretender to the Spanish throne, became a Catholic and created a furore. Before she could go ahead with it she had to renounce her right to succession to the throne — she was No. 2 after Beatrix.

Beatrix' chosen prince must become consort to the queen of the Netherlands, and not be hunting a crown in his own right. Besides, by long tradition, the ruling family must belong to the Reformed Dutch Church, which is Protestant.

The dutch seem fairly well satisfied with their royal family, even though they wouldn't mind if one of these generations a royal prince would come along. The last male ruler, William III, died in 1890 and the country has been a matriarchy since. Wilhelmina became queen at age 10, even though she began ruling only at 18. She was followed by Juliana, who took over when Queen Wilhelmina abdicated in September 1948, because of poor health, and retired to her palace at Soestdijk. There she died in 1962.

Juliana was born April 30, 1909, and married Prince Bernhard of Lippe-Biesterfeld Jan. 7, 1937, when she was 27. Thus the family is not traditionally in a hurry to rush to the altar.

PROBLEMS

The family has had its problems, quite apart from Princess Irene. Juliana herself has stirred up the country by her disposition to seek the company and advice of religious mystics. Her insistence on keeping Griet Hofman at her side because Miss Hofman promised to heal the near blindness of Juliana's youngest daughter, Maria Christina, provoked such a crisis in the country in 1956 that the government had to step in.

Apparently at the insistence of Prince Bernhard, Griet Hofman was expelled from the royal palace. She immediately took up residence at Soesdijk under the protecting arm of the Dowager Queen Wilhelmina.

Reports were current at the time that the Griet Hofman affair almost drove Prince Bernhard away from Queen Juliana. That situation brought one of the more touching moments associated with the crisis. Queen Juliana, who regularly gives a Christmas talk over the radio, chose that time to appeal to her people to show some of the kindly virtues.

"Why do we try to drive a wedge between a husband and a wife?" she asked. The country got the word.

Being a royal family in Holland is not easy. The country is small and every time one of the family steps out of a palace she is virtually in the center of the market place. They take their vacations abroad, often in Italy or Switzerland, seeking more privacy than is available at home.

INCLUDES

The family includes a fourth princess, Margriet, 22, who is now second in line to the crown after Beatrix. Margriet's engagement to a commoner, Pieter van Vollenhoven Jr., 25, was announced March 10 by Queen Juliana and Prince Bernhard at Soestdijk. The royal family showed much pleasure at the engagement, and Parliament is expected to approve the union, thus protecting Margriet's right of succession.

Prince Bernhard has proved a popular member of the family, and has been especially active since the war as a promoter of Dutch business abroad. He is widely credited with opening a considerable number of South American markets. Members of the family from time to time visit the tiny Dutch possessions in the Caribbean, and Beatrix plans such a visit soon.

The family lives on a budget voted by Parliament. Beatrix' income was fixed at about $80,000 in 1962. The queen gets $375,000 and Prince Bernhard $75,000. A large part of it goes to wages of the palace staff and pensions for servants. Members of the family live well, but not lavishly.

Prince Bernhard once commented that "in the nation it is my wife who rules, in my home it is I." The Dutch have noted some exceptions to that.

There is no hint in Holland that Juliana plans to retire soon. Her health is good and the country is proserous. Princess Beatrix dedicates bridges and opens festivals. She commented in an interview for her 27th birthday that she didn't expect to be queen soon.

"I don't expect this to be happening within the next 20 or 30 years."

She also commented that the constant attention of the press was interfering with her getting married. Every time a young man takes her to her car, she said, he is likely next morning to find himself a famous suitor in the foreign press.

She visited American in 1963 and met President John F. Kennedy.

"I rarely have met anybody with whom it was so easy to establish immediately a personal contact,' 'the princess said later.

It was Bernhard who first commented "why not" when he was asked if Beatrix might marry an American. But seasoned court commentators feel it is not likely.

"It would be well," said one of them, "if she took a quiet holiday sometime soon in Germany."

IT MAY BE HAWAII, BUT COURT IS COURT

HILO, Hawaii (AP) — A recent edict by Hawaii District Court Judge Richard I. Miyamoto set out tips for proper attire by defendants appearing before him.

He won't try a case, for instance, if a man appears in court without shoes.

DIVERSIFIED TASTES AND A HUNGRY PUP

NEWPORT, Ky. (AP) — The thief who entered R. W. Walker's home had diversified tastes.

He took a radio, an English-type revolver, an antique long rifle with brass fittings — and three cans of dog food.

OLD FRONTIER STYLE

Hunt For Wolves In LaSalle Told

By E. W. PLUMMER
Correspondent

JENA — Once again some scenes reminiscent of the old frontier have been enacted, and the episodes dramatized in the Catahoula Lake section of LaSalle Parish.

Here high adventure in the wilds has been the way of life with the hardy people since the days when the redoubtable Batise killed a maurading pant'er cat with his bare fists. Ogise Deville killed ducks and geese on Catahoula lake by the multiplied thousands, and Charlie Hanner, the Long Carbine of the old school, killed prodigious numbers of all manner of wild game from buck deer to phantom grey squirrels.

In this March 4, 1965, episode, the quarry was a pack of timber wolves, loboes of the forest who have been the scourge of frontier farmers since colonial days. Their wily sneaking and murderous characteristics have made the term "wolf" synonomous with thievery, treachery, deceit, and cruelty.

Wolf tactics follow a certain pattern. The big "catch wolf," leader of the pack, assembles his cohorts on some lonely spot in preparation for the night's hunt. After he has made his strategy known to his underlings, they answer with eerie yelps and bloodcurdling howls that make all animals scamper for safety or brace for a fight to the death, and cause housewives to bolt their doors.

Wolves are slinking cowards who, unless cornered, never take a stand against an adversary unless they have overpowering numbers on their side. Their choice prey is sheep and pigs that have strayed away from their bunch. It is said that when the "catch wolf" misses his prey, the pack kills and eats him and another younger dog wolf takes his place.

It is thought that this pack was forced out of a more remote habitat by backwater, but they found good hunting in the Catahoula Lake hills. Jack Coon, one of hunters participating in the chase, said that they had killed some 30 of his woods pigs and that they had decimated those of his neighbors.

The loboes' daytime hide-out was discovered by a stock raiser who was riding range and, from his information, the big hunt was mapped out.

Wolves are hunted in much the same way as deer, but more "standers" are necessary for wolves are far too smart to run on any particular courses. Too, the hunters must keep close tab on their hounds lest they be cut to pieces by the wolf pack.

Wolves seem to know all the tricks. When a large pack is being chased, a number of them will "tack," that is, dodge off a short distance at right angles to the trail and lie in wait until the hounds pass them, then follow behind. The wolves being chased slow down allowing the dogs to overtake them. Then comes the massacre, for being attacked on both front and rear by overwhelming numbers and with no way left open to run, they are slashed to pieces and eaten.

Charlie Allen, who is a past master in the art of handling dogs, was put in charge of the "drive", and when he found their spoor, he unleashed the hounds who immediately jumped the pack, and the chase was on.

One wolf sped out by Fred Allen who took a quick shot which either missed or slightly wounded it. At any rate, the wolf kept running at high speed in the direction of Herman Head's stand and, in the meantime, two more wolves joined in with it. When the trio passed his post at short distance, he downed two of them cold with blasts of buckshot and took a chance shot at the third which was at the time at long range.

The remaining wolf that had escaped the blasts of two standers, Jack and Charley Allen who together had fired at him five times, apparently had a "charmed" life and kept going with the hounds in hot pursuit. Charlie Allen and Jack Coon followed the chase, and the hounds soon stopped running and began to bay. They had cornered old lobo in the backwater.

It was almost certain now that he had been wounded for it is not wolf nature to stop running unless he has the assistance of a large pack. Charley Allen gave him the "coup de grace" with a blast of buckshot, lest the wolf might slash his prize hounds.

Those participating in the chase were Herman Head, Bing Sanders, Fred and Charlie Allen, Jack Coon, Roy Graham, Baker Collins Clyde Warwick and Fred Clarkston.

When the morning hunt was over, the participants held a huddle and concluded that the wily old boss wolf had outsmarted them, but they are determined to get him in their gun sights on another day.

'Catcher In Rye' Opens In Russia

MOSCOW (AP) — A dramatization of American author J.D. Salinger's novel, "The Catcher in the Rye," opened Saturday night at the Moscow Theater of Satire before a capacity audience.

All performances have been sold out until the end of April, the official news agency Tass reported.

Tass identified the author of the Russian-language stage version of the popular novel as Alexandria Kharlamova. It said the author and director Alexander Shatrin "faithfully follow the text of the novel and retain almost unchanged its composition, the characterization of the main personages, the peculiarity of their speech and the author's style."

In the stage version, "The Catcher in the Rye" is a psychological drama dealing with the problem of moral aloneness of young people who find no points of contact with the adult world, Tass said.

USE IS QUESTIONED

Weapons Seized On West Coast

INDUSTRY, Calif. (AP) — Machine pistols and records of their manufacture seized at an arms factory were held for examination Saturday by federal, state and local authorities who believe they were destined for use by extremist groups. The plant operator denies it.

The 373 weapons, 100,000 rounds of ammunition and three silencers used for testing the guns were confiscated at the Erquiaga Arms Co. on Friday by 30 officers armed with a search warrant.

Said State Atty. Gen. Thomas Lynch: "Speed was necessary in this raid, since our office has definite information that some of these illegal weapons were intended for private armies in California."

A spokesman for the attorney general's office later identified the "private armies" as — among others — the Minutemen and Rangers.

"This talk of our making guns for private armies is a lot of hogwash," Lowell Knudson, head of Knudson Mfg. Co. and operator of the Erquiaga Arms Co. told newsmen.

"We have a purchase order from the Costa Rica government for 500 automatic machine pistols, which we are filling.

"We are licensed by the Internal Revenue Service and working with the approval of the U.S. State Department in making these machine guns, which we understand are to be used by Cubans in fighting Castro," Knudson said.

Sheriff's Lt. E. D. Villines, who led the raid, acknowledged that the firm has a federal license to make the weapons, but said it lacks state authorization for manufacture, possession, sale or transportation of such weapons. On these grounds, Citrus Municipal Court issued the search warrant.

"It has never been my understanding that the state had anything to do with this business," said Knudson.

Four employes were in the plant at the time of the raid. None were arrested.

The guns, which agents said were in racks when they entered the plant, are about 20 inches long, and are fitted with a pistol grip instead of a stock. Agents said they appear to fire a 9mm cartridge at the rate of 35 rounds per second.

A spokesman for the attorney geneal's office said the Minutemen and Rangers, for whom they believe the arms were destined, are similar groups — volunteer armies who train in guerrilla warfare.

Accused Robber Held Under Bail Set At $100,000

ROME, Ga. (AP) — An accused bank robber who led police on a wild four-hour, 100-mile-per-hour drive through North Georgia was held Saturday in lieu of $100,000 bond.

James P. Davis, 37, of Chattanooga, Tenn., appeared before U. S. Commissioner Robert J. Swords of Rome. A $50,000 bond was set on a kidnaping charge and $50,000 on a bank robbery charge.

Davis was returned to Chattanooga where a preliminary hearing has been set for next Wednesday.

A quick-thinking Obstetrician, Dr. Robert Demos of Chattanooga disarmed Davis when police cornered the car Friday night. Demos, who had been held hostage with a gun at his head while he drove, jumped out of the car yelling: "Don't kill him. Don't kill him."

Joseph Ponder FBI agent in Atlanta, said officers recovered more than $8,700 taken in the robbery of the Red Bank-White Oak suburban branch of the Hamilton National Bank of Chattanooga.

The doctor said he had driven home after treating a patient, and found another car parked beside his wife's car. "I thought it belong to a friend of either my son or daughter," he said.

New Snowstorm Slams Midwest

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

A new snowstorm belted the Midwest on Saturday, coming on the heels of a bitter cold night of record-breaking temperatures that froze spring right out of the picture throughout the area.

Four inches of new snow piled up in the Minneapolis-St. Paul area in a few hours to make a total of 21 inches on the ground. St. Cloud, Minn., added three inches to 29 inches already on the ground and Wahpeton, N.D., on the Minnesota border recorded seven inches of new snow.

No blocked highways were reported in Minnesota, but rural roads were clogged. In the northern section of South Dakota one to five inches of new snow warnings ranged from Minnesota and the Dakotas into central and northern Wisconsin.

Long-standing low temperature records were broken in Michigan, Indiana, Wisconsin and Illinois.

The 7 below zero at Superior (Wis.)-Duluth (Minn.) was the lowest there for any March 27 on record. Also setting a new mark for the date — all at 2 above zero — were Madison, Milwaukee and Beoit, all in Wisconsin.

O'Hare International Airport on Chicago's Northwest Side recorded a low of 1 below zero. Chicago's official 13 above broke the 92-year-old record of 15 set in 1873. Record lows for the date were set in Lansing, Mich., with 6 below zero and Rocford, Ill., with 2 above.

South Bend, Ind., with 4 above and Fort Wayne, Ind., with 1 above set low temperature records for so late in the season.

Rain and snow spread southward over the Far West into central California and Colorado.

DESPITE THE TALK

Russian Economy Under Same Rule

MOSCOW (AP) — Despite Kremlin talk of emphasizing consumer goods and raising the Soviet standard of living, the men who have made weapons as careers continue to direct the economy.

The chairman of the Supreme National Economic Council whose appointment was announced in Saturday's papers, Vladimir T. Novikov, made his reputation making armaments during World War II.

He succeeded Dmitry F. Ustinov, who was Stalin's appointee to run defense industries when Hitler invaded in 1941. Novikov, then 33, became Ustinov's deputy in 1941.

The changes were decided upon by the Central Committee of the Soviet Communist party and then ratified by the top committee of the Soviet Parliament.

The posts of Leonid I. Brezhnev as party first secretary and Alexei N. Kosygin as premier were unaffected by decisions at the Central Committee's three-day meeting that ended Friday.

Ustinov gave up his rank as a first deputy premier to move into party work. He was named a party secretary and a candidate member of the party's presidium, its key guiding group.

Since the party gives orders to the government, Ustinov apparently will continue to have a large voice in the economy.

The first deputy premier's post went to Kirill T. Mazurov, who was promoted from candidate to full member of the party Presidium.

His background as party head of White Russia suggested to some observers that Mazurov might be primarily concerned with supervising agriculture.

The Central Committee adopted far-reaching proposals of Brezhnev's to increase agricultural incentives and investments in a long-term effort to overcome Soviet farm problems.

The key economic job, however, which coordinates agriculture and industry, is now held by Novikov.

He had been a first deputy premier and chairman of the State Planning Committee from 1960 to 1962, but former Premier Khrushchev then pushed him into less important economic jobs. His return now marks another revival by Brezhnev of a man who apparently fell afoul of Khrushchev.

City Restaurant Group To Hear State President

BILL GARRETT

Bill Garrett of New Orleans, president of the Louisiana Restaurant Association, will address a meeting Monday, April 5 of the Monroe Chapter of the LRA at 7:30 p.m. at the Rendezvous Restaurant.

The topic of his talk is "What's Ahead in 1965."

He will outline the proposed legislation on the minimum wage bill, tax on tips bill, double time for overtime bill and medicare, since these bills will affect everyone in the food service industry.

He will also discuss the plans, programs and activities of the LRA, including the new free drive in and fast food training course which begins here on April 12.

Garrett is a graduate of Centenary College at Shreveport having received his bachelor of science degree in business administration. The LRA president has managed restaurants for Interstate Hosts for the past ten years. At the present time he is general manager of all food service at New Orleans International Airport.

LRA has 726 members with a chapter in every major city in the state.

New officers of the local group will be installed by Garrett at the meeting. They are Ennis G. Davis, president; Bernard C. Head, vice president; and Tony Messina, secretary-treasurer.

Louisiana Tech Engineers Will Select Queen

RUSTON (Special) — Louisiana Tech Engineers' Weekend April 2-3 is in its final stages of planning, with the choosing of a queen and the building of project exhibits as the main preparations yet to be completed.

The engineers' queen will be chosen by the engineering students. Six nominees were selected for the balloting by the various professional organizations on campus.

The six candidates and their sponsors are: Sharon Friday, Shreveport, Society of Petroleum Engineers; Wanda Morris, Haynesville, American Institute of Chemical Engineers; Barbara Norrid, Shreveport, Society of Industrial Engineers; Gladdy Lou Zachry, Minden, Institute of Electrical and Electronics Engineers; Donna Gail Tatum, Dubach, American Society of Civil Engineers, and Gail Searcy, Mooringsport, American Society of Mechanical Engineers.

Approximately 50 students are building displays and projects for the open house. Project competition is scheduled for Saturday, April 3, from 9 a.m. until noon in Bogard Hall.

Each of the six engineering departments will award $10 for the best project in their class and $5 for the runner up.

In addition, the best overall project will receive $25, and the second $15.

The winner of the queen's contest and all project winners will be announced at the Engineers' Ball next Saturday night in the Student Center.

Billboard War To Be Revived

WASHINGTON (AP) — A battle that has been simmering for six years at the state and local level is expected to be joined in Congress again within a few days when President Johnson presents his billboard control bill.

The bill is expected to provide the means for strict control of highway signs along new sections of the interstate highway system.

Roads Bureau officials decline to discuss contents of the bill. However, they noted that Johnson has called for a mandatory measure, which outdoor advertising concerns undoubtedly will oppose.

Present legislation is permissive. It does not directly ban any signs from highways; it provides a bonus equal to one-half of one per cent of the construction cost to any state which agrees to control billboards on the interstate mileage in its state.

The federal government provides 90 per cent of the cost of interstate highways and the bonus raises this to 90½ per cent. The new bill is not expected to include any controls over federal highways which are not part of the interstate system.

Bureau officials regard the present legislation, passed in 1958, as a failure. Some 20 states have entered into agreements with the federal government for billboard control but only seven have qualified for payments. The first payment was made in mid-1963 and the total is less than $400,000.

A bureau official cited a number of exemptions provided by present law which apparently will not be a part of the proposed new legislation.

Any roadway acquired before 1956 is now exempt from state controls. This eliminates control over interstate highways which follow old roadbeds as well as intersections of an interstate highway and an older road.

New Theft Count Added Against Tennis Player

JACKSON, Miss. (AP) — An additional bank robbery charge Saturday accused sports enthusiast Tom Falkenburg of stealing $14,000 from the Madison bank.

The brother of actress Jinx Falkenburg is already jailed on a charge of robbing the Ridgeland branch of the Canton Bank Feb. 25 of $4,048.

Both banks are in Madison County north of here.

Dist. Atty. Bill Waller confirmed Saturday the March 30 Madison robbery charge had been lodged Friday against Falkenburg, 41.

Waller also said the FBI was considering formal charges in the earlier robbery and would present evidence to a federal grand jury which meets in Biloxi next week.

Falkenburg was arrested March 3. He is an amateur tennis champion and also has won awards in golf.

The FBI and the state charged him with the Feb. 25 robbery.

RABBINICAL COLLEGE

School Teaches Ancient Lessons In New Setting

WICKLIFFE, Ohio (AP) — The large room is crowded with boys, clustered in groups and wearing black skull caps or snap-brim hats. From the noise, it seems all 200 of them are talking — loudly.

The apparent disorder would dismay most teachers. But the professor smiles with satisfaction as he goes from group to group, joining in discussion of the lesson from the Torah. He arbitrates disagreements. He offers help.

He does not tell the boys to take their seats, to quiet down, to come to order.

HUBBUB IS ORDER

The hubbub is order for the study halls which are the educational focal point at Telshe Yeshiva, a school teaching ancient lessons in modern setting. It's name Telshe for the city in Lithuania where the rabbinical college was founded 90 years ago; and Yeshiva, the name for a Jewish institution of higher learning.

The college is "the only one of its kind to be transplanted to the United States," says Rabbi Mordecai Gifter, faculty head. When the Nazis began killing teachers and students in the summer of 1941, Telshe Yeshiva left Lithuania. It then had an enrollment of more than 500 and was considered one of the world's finest schools for Jewish studies.

Rabbis Elya Meir and Chaim Mordecai Katz fled through Siberia to Japan and came to America to find a new home for their school. With 10 American boys as students, it was re-established in Cleveland, Ohio.

Other rabbis fled to the United States via Siberia to join the faculty later.

THRIVED

The Orthodox Jewish institution thrived as a transplant, grew to 400 students, and moved from Cleveland to its present 54-acre setting on a knoll in this Cleveland suburb.

"We offer a full education in the principles of Judaism and the Torah, the Jewish canon law," Rabbi Gifter said. "What the boys use it for is their own prerogative. Not all become rabbis. There are only three other such schools in the country."

Telshe Yeshiva confers about 20 rabbinical degrees a year.

Teaching certificates may be earned by two years of college work. A rabbinical degree requires six years of college work and an examination.

FROM MANY PLACES

The students, mostly from families of laymen, come from all over the United States and from 20 other countries.

The winter term starts in October, after the High Holy Days, Rosh Hashanah and Yom Kippur. The terms runs to Passover in April. After Passover, the summer term begins and continues through the High Holy Days with a month off for vacation.

The two-hour study hall sessions are preparation for lectures on Judaism. Between morning and afternoon study halls, preparatory students have classes in secular subjects such as chemistry. These are taught by part-time teachers from nearby high schools.

The school day starts with a 7:30 a.m. service. The boys put in about 10 hours of study daily, with Saturdays off. Sports and social activities are minimal, but an outdoor swimming pool and a fully equipped gymnasium are available.

Getzel Fried, 17, son of a Bronx, N.Y., tailor, explained: "What I will learn here will guide me in everyday life. I've been here three years and probably will stay for a degree then go into the rabbinate.

"Here at the school you can become very self-sufficient in a short time. When you go home, people look at you with high esteem, because you're supposed to show a better example.

"It gives you a name."

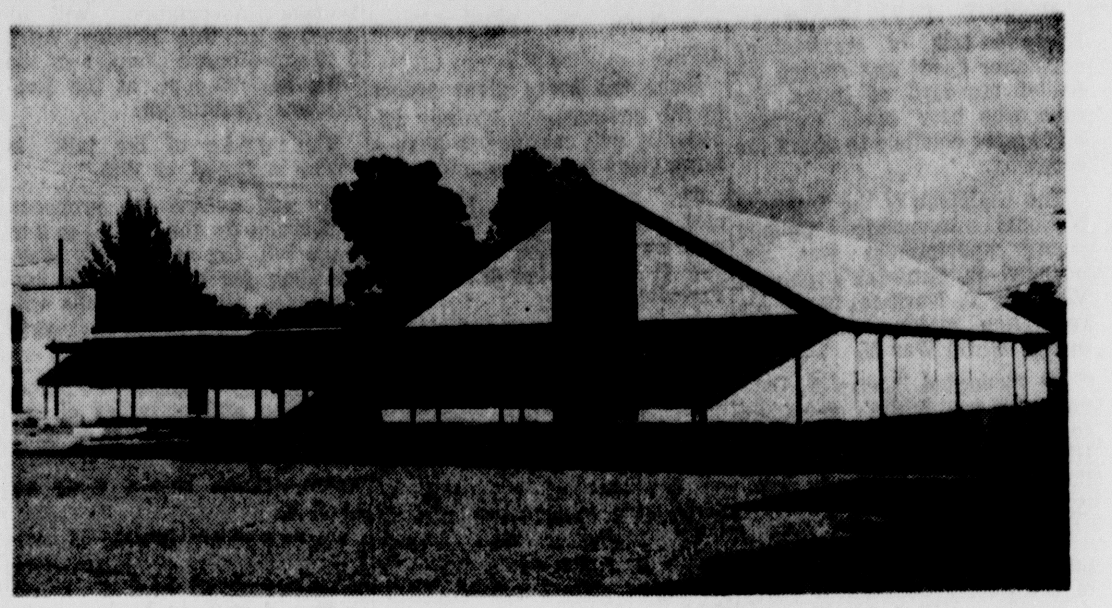
EDGEWOOD BAPTIST

Visitation Program Is Emphasized In Work Of West Monroe Church



Edgewood Baptist Church, 501 Travis St., West Monroe

Special emphasis is placed on visitation in the homes of prospective members at Edgewood Baptist Church, 501 Travis Street, West Monroe.

In describing the church's visitation and enlistment program, the pastor, the Rev. D. E. Wainwright, said, "We feel that this is an absolute imperative."

The main phase of the visitation program is carried out every Monday night, with those taking part assembling at the church around 7 o'clock. Visitation teams are organized into groups of two members each. Bob Baker and Bill Reitzammer are in charge of preparing cards and assigning names of persons to be visited.

The pastor said "We have just recently turned from Thursday to Monday and we have been more successful than previously. We have many people who can't came to take part in visitation on Mondays and they go out on other nights."

The Monday visitations last for about an hour and team members return to the church around 8:15 p.m. for coffee, refreshments, and to make reports on their progress.

MEMBERSHIP

The church which now has about 475 members and property valued at around $225,000, was organized February 6, 1949 in Millsaps School in West Monroe. The organization was under the leadership of the Rev. J. T. Hinkie.

Among ministers assisting in organization of the church were the Rev. A. T. Mitchell and the Rev. Colan P. Coker. Records show that 26 persons transferred their letters to the church and there were two professions of faith.

Three 50-foot lots were purchased for a church site on Travis Street for $1,800. In March of that year a revival meeting was held in a tent pitched on the lots.

In the spring of that year a building was constructed and occupied by the church. Later three additional lots were acquired at the rear of the church building.

The Rev. O. P. Bazer was called to the pastorate in July, 1952. Church membership by that time had progressed to 112, Sunday School enrollment was 88, and Training Union membership was 45. The church budget was $6,000 then, while the budget now amounts to approximately $32,000 a year.

During Rev. Bazer's ministry additional dwellings were purchased and converted into Sunday School facilities, and facilities were remodeled and improved. In 1958 an educational building was constructed at a cost of $50,000.

The Rev. Fred Ory Miller was called to the pastorate in June, 1959. He served for 18 months, during which time church membership continued to increase, and a new brick pastor's home was purchased.

CALL TO PASTORATE

Rev. Wainwright was called to serve the church in April of 1961, and assumed duties there on May 1. On April 15, 1962 a building program was started and a Building Study Committee was appointed within the framework of the diaconate. A 15-member Building Committee was named in June, 1962 to present recommendations.

The result was a new air-conditioned sanctuary with a seating capacity of more than 400, nine additional classrooms, office space, choir room, and library.

Rev. Wainwright his wife and two children, David, 9, and Donna, 10, reside in the parsonage at 109 Tupelo Drive, West Monroe.

Monday will mark the 15th anniversary of Rev. Wainwright's entrance into the ministry. His first pastorate was in Mobile, Ala., his home area. In addition to serving in Alabama and Louisiana, he has served in pastorates in Mississippi. He was pastor of the First Baptist Church of Mer Rouge before coming to his present post.

He has a bachelor of arts degree from Mississippi College, Clinton, Miss. and a bachelor of divinity degree from New Orleans Baptist Theological Seminary.

The pastor, who is 34, served for three years, 1946-49 with the U. S. Army of Occupation in Japan. While there he did mission work among the people in his spare time.

DUTY IN JAPAN

During his tour in Japan, said Rev. Wainwright, "Is where I really became interested in the work of the ministry."

He was discharged from service in October, 1949, and in March, 1950 was licensed to preach. That year he entered college and began preparing for the ministry as well as serving as a student minister. He completed seminary work in 1958. Among his current affiliations is that of vice president of the Board of Trustees of the Louisiana Baptist Children's Home.

The church's minister of music is Tom Wafer, who also is band director at Lee Junior High School in Monroe. Organist is Mrs. Tom Wafer, pianist is Mrs. Don Wainwright; part-time church secretary; Mrs. Roy Boyd; chairman of the deacons Woodrow Carter; Sunday School superintendent, C. W. Statham, and Training Union director, D. E. Walker.

ORCHESTRA PLANNED

Plans are now underway to organize a church orchestra under the direction of the minister of music.

"It will be primarily for the intermediate and young people," said the pastor. "We have lots of talent."

Edgewood Baptist Church is cooperating with other Baptist Churches in the Twin Cities and state areas in pastor-led simultaneous revivals April 4-11.

The church's schedule of activities includes:

Sunday — Sunday School, 9:45 a.m.; worship, 11 a.m.; Training Union, 6 p.m.; worship, 7 p.m. Wednesday, 3:15 p.m., Girls Auxiliary and Sunbeams meet; Monday 6:30 p.m., Royal Ambassadors; Monday and Tuesday two Woman's Missionary Society Circles meet; Wednesday, prayer service at 7:30 p.m., and at 8 p.m. church choir rehearsal.

Since entering its new sanctuary, the church purchased a new organ, and a fund is being built up to purchase 300 new hymnals at a cost of around $550. The fund now has passed the $300 mark, but the books will not be bought until the amount necessary has been raised, said the pastor.

ONE NATION UNDER GOD —Psalm 33:12

"Blessed is the nation whose God is the Lord; and the people whom he hath chosen for his own inheritance."

In the pledge to the flag of the United States of America, the very significant words "One Nation Under God" are used. It was not until June 14, 1954 that the President of the United States signed the act that incorporated the words "Under God" to the pledge. When President Eisinhower signed that act, he made these impressive remarks:

"In this way we are reaffirming the transcendence of religious faith in America's heritage and future. In this way we shall constantly strengthen those spiritual weapons which forever will be our country's most powerful resources in peace and war."

"One Nation Under God"!! Surely all of us could wish that this were a reality in our beloved country rather than a phrase in the pledge to the flag we hold so dear. However, the mere insertion of the words "under God" in our official pledge does not make us a nation under God any more than entering a garage makes one an automobile. One can no more legalize religion than he can legislate morality. But, this is a goal to be reached; It is a dream to be pursued; It is a hopes toward which we work and pray.

THIS IS A DIVINE PRIVILEGE

It is our most precious privilege, both as individuals and as a nation to serve the true and living God. The nature and character of God are such as to invite and command our allegiance and devotion. Furthermore, it is only by communion with him who possesses life in all its fullness, and who is the fountain for all who live that we draw strength for our souls. Nothing short of a real, living, personal God can satisfy the immortal thirst in the soul created in God's image, and that God has been revealed to the world through His Son, Jesus Christ.

The nation whose God is the Lord is the nation of whom God is the defender and shield. "For the Lord is our defense: and the Holy One of Israel is our king." (Psalm 89:18) It is indeed a glorious privilege of the "Nation Under God" to have this God as Divine Protector and Guardian. And just as it would be madness for a soldier to stand in the open field with bullets flying all around, so it would be for us as a nation not to desire and accept the help of God. For God has offered to come to our aid and be to us a present help in time of need if we will only trust and follow Him.

THIS IS A DISTINCT IMPERATIVE

The ancient nation of Judah had long been "One Nation Under God." But they began to drift away from God and all that was holy and good. The Prophet of God passionately pleaded with them to turn from their sins. But, he also issued this warning which is equally applicable to us today: "If ye refuse and rebel, ye shall be devoured with the sword: for the mouth of the Lord hath spoken it." (Isaiah 1:20) Thus we see that it is not optional for us to be "One Nation Under God." It is a pressing, urgent, immediate imperative; imperative because only the righteousness of God's people can avert an unparalleled catastrophe: "Righteousness exhalteth a nation; but sin is a reproach to any people." (Psalm 14:34) It is imperative because only the righteousness which is imputed through faith in Jesus Christ is the great need of the world; imperative because the permanent prosperity and influence of a nation is in proportion only to its national righteousness. This is a distinct imperative because God is our only hope. The Stars and Stripes will be kept in their rightful place only by the righteousness of God's people, and not by dollars and guns, nor by petty politicians and military might.

THERE IS A DISMAL ALTERNATIVE

"The nations that forget God shall be turned into hell." (Psalm 9:17) In the past, nations have tottered and fallen to destruction without God. Let us learn our lesson from them. Let us listen to their ominous voices as they speak loudly and forcefully of the imperative of trusting in God and walking in His paths. Yes, many nations have experienced the tragic consequences of not heeding the call to obey and serve God. And what happens when men will not heed this call? Karl Marx and Joe Stalin happen; Red China, Cuba, and Sodom and Gomorrah are what happen. The question is: "Do we wish to go where they have gone?"

It is high time we were rudely and sharply awakened out of our lethargy and unconcern, and made to be aware of our national ills and shameful sins which are dragging us down into the very pits of hell. If we continue on our present ungodly and reprobate course, there is most certainly to be a special corner reserved in hell for us. For America it could well be "Turn Or Burn." Which shall it be? Only we can answer this question.

But there is always hope. God is the God of second chance. He is a God of mercy and forgiveness. And if we will return to our sins, and place our faith in Jesus Christ as individuals and as a nation, it can be said of us: "There was one nation who indeed were "one Nation Under God."

PARISH RURAL AREAS

Backers Of Fire Protection Plan Cite Main Points

(Editor's Note: This is the third of a series of articles discussing the fire protection bond issue and tax election proposals to provide a Ouachita Parish fire department for rural areas.)

By RICHARD TYLER
World Staff Writer

Backers of the bond and tax proposal for rural fire protection on which voters will decide April 6 appear to base their support on three main points.

Drawn from reports of police jury, fire district, and committee meetings, from talks with jurors and with private individuals who stand to gain or lose by the quality of protection actually provided, the points are these:

1. The protection which could be expected from the two proposed fire stations, plus a volunteer set-up of smaller fire-fighting units, would be adequate, at least for the time being.

2. The cost of providing more stations (the four, for example, that have been frequently mentioned) would be prohibitive and consitute a costly burden, both for individuals and for industry.

3. The risk of rejecting the present two-station plan, felt by a majority of jurors to have the best chance of passing of any alternative proposal, would be too great, in that it would leave the parish totally unprotected.

"In my opinion, having the two fully-equipped stations, in addition to our plan for providing trucks and equipment in areas not quickly reachable by trucks from the stations, will give as good or better protection than the four-station plan," explained Lloyd Coon, ward six.

Coon originally opposed the plan, but successfully promoted a jury resolution to assist in setting up, equipping and training volunteer units, and has become apparently one of its staunchest backers.

Other jurors, among them President T. W. Humphries and ward five's Leslie Hamm, have said the plan would give the best fire protection per dollar spent.

Cost of the four stations, they point out, would have been $300,500 in capital expense for the stations themselves and equipment, compared with $164,200 for the two. In salaries and operating expenses, the comparison would be $167,016 to $91,709. The tax cost, it is seen, would approximately double for four stations.

Among the larger groups to endorse the coming vote is the Ouachita Parish Farm Bureau, which calls the plan a "progressive step."

Bureau President Fred Huenefeld Jr. is even more specific:

"It seems obvious to us that any light industry coming to the parish will need something like this to protect it.

"A lot of the future growth and developed of the parish depends on a good sound fire protection program.

"We believe that the plan to be voted on April 6 is a step in that direction—it's a good start, and we feel it's necessary to crawl before walking," Huenefeld declares.

The bureau president mentioned a new $300,000 gin under construction in north Ouachita Parish on the Sterlington Road. "This would be a very definite benefit since a gin is so high-rated on fire insurance," he said.

As to coverage by the two proposed stations, Huenefeld noted that, "Within a radius of nine miles, the station on Fink's Hideaway Road could cover 80 to 85 per cent of the parish's population east of the river.

"On the west side, the station could cover 80 per cent of the population within a radius of six miles."

Voicing a similar sentiment on the importance of an adequate start, juror Robert Downing, ward 10, notes, "Monroe didn't start with 15 stations, but started with a good nucleus and then branched out.

"I feel we have to start off with what's economically feasible and I feel that this plan is the best thing possible for the least amount of money."

On the subject of an insurance rebate in purchasing second-hand trucks and equipment for volunteer fire-fighters in wards needing extra protection, A. E. Montgomery Jr., chairman of the jury's insurance committee, states such financial help definitely would be forthcoming.

"The parish fire district would qualify for a rebate," he says. "The requirements are that the district have an organized fire department and that it have equipment valued at more than $1,000.

"The state derives a two per cent tax on all fire insurance premiums written in a designated fire district, and this total amount is funneled back into the district in a rebate."

Montgomery says the return to the City of Monroe last year amounted to approximately $8,000, and to approximately $4,000 in West Monroe.

Other external backing for the jury's proposal has come from the West Monroe Chamber of Commerce and from the Monroe Junior Chamber of Commerce. Statements from each labelled the proposition the best alternative considered, both from protection and economic standpoints.

President Humphries had these thoughts on the fire plan:

"The people in all of Ouachita Parish must have reasonable protection against loss of property and life from fire.

"The jurors have all worked diligently and conscientiously since taking office last April to come up with the most reasonable plan possible to submit to the voters.

"The jurors in the last meeting voted unanimously to make every effort, if the tax is passed, to furnish adequate fire-fighting equipment for a ward six volunteer fire-fighting group or for any group from an outlying area which presents a plan of this type. These volunteer groups would be supported by the regular station on each side of the river.

"I feel that combination of the volunteer units plan supplementing the two-station plan at this time would give the police jury something to start with to improve as we feel our way and as rapidly as possible give the people as fine a fire protection as can be had for the money."

Other jurors who have backed the two-station plan in their votes are John Wilhite, ward one, Leland Carpenter, two, M. W. Montgomery, three, John Carter, I. D. Jackson and Arlan Rawls, five, and John Ensminger, 10.

REPORT ON SPACE EFFORTS

With Past Week's Flight, U.S. Gained On Russians

By HOWARD BENEDICT
AP Aerospace Writer

CAPE KENNEDY, Fla. (AP) — With the flight of the "Molly Brown," the United States gained ground on the Russians in the man-in-space race. With Ranger 9, this nation clearly demonstrated its lead in unmanned exploration of the universe.

The pair of spectacular launchings from Cape Kennedy in the past week helped remove some of the sting inflicted by the Soviet feat of March 18 in which two men shot into orbit and one of them became the first man to step outside his capsule and take a stroll in space.

Most U.S. officials concede that the Soviet Union has about a two-year lead in the man-in-space sweepstakes. But they feel that U. S. development of the world's most powerful rocket, billions of dollars worth of new equipment and bolder decisions eventually will enable this nation to come out ahead in the race to the moon.

CONFIDENCE

American confidence is displayed in the openness with which the space agency conducts its programs. Several hundred newsmen from many parts of the world covered the Ranger-Gemini doubleheader. Millions watched on live television.

The public was told it could turn on television sets Wednesday and see Ranger 9's close-up moon pictures as they were transmitted. If the spacecraft had failed, the National Aeronautics and Space Administration would have had egg on its face. But it didn't—and millions of persons had ringside seats to one of history's most dramatic shows.

The openness contrasts with the secrecy which shrouds Soviet space efforts. When astronauts Virgil I. Grissom and John W. Young and their Molly Brown craft missed the landing point by about 60 miles, the world was told almost immediately. When cosmonauts Pavel Belyayev and Alexei Leonov missed their target by about 500 miles and landed in a snowbank last week, Soviet officials didn't even hint about it until two days later.

The Soviet Union has built its space lead mainly because it started several years ahead of the United States to develop mammoth booster rockets capable of lifting heavy payloads.

The American space agency is counting on the huge Saturn 5 rocket to overtake the Russians and eventually beat them to the moon. NASA Administrator James Webb described the Saturn 5 as "very much larger than anything the Russians seem to be building that we know of." Even if the Russians had such a rocket ready to launch, he said, they still would have a long period of development ahead.

space race advance for ams Sunday, March 28 (TA488).

The Saturn 5, which will generate 7.5 million pounds of thrust, is scheduled for its first test launching in 1967.

It is believed the Russians may be content to continue uprating a booster they have been using for years. It presently develops 1.4 million pounds thrust, about three times greater than the Titan 2 that lifted the Molly Brown.

This has led the speculation that the Soviet approach to manned lunar landings will involve the use of several rocket firings to assemble a launching pad in earth orbit. Not as much power is needed above the atmosphere to loft payloads on a lunar voyage.

The United States plans to use a single Saturn 5 to hurl each three-man project Apollo crew toward the moon. This would be less risk than relying on several launchings.

Thus the space stroll by cosmonaut Leonov was an important milestone on the lunar pathway. For the Russians would have to emerge from their craft to assemble an orbiting launch pad. Extra-vehicular excursions also will be necessary on the lunar surface.

But equally important was the three-orbit spin of the Molly Brown in which astronauts Grissom and Young twisted her tail all over the sky in the world's first orbit-shifting manned space flight.

At the Grissom-Young post-flight news conference, Young termed the Soviet achievement "phenomenal, but maneuvering in space is phenomenal, too."

While the Saturn 5 rocket and the Apollo spaceship are growing to maturity in the factories of the nation, the United States is counting on the two-man Gemini programs to perfect the fine techniques necessary for moon flights.

Gemini has four goals. They are: to develop a steerable spacecraft, which Grissom and Young proved last Tuesday; to rendezvous and link up with other orbiting satellites; to study the medical effect of prolonged weightlessness on astronauts, and to perfect excursions from orbiting vehicles.

The next Gemini flight, now scheduled for early June, is planned as a four-day trip by astronauts James A. McDivitt and Edward H. White II.

Astronauts L. Gordon Cooper and Charles Conrad Jr. will take a Gemini craft up for a seven-day jaunt about three months later. This is the length of the first Apollo manned lunar landing and will provide valuable medical data. One Soviet cosmonaut stayed aloft for five days in 1963.

After that will come the first vital rendezvous mission, hopefully late this year.

Major Downtown Transformatio

A far-sighted plan of development for the downtown Monroe area has been formulated by several groups dedicated to the cause.

By FRANCES PHILLIPS
Staff Writer

Downtown Monroe will be transformed into an efficient, modern trade center during the next two decades, through the efforts of a number of its hard-working citizens who have already started on the task.

The Downtown Modernization Program, after more than a year's groundwork, has reached the point where it is virtually assured of approval. This project has come about through the joint efforts of the Commission Council of the City of Monroe, the Monroe City Planning Commission, and the Monroe Chamber of Commerce, working through its Downtown Modernization Committee.

The program calls for a thorough, overall survey of the downtown Monroe business center, plus a study of its relationship to a number of surrounding areas.

Monroe's face will not be changed by the Downtown Plan, but it will serve as a blueprint for guiding the progress of the growing city.

COMPLETION GOAL

The four-step project is estimated to require about 12 to 18 months of work and is scheduled to be completed about July, 1966.

Property owners in the small 18-block DeSiard Center area will bear the cost of the survey, since they are the ones being most affected by the present situation, and the ones that should receive prime benefits from any improvements.

Total cost of the survey is estimated at $60,000, to be furnished by a one per cent ad valorem tax on the assessed property value in this territory.

"This program is dependent on the property owners taking their own responsibility and underwriting the project," commented Jim Williams, manager of the Monroe Chamber of Commerce, and one of the chief workers on the modernization plan.

The Downtown Modernization Committee was formed a little more than a year ago, in March of 1964, and has been hard at work since then.

In addition to Chairman Johnson, the committee is composed of James Harbuck, George Parsons, Ed Hemphill, James D. Sparks, Jack Masur, Joe Amman, Gilbert Faulk, John Neel, George Rorex, Grayson Guthrie, Roy Johns, Robert Downing and Charles Penn.

Selling downtown property owners on the idea of revitalization of the business center was the main objective of the group during this initial period.

SCOPE OF TASK

To get an idea of the scope of this task, workers spent five months in the courthouse checking records to determine the ownership of the property.

The properties were then divided into two study groups — those parcels valued at $50,000 or more, and those worth between $15,000 and $49,000. In the first group, 22 prime owners and-or estates controlled 56 pieces of property, valued at more than $2.5 million. Sixty-seven separate persons and-or estates own the 129 parcels making up the latter division.

"Explaining the full story to all the people about all the parcels of property" was the next step for the committee. Members of the Downtown Modernization group have been contacting all these property owners and meeting with them to discuss their proposal.

A visual aid, a film strip depicting the modernization of 22 other American cities, was used during these sessions to show proprietors how this program has succeeded elsewhere.

Just as soon as each owner was convinced that the modernization plan was the best course of action, he was asked to contribute his share of the cost. "We collected the money as we went," said one official.

FUNDS RECEIVED

So far approximately $25,000 of the total $60,000 has been collected, and the entire amount is expected to be closed out in April.

Naturally, before embarking on the plan, authorities made arrangements to assure its financing. Two escrow funds were set up, designated as the Downtown Modernization Survey Escrow Funds, and placed under two trustees, Grayson Guthrie at Central Savings Bank and Trust Company, and George Rorex at Ouachita National Bank.

The Downtown Modernization Plan will be developed in four main steps: (1) preliminary studies; (2) an economic analysis and space-use study; (3) a downtown design plan; and (4) the proposed action program.

A literal inventory of downtown Monroe will be undertaken in the first step of the project — the preliminary studies.

Prospective economic growth and population increases for the Monroe area will be estimated, in order to give planners an idea of the business and service facilities that will be needed in the future.

A survey of existing conditions in the Central Business District will be taken, with the thought of what part these facilities will play in the development of downtown Monroe.

ECONOMIC ANALYSIS

Recent movements of businesses and professional people away from the downtown area call for an evaluation of these changes. This will be the second step of the program — an economic analysis.

Wholesale establishments, retail businesses and offices have been moving from the Central Business District during the past several years. The extent of these moves, the reasons behind them and whether or not the changes have been satisfactory will be some of the data included in this phase of the study.

Then the role of the downtown area for the future will be decided. The placement of the new Civic Center will be one of the factors in determining this answer, along with the second half of this step — a detailed space-use study

The space and location requirements for general types of retail stores, for offices, for transient accommodations, for parking and for other purposes will be laid out for the "new" downtown Monroe.

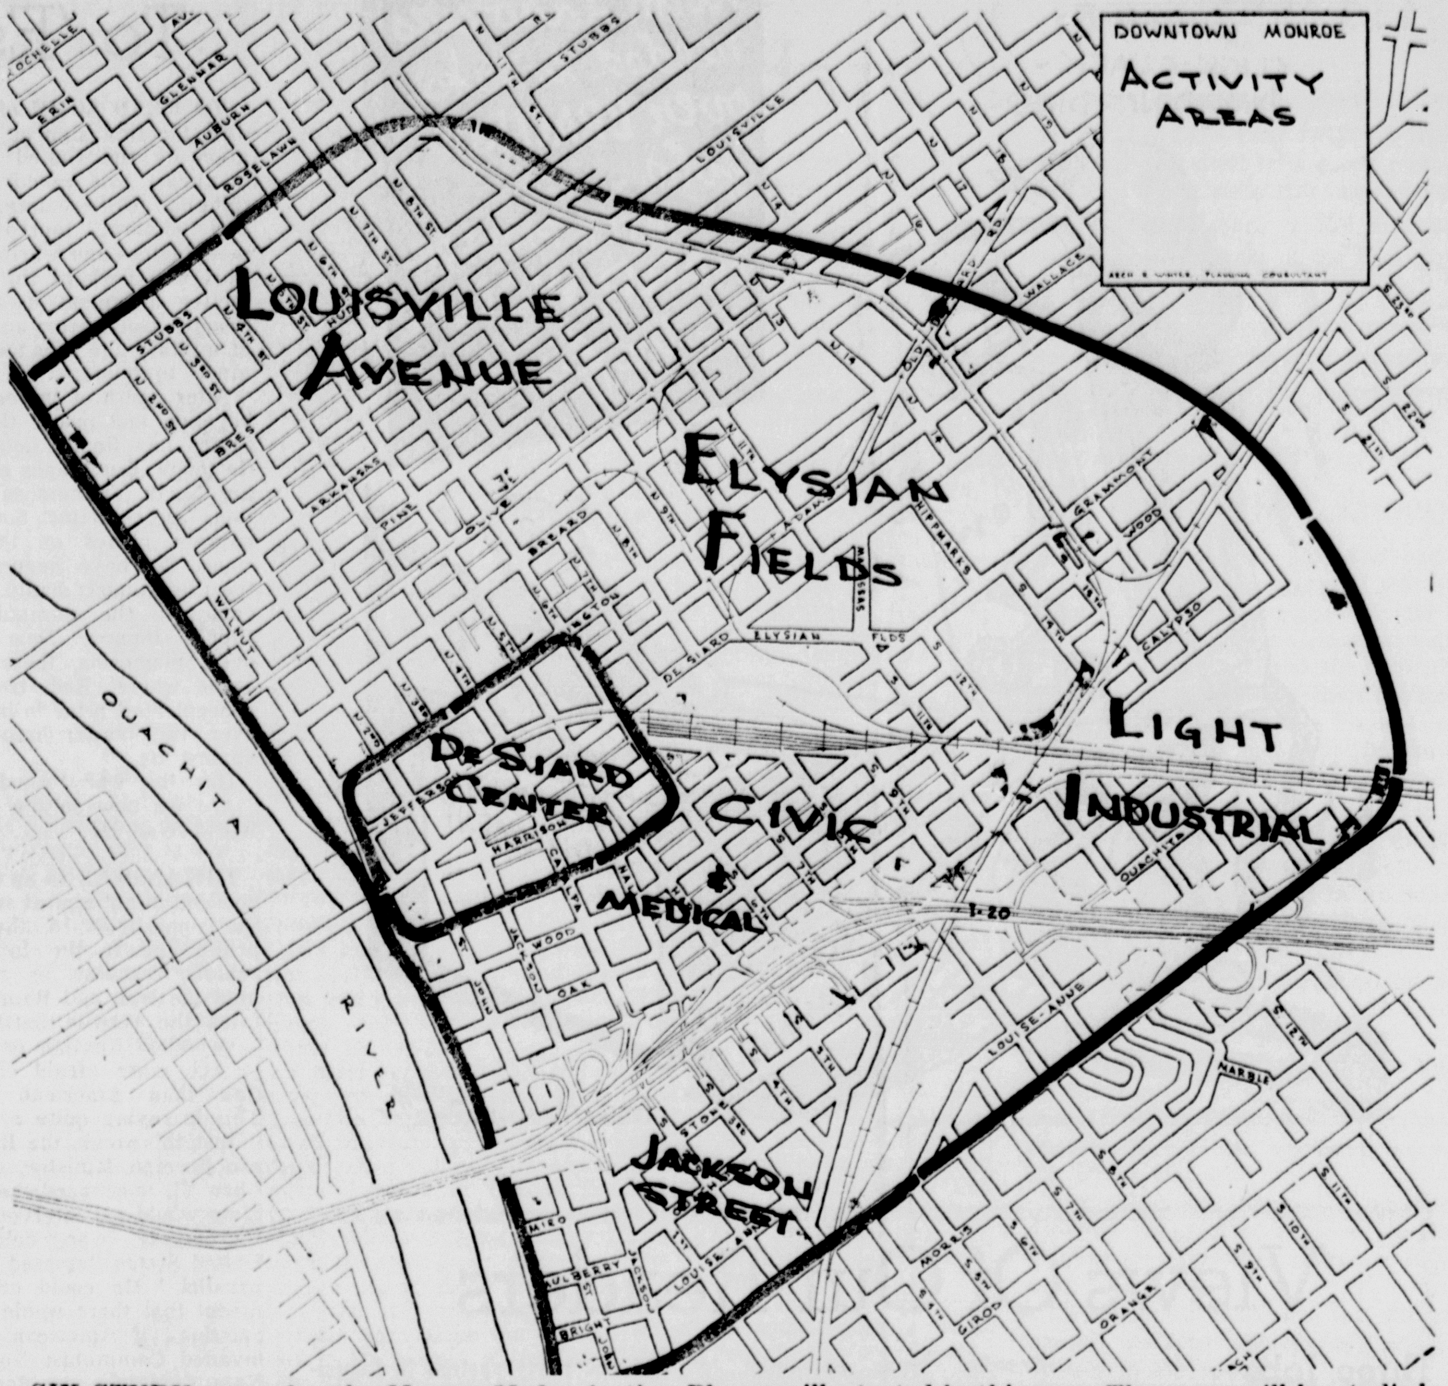
A complete report will be prepared on this phase of the survey, which will continue to deal primarily with the relationship of the DeSiard Center to the 18-parish area.

This report will be a projection of the Monroe community, based on population, employment and income figures, for the next 20 to 25 years.

LAND AREAS, FLOOR SPACE

Included in this report will be a tabulation of land areas and floor space in the DeSiard Center, both at present and predicted for the future. Facilities will be broken down into the following categories: retail trade, offices, services and others, wholesale and manufacturing, hotel and conventions, housing and parking.

All data gathered in this phase of the study will be compiled for use as a foundation on which to base the design plan.



SIX STUDY areas for the Monroe Modernization Plan are illustrated in this map. The areas will be studied separately, but the main emphasis will be concentrated on the 18 blocks of the DeSiard Center, and the relationship of the other sections to this downtown territory. Property owners in the small DeSiard Center area are being asked to contribute a one per cent ad valorem property assessment tax to finance the $60,000 survey. The Elysian Fields and Light Industrial areas will be considered for industrial purposes and how they can tie in to the DeSiard Center. The Louisville Avenue and Jackson Street areas will receive special study to determine how they can be used and related to the main business section. The construction of the new civic and government center, plus the hospital facilities, will create a civic and medical area that will also be tied in with the DeSiard Center. Surrounding the entire mile-square area is a line that indicates a proposed Downtown Loop Parkway that will also be taken under consideration in the survey.

SAMPLE LAYOUTS for a special display chart on the Downtown Monroe Modernization Program are explained by George Parsons, right, Monroe Planning Director. Jim Williams, left, manager of the Monroe Chamber of Commerce, helps outline the plans to R. C. Sparks, center, a DeSiard Street property owner. Williams has been one of the primary leaders of the program since its beginning more than a year ago. The explanatory display, when completed, will be exhibited in a public place to help the general public become better informed on the modernization program. (Staff Photo by John Fogleman)

Downtown design for the future will be the third step of the program. Beginning with the Monroe Master Plan, a new design for downtown will be developed and will be incorporated into a scale model of the Central Business District as called for by the modernization survey.

This overall plan will include the areas of activities, vehicular circulation, parking and amenities.

The activities, or land use, section will deal with the recommended arrangement of retail, office, wholesale, government and other establishments.

TRAFFIC MOVEMENT

In the vehicular circulation portion of the plan, an efficient pattern of traffic movement will be drawn, tied in with the city's major arterial system and with off-street parking facilities. Service movements will be worked out to minimize conflict between service or merchandise-handling vehicles and passenger traffic. Bus routes, terminals and loading stations will also be related to the arrangement of downtown activities and downtown traffic. Pedestrian circulation is another factor that will be incorporated into this section of the study.

Locations and capacities of off-street parking facilities, both lots and garages, in supplying present needs and supporting future vehicles will be related to access routes and downtown destinations.

The downtown "extras" will also be studied to give Monroe a more attractive atmosphere. These will include such things as coordinated building design, sign regulation and landscaping.

The possibility and desirability of a mall-type development will also be investigated.

The action program, the fourth and final step of the downtown modernization plan, will outline proposed activity to be taken in the DeSiard Center by both public and private agencies. This program does not call for any actual changes; it lists suggestions and recommendations.

Planning Director Parsons defined the action program as "an outline by priority for the projects that should be accomplished to carry out the design plan." The program will point out improvements to be accomplished, in increments of five years, over a 20-to-25 year period.

The project outline will be divided into two parts — those requiring public agency action and those involving private investment. Public improvements, such as street widening or park development, will be scheduled for construction under a municipal program to be worked out with the Monroe Commission-Council. The action program will also suggest private developments justified by the economic analysis, and their execution will depend on private enterprise.

Working hand-in-hand with the modernization committee on this project have been the Monroe Planning Commission, who have already begun the preliminary studies, and the Monroe Commission-Council.

Under the leadership of Chairman John I. Neel, the Planning Commission has prepared the necessary data and materials for explanation of the program throughout its initial stages. Other commission members in office during the start of the project were O. C. Roddey, vice chairman; Cotham Haddad, secretary; H. L. Rosenhein, Mrs. Wilson Ewing, James W. Parkerson, Otis L. Johnson, James Ussery, and Mrs. A. D. Tisdale.

City officials have also given their full backing to the plan to revitalize the downtown sector. Working along with the Chamber committee and Planning Commission are Mayor W. L. "Jack" Howard, Commissioner of Finance and Utilities H. W. McSherry, and Commissioner of Streets W. D. H. Rodriguez.

MANY MEETINGS

According to Planning Commission Chairman Neel, the full approval of the project by property owners will not end their participation in the survey. Meetings will be held throughout the time the plan is being compiled to report the progress to date and give owners an opportunity to learn about the work and offer suggestions.

Committee Chairman Johnson, who is also a downtown property owner, termed the downtown modernization program an "absolute necessity." "This study is a must if Monroe is going to remain the hub center for the northeast Louisiana shopping area," he said. "We have to bring the downtown up to date and give the people what they are looking for."

"The new super highways around Monroe can be a valuable asset if we take advantage of them," he continued, "but they could just as easily be detrimental if we sit and do nothing. Other towns are getting closer and closer.

"Monroe depends tremendously on its trade area, and we have a good trade area," he added. "Monroe is the hub center for about a 75-mile radius."

"This program is not designed to fight the shopping centers," he explained. "Shopping centers are necessary and they have their place, but a city has to have a good downtown business area.

"The committee's work in initiating the downtown modernization program is about 70 per cent finished," Johnson said. "So far we have had 100 per cent cooperation from the property owners we have met with. Not one person has turned down the proposal."

"It is apparent to even the casual observer that something has to be done to revitalize downtown Monroe," said Mayor Howard. "This modernization plan is a pattern that many other cities have been following.

"Such a plan is absolutely necessary before any appreciable work can commence in renovating downtown Monroe, but the plan in itself will accomplish nothing without the property owners' complete support and cooperation in carrying out the program.

"The City of Monroe is anxious to assist in every way possible toward accomplishing the overall aim of giving a new life and a new look to downtown Monroe. This sort of program ties in with the government and civic center which the city is now in the process of constructing.

KEEPING PACE

"If the property owners carry out this modernization program, it should give downtown Monroe a bright new shining face, and eliminate a possible eye-sore that might result in the contrast between the older section of the city and the new civic center."

R. C. Sparks expressed what seemed to be a typical attitude among the property owners, stating that he was "very much in favor of anything that will help downtown Monroe."

"My family has owned land on DeSiard Street for about 100 years, and we are extremely interested in the future of downtown Monroe. Our land has always been prime property, but in recent years the demand for such locations seems to have diminished. However, I believe that this trend has reached its ebb, and that the downtown section cannot go any way but forward in the future.

"I do think that we are badly in need of an aggressive program for downtown Monroe, and I believe that with the proper program and research, the City of Monroe can do what other cities have done in revitalizing the downtown area."

Neel issued the following statement, which best sums up the entire program:

"The Planning Commission has recognized for some time the need for a comprehensive long-range plan for the development of the city's central business district area. It is reasonable to assume that short of a national catastrophe, the northeast Louisiana trade area will continue to grow. Our city is the trade center of this area and the central business district is the heart of the trade center. The growth and planned development of this important core area is vitally necessary if it is to adequately serve the needs of our growing community.

"As the shopping center provides the services for, and indeed often stimulates the development of out-lying areas, a properly developed central business district should do the same for our entire trade area. The growth of a city and its surrounding areas understandably places increasing demands upon the central business core. Without a plan for development to meet projected future requirements, the problem of providing the needs as they develop becomes increasingly more complex and costly and often impossible.

MASTER PLAN

"The City of Monroe's Master Plan, adopted in March of 1960, incorporates a generalized plan for the downtown area. A detailed economic study and a detailed plan are now required in order to develop a definite program of action.

"There are three basic ingredients necessary to produce an imaginative, workable plan and to develop a realistic program of action.

"First, the acknowledgement of downtown property owners that a serious problem exists, and their active interest in working toward solving the problem. Second, a recognition by the local governing body that the growth and development of the central business district is necessary for the general growth and development of the entire community. Third, the services of competent professionals experienced in metropolitan planning.

"It appears that the City of Monroe now has these basic ingredients. If the efforts put forth and the interest shown in the past 12 months are continued by the City Council, the Chamber of Commerce, the Planning Commission and the downtown property owners, a workable plan will be developed. The formulation of a plan is necessarily the first step.

"The carrying out of the plan will occur over a period of several years and will require a continuing effort of both public officials and private enterprise. If the excellent cooperation and interest shown thus far is any indication, an imaginative plan will be formulated and will be carried out. The results will be of great benefit to the entire Monroe Metropolitan and Trade Area."

A Pattern Of 'Non-Violent' Violence

Martin Luther King, Jr. opened his present Alabama campaign January 2 in a Negro church at Selma. He said that eventually he would organize a "non-violent" motorcade to Montgomery. As an afterthought, he said that perhaps it would be well for a half a dozen or a dozen people to walk at the head of the motorcade. Of the "non-violent" plan came blood on the highway and in the streets, a 50-mile federalized march costing taxpayers $400,000, three killings — and new enmities —it is well to look at it now in retrospect.

On March 6 — two months and a score of Alabama demonstrations later — one of King's aides led 600 Negroes, plus a few whites, onto federal highway 80 at Selma. King had slipped off to Atlanta as the "big confrontation" came.

Under orders of Governor Wallace, state troopers stopped the marchers and started prodding them back with the end of billy clubs. A Negro went down, a trooper was kicked in the groin, blood from both races began to flow.

Hours later a white minister from Massachusetts was horribly murdered on a Selma street by white hoodlums with clubs. Previously, following King's first activities, a Negro was shot and killed at Marion, Ala., in a demonstration there as state troopers sought to quell violence. No one seemed to know who fired the shot. Thursday a white woman who left five children and a husband in Detroit to join last week's federalized highway 80 march was killed by a bullet fired into her car as she drove along the highway at night with a Negro youth.

Had the first effort to march on highway 80 on March 6 been unheeded, probably not half a dozen of the 600 trying to take part could have lasted through the first day. No arrangements had been made for food or water or bedding or places to sleep or toilets or medical help if needed. The Negro women mostly were in high heeled shoes. But if Governor Wallace had not stopped this march no one knows what might have happened when the marchers reached the swamp area en route from Selma to Montgomery. There are hoodlums everywhere and the Alabama swamps might have become a setting for crime comparable to the horrible public crimes in New York and Philadelphia subways these days.

King's absence from the halted highway 80 march, plus the lack of equipment for a five-day march, seemed to imply that the Negro leader wanted this first effort to take over the highway on March 6 to be halted by police; that he was counting on this; that he would have been the most frustrated man in the world if there had been no police on the highway.

* * *

King followed his usual so-called "non-violent" pattern in Alabama. Small, mild, peaceful demonstrations; then gradual increase of the size — and the demands — and more and more prodding of Negro and white tempers and emotions; each new step seemingly intended to push someone, somewhere closer and closer to a breaking point; finally, so-called "non - violence" exploding into bloodshed; even murder.

After the bloodshed on highway 80 at Selma and the murder of the minister, Newsweek Magazine — which, like most liberal publications, martyrizes King and damns the south itself as guilty of every mistake a country policeman may make — summed up the two months of "King in Alabama" in this way:

"Paroxysm: For weeks, Martin Luther King had been escalating his Selma vote registration campaign toward the state he calls 'creative tension' — the setting for a paroxysm of segregationist violence that can shock the nation to action."

The National Observer, Washington Weekly Review of International and National Affairs, said editorially:

"Martin Luther King needed in Alabama to dramatize his drive for voting registration, a campaign that had been lagging. What Mr. King really needed was some outrage against Negroes that would heat up tempers among both Negroes and those whites inclined to support the Negro cause."

The quotations are important because — so far as we know — they mark the first time that any of the large national publications have so frankly pointed out that King's purpose in his campaign of demonstrations is to create "the setting for . . . violence that can shock the nation" and to force "some outrage against Negroes that would heat up tempers." In other words, so-called "non-violence" becomes the means of inciting violence, bloodshed, killing.

Truly, at Selma, King got what the two publications quoted say he wanted.

Yet, what was gained by the Negroes that could not have come otherwise in a little more time without blood, or murder, or horror, or tragedy?

As former President Harry S. Truman told eight West Berliners visiting him: "The whole thing is silly. They can't accomplish a darned thing. All they want is to attract attention."

* * *

When initial demonstrations have reached a white heat and "some outrage" or "paroxysm of segregationist violence that can shock the nation" is imminent, Martin Luther King usually calls for help. Dozens of white ministers of all denominations always respond to his beckoning finger from all parts of the nation. It was that way in Alabama. A noted eastern Protestant bishop tarried en route just long enough to go on network television at the airport at New York and say: "I am going to go to Alabama to follow Martin Luther King's orders. I'll do whatever he tells me."

But, when demonstrators invaded the White House and the blocked Pennsylvania Avenue alongside of it, an unidentified Roman Catholic priest stepped up to those lying in the street and said, according to a Washington newspaper: "Go home. The only reason you are here is to get publicity: to get your faces on television". And a prominent Episcopal minister in upper New York State publicly urged his son — also an Episcopal minister — not to go to Alabama: to keep out of "publicity seeking demonstrations." But the son went.

A Negro minister in Detroit told Negro pickets to "go home. Quit trying to publicize yourself." They did not go.

* * *

In a speech on St. Patrick's Day, as blood flowed at Selma, Archbishop Thomas J. Toolen of the Roman Catholic Mobile, Birmingham diocese publicly charged that Martin Luther King "is trying to divide our people." He said that "a great injustice is being done to the state of Alabama." He especially criticized King for taking children away from their classes—publicly calling on them to leave school—at both Selma and Montgomery to join demonstrations.

The Archbishop said that he had no authority over 200 Roman Catholic priests and nuns who came to Alabama from other states, but that he would not have permitted priests or nuns from his diocese to join such demonstrations in other states. He continued:

"We (of Alabama) are pilloried before the world as savages. No credit is given to people for trying to solve the question. Let us be sensible. We know that all men, regardless of race or color, are made after the image of God, we know that all are redeemed by the blood of Jesus Christ. All citizens are entitled to equal rights and privileges under the constitution. But these problems must be solved in a lawful way.

"There are crazy people on both sides."

Rabbi Richard L. Rubenstein, a chaplin at the University of Pittsburgh, led 130 students to Montgomery. He brought his students right back to Pittsburgh and told a student assembly that they had been "lied to" by Negro demonstration leaders in Alabama.

All they wanted, he said, "was our bodies — our dead bodies."

Rabbi Rubenstein made it clear that, in his opinion, whites were wanted in Alabama demonstrations as a front and as physical protection for Negroes. (When the number of Selma-Montgomery marchers had to be reduced to 300 last Wednesday, Negroes began shouting to "send the whites home," but Negro leaders said the whites must be kept on the march as "our protection." To some it seemed as if that was the only reason the whites were wanted.)

While these ministerial protests are only a pitiful few they are the first to be voiced in any number by the ministers in a manner to gain some national attention. That is their importance.

* * *

King says demonstrations will go on until Negroes "have all their rights everywhere." Spring college vacations — and summer — will supply new Negro and white manpower from colleges. When the voting rights bill becomes law, more laws will be demanded.

King has listed such future Negro demands as abolition of Negro poverty — steps toward "land reform" — subsidized Negro housing, job quotas for Negroes in all employment. Presumably, the pattern will be the same as now and in the past "non-violent" steady increase in prodding of people's emotions and tempers until there is "a setting for paroxysm of segregationist violence" as Newsweek says: "Heat up tempers among both Negroes and white" as the National Observer says.

Three Jobs

Baton Rouge, La.

To the Editor:

I have lived in Louisiana all my life, have voted Democrat 99 per cent of the time; and also backed John McKeithen for Governor. But when you see one Edmund Reggie, City Judge at Crowley, being appointed to three different jobs; besides being Ciyt Judge —

First: Director of State Department of Public Welfare

Second: Member of the State Mineral Board

Third: Attorney for the State Vehicle License Division — you know something is wrong with the one party system in Louisiana.

Also when you see your insurance rates and telephone rates lead the nation, when we are fourth in the nation in taxation, when we are unable to bring our teachers raise up to the national average without adding more taxes, when the people who are working under Civil Service cannot get their just promotions without some political pull or be personally acquainted in some way or another with some department head; it is time that the clear thinking people of this state should start looking toward other sources to solve our problems.

Next Four Years

Fort Worth, Texas

To the Editor:

The Great Society has now been launched and the Statists assure us they will soon remove the last roadblock on the way to Utopia — Namely, poverty. Those of the freedom philosophy, however, are less than optimistic. I certainly do not claim to be a prophet, but I would venture to predict the following for the next 4 years of the Great Society:

Medicare will be passed by Congress.

We will be out of Viet Nam by January, 1966. Before we leave, a Communist Coalition Government will sit in Saigon.

J. Edgar Hoover will no longer be director of the FBI.

Communist China will be a member of the United Nations.

Section 14(b) of the Taft-Hartley act — the right to work provision — will be repealed.

At least one, and probably 2 or 3 summit meetings will be held between LBJ and the Kremlin Dictator(s).

The present dimes, quarters and half-dollars will be declared worth respectively, 20 cents, 50 cents and $1.00 and new coins of the same size and silver content as the present dimes, quarters and halves will be minted with the new values (20 cents, 50 cents and $1.00) engraved thereon, or new dimes, quarters and half - dollars will be 90 per cent nickel and 10 per cent copper, the same composition as the present 5 cent piece, or both.

The Congo will have either a Communist or a Communist Coalition Government. Moise Tshombe will be dead or in exile.

Our funded national debt will exceed 350 billion dollars.

Malaysia will fall to Dictator Sukarno.

Federal Aid to elementary education will pass Congress.

Guantanamo will no longer be a U. S. Naval base.

The dollar will be worth less than 40 cents of the 1939 dollar.

The total number of TFX's to be manufactured will be set at less than 400. No new major defense airplanes will be developed.

The amount of gold required to back our currency will be reduced by Congress from the present 25 per cent to 15 per cent or less.

Chronic Anxiety Besieges People

WHAT WILL historians call the age we live in? The Age of Big Missiles? The Age of Antibiotics and Other Wonder Drugs? The Age of the Computer? Name it and your guess is as likely to be as prophetic as mine. I agree with those who have already tabbed it as The Age of Anxiety.

It is admitted that we are creatures of heredity and environment. Which is more important, I do not intend to go into that now. Nevertheless, who will disagree that each and every one of us is consciously or subconsciously affected by the Bomb? The fear of it surrounds us; it infiltrates our lives.

Mrs. S. writes:

DEAR DR. STEINCROHN: Suddenly I'm scared. What I read in the papers scares me. The radio scares me. TV scares me. What people say scares me. It seems that everybody is acting as if it isn't long before there won't be a human being left on earth. It keeps me awake nights. What to do?—Mrs. S. (Scaredy Cat)

Comment: I don't know Mrs. S. She may be rich or poor; healthy or ill; happily married or a widow. She may be childless, or disheartened about the future of a large brood. Nobody will disagree that, for her, this is the age of anxiety.

But human beings have always lived in anxiety. I'm sure people were anxious during the French Revolution; during the American Revolutionary War; during our Civil War; during our two World Wars; during the great world-wide smallpox epidemics and malaria maelstroms which wiped out more than wars.

SUPPOSE WE GIVE UP

AS FOR THE potentialities for destruction which lie in the Bomb: who can deny them? But, Mrs. S., what would even be more devastating is a sweep of acute anxiety which would engulf every human being. Suppose we all surrendered to fear and squirming, and just lay down to die. Suppose we allowed the possibility to kill us rather than the actuality?

RALPH DE TOLEDANO

Reds Seem Afraid To 'Escalate' War

TO READ SOME of the pundits, the first sign of determination by the United States in Southeast Asia would cause the fighting to "escalate." Words like "victory," moreover, were meaningless and warmongering. This was perhaps the most effective argument used against Senator Goldwater, and parents of military-age sons took it very much to heart.

After years of incredible provocation and insult, the United States has finally gotten a little tough. Our planes are bombing North Vietnamese installations or escorting South Vietnamese planes on their missions. We have begun to hurt the Communists badly where it counts — the ammunition and supply dumps. Now we are even plastering those staging areas where Red troops are concentrated prior to being sent over the border into combat against us.

Has the war "escalated"?

Are we now on the verge of World War III?

THE ANSWER IS an emphatic no! You might almost say, "Just the opposite." In the public prints and in the Intelligence reports reaching us from behind the Iron and Bamboo Curtains, the word is that the Reds — whether Russian or Chinese — are more afraid of escalation than American pundits. This is saying quite a lot.

Just this week, the Red Chinese Foreign Minister, Comrade Chen Yi, announced that his regime would not intervene in the Vietnamese war unless the United States "crossed the 17th parallel." He could only have meant that there would be "escalation" if American infantry invaded Communist North Viet Nam. Certainly, our planes have been crossing the 17th parallel repeatedly in the bombing runs.

Obviously, Comrade Chen was not trying to fool anyone, with the possible exception of the people at home. His statement was, in fact, so pacific — so different from the former bellicosity of Chinese Communist utterances — that it startled diplomatic observers here in Washington. The consensus here was that the Chinese Reds were letting the world know that they had no stomach for military adventures against the United States, that they were drawing the line beyond which they would be compelled to resist in so remote a terrain that it would be meaningless.

AND SO IT IS. All the available information reaching our military and diplomatic planners indicates that the last thing the Communists want at this time is a confrontation with the West. The Red Chinese know that the United States will never become involved in a full-scale infantry war in Asia. But it could, without much risk, make use of its tremendous air and sea power. That kind of muscle is respected. Red China is a country of vast distances and vaster shortages. The attrition on industry of systematic bombing was not as devastating on a highly organized and industrialized country as Nazi Germany, but it would be death to the Chinese mainland economy.

This is only one reason for the attitude of the Reluctant Dragon in Peking and the Kremlin leadership in Moscow. The strategy of the Communists has always been to try anything — missiles in Cuba, the Berlin blockade — and to wait for reaction. If the United States took it lying down, there were always other indignities. If it stood up, the Reds would back down. At present the Soviets are over-extended in their foreign operations, and in trouble at home. The "integrated economy" they planned for Eastern Europe has failed miserably. Agriculture is in trouble. Only the cosmonauts are making it — and not as well as they are telling us.

THE CHINESE REDS couldn't even afford a long-drawn-out war against the badly armed and weakly led Indians. They are certainly not going to be able to take on Uncle Sam. They also know that if hostilities break out, the Chinese Nationalists are not going to sit by. Experts are convinced that even without U. S. military intervention — and only moderate logistical support — the Free Chinese would try to establish a beachhead on the mainland and begin the liberation of their people.

Toughness, therefore, is paying off for us. But there are danger signs. At the State Department and elsewhere in Administration circles, this line is being peddled strenuously: "The policy of strength has been successful. Therefore, this is the time to negotiate the Vietnamese war." If this advice is heeded, then the sacrifices that we have so far made will be meaningless. Who throws down a winning hand?

BARRY GOLDWATER

Space Is Viewed As Battleground

TO SAY 10 YEARS AGO that the air space immediately above us would become the prime battleground of the mid-20th century was unpopular. But it was as realistic then as it is today.

Air power today is the base of any nation's military power. With the news pages and the air waves flooded with pictures of happily grinning U. S. astronauts and an almost festive "race to the moon," it may seem cold blooded to say the same thing about space, but this does not make it any less true.

Russia's latest cosmic triumph, the two-man flight and "space walk," cannot be downgraded. The now popular line that we will still get to the moon first and thus end up the space-race winner is a dangerous delusion.

In the grim world in which we live, balanced on the razor edge of Communist imperialism, the space around us has ceased to be just a romantic road to the moon. In the so-called orbital ranges of a couple of hundred miles above the earth, space is a battleground just as surely as the jungles of Viet Nam.

GUIDED MISSILES are clearly interim weapons. They are relatively slow, clumsy, expensive, temperamental and detectable, although today they are still the finest weapons available. What must be considered here is the word "relatively." Relative to what? Relative to a true space weapon.

Such a weapon, probably a highly maneuverable space glider or satellite and armed with nuclear weapons, could make a guided missile look like a propeller - driven pleasure plane alongside the latest jet.

The guided missile must be launched from a fairly vulnerable pad or from a submarine. It has to gather speed as it heads toward the strastosphere, level off on its trajectory through near space and blazingly reenter the atmosphere as it plummets to its target. Its flight is fantastically swift, but even for the largest missiles it must still be measured in minutes and in thousands of miles.

THE SPACE WEAPON, on the other hand, would hurtle only a couple of hundred miles above the earth's surface in the range of 20,000 miles an hour. The distance for its weapons to a target would be measured in seconds and hundreds of miles. A so-called synchronous satellite would hover endlessly above a target, ready to launch its weapons or explode itself at the command of its owner or at the approach of a defensive missile.

The United States has pretty much withdrawn from the development of space weapons.

There is no assurance whatsoever that the Soviets have done the same. Their general scientific research is heavily influenced and directed by men known to be primarily weapons engineers. And, most particularly, their space program appears aimed at projects in near space (the weaponry area of space) rather than on the long road to the moon. Such flights as the one just completed show a Soviet concentration on manned operations in near space. Other recent tests have shown a concentration on maneuverability in near space. The size of Soviet boosters shows a concentration on heavy orbital vehicles.

In evaluating Soviet space accomplishments, we should never forget that their stated aim remains to conquer the earth. The moon, a Communist might say, can wait.

SUNDAY THOUGHT

The following item, called indispensable, was sent in to us by an unidentified reader:

Sometime, when you're feeling important
Sometime, when your ego is in bloom
Sometime, when you take it for granted
You're the best qualified in the room.
Sometime, when you feel that your going
Would leave an unfillable hole.
Just follow this simple instruction
And see how it humbles your soul.
Take a bucket and fill it with water,
Put your hand in it up to the wrist,
Pull it out, and the hole that's remaining
Is a measure of how you'll be missed.
You may splash all you please when you enter,
You can stir up the water galore,
But stop, and you'll find in a minute
That it looks quite the same as before.
The moral of this quaint example.
Is to do just the best you can;
Be proud of yourself, but remember,
There is NO indispensable man.

THE AMERICAN WAY

Another friend sent in this little bit of truth in jest:

The American Way:
Condemning a naughty movie —
Attending to see if it's as shocking as advertised,
Kicking because the naughty parts have been cut out.

DISCOTHEQUE

We believe we've finally come up with the right definition to the word discotheque — mentioned in this column recently. It seems it is a French word for a place where records are played for dancing, one after another without pause. These establishments are springing up throughout the nation. In California and New York there are literally scores of them. They are cheaper to operate than regular night clubs. You pay a certain price on entering and that's all there is to it.

HOW TRUE

The Florence, South Carolina Morning News came up with this one:

"The headline read: "Two USC students killed, one a promising tackle.' What that says about the overemphasis upon athletics in education is so pointed as to be tragic. Even in death, we give the headlines to athletic prowess. What about that other student? Should he, by inference, be singled out as of lesser consequence simply because he didn't go out for football."

HI, JOE

A political acquaintance sent this in and swears it happened. Knowing this particular politician, he could easily have been him.

"Campaigning at a county fair last fall, a politician ran into a young man named Joe whom he hadn't seen for several years.

"Hi, Joe. Great to see you again. How's your father?"

"I'm sorry to say he died a year ago." The politician expressed his sympathy and proceeded on his rounds, trying to contact as many people as possible.

"About an hour later, he bumped into Joe again. Completely forgetting the earlier conversation, the politician shouted:

" 'Nice to see you again, Joe. How in the world's your father?'

"Joe brought the politician back to reality with this Laconic reply:

" 'He's still dead.' "

BOOK THIEVES

We're sure book thievery is a problem that plagues every library in the country — and up to now the ingenuity of a determined book - stealer has always been a match for the most alert librarian. This is the case no more — in at least one library. Anyone leaving the Joplin, Mo., public library with a concealed book sets off a minor fourth of July celebration.

Over a three - month period, all material in the library — from which 14,000 books valued at $40,000 had been stolen in a five - year period — was treated with a device which deposited a harmless electric charge on the article.

When books are checked out, the charge is removed by a deactivating device at the desk and the books may be carried past two detector posts at the door without incident.

But if the charge has not been removed, a buzzer sounds and a red light blinks at the check - out desk. Then follow certain searching questions.

The cost of renting the equipment is much less than that of hiring a guard, who couldn't detect hidden books anyway.

AMAZING AMERICAN

How true this one is:

The Amazing American — He tosses beer cans out the car window, drops gum wrappers in the gutter, plants auto grave-yards along highways, hides a mountain and meadow with a billboard selling laxatives, then stands up at his civic club meeting and, with a lump in his throat, sings "America, the Beautiful."

GREAT SOCIETY

Frank McDermott, an excellent speaker, and one of the best illustration tellers we know about, sent in one of the Great Society —which possibly has more truth to it than most realize.

Back in 1950, then President Harry Truman predicted that by the year 2,000 the average family income will be around $12,000 a year.

Under the "Great Society" it may come before that. Let's take a look at the average household and see how happy they are — say about the year — 1968.

Junior: "Ma, gimme 2 bucks for an ice cream cone."

Ma: "What did you do with that C note I gave you yesterday?"

Junior: "Ah, Ma. A measley old hundred won't last forever. I paid for my lunch, bought a pack of cigarettes and took Jane to the show. Say, Pa, what's this I found in the garden?"

Pa: "That's an old 1964 Kennedy half dollar. They used them for money before soft - drink machines went to a dollar. A man offered me $12,500 for my car today. Imagine that. I paid $23,400 for it less than two years ago and besides I just put $1,100 worth of new rubber on it. Things are getting bad. A bum asked me for a dollar for a cup of coffee today. I said, 'Listen, fellow, you show me where I can get a cuppa coffee for a buck and we'll both have one."

Ma: "The landlord went up on the rent today. He says he can't rent a four-room house for less than $500 a month with taxes over $3,800 a year."

Pa: "Ye Gods, what is this country coming to. Here I'm slaving 250 days a year for only 50 bucks a day and everybody wants more money. This organization takes $7 and the withholding and social security is $27. I only have one suit, that cheap gaberdine I picked up on sale last year for $598. I had these old $90 shoes half-soled today. Cost me $18. And now the landlord wants more rent. Say, is that a new dress?"

Ma: "It's just a cheap house dress I got at a bargain for $399.98."

IT HAPPENS TO ALL

A heavy series of rains in Texas gave newspaper editors in that state some unusual frontpage news. One small - town newspaper had this headline across the front page:

"Beneficial Rains Drown Seven."

SURELY HE JESTS

Someone in the Internal Revenue Service must have a sense of humor — although I've never ran into one that was over embued with it. Anyway a House subcommittee was told that it should take the average taxpayer only 20 minutes to fill out his income tax return.

An indignant congressman replied that it takes him 20 minutes merely to find his wife's social security number. Other outraged citizens are yet to be heard from, including many who take several days just to get up nerve enough to look at the instructions. . .

PLEASE DON'T

David Sarnoff, board chairman of the Radio Corp. of America, predicts global television audiences of a billion persons within 10 years through the use of communication satellites This is indeed a breathtaking prospect, comments the Knoxville News-Sentinel, adding, "imagine a world in which a billion people at once will be able to watch a rerun of a 1935 Grade B movie."

HATS OFF

We take our hat off to candor of a politician in a Tennessee city who announced his candidacy for reelection in these words:

"My many friends have not prevailed upon me to become a candidate for reelection, and I have not been told that the city needs my services. The truth of the matter is simply this: I want the job again."

LIFE'S INTERESTING SIDE

ONE OF THE REASONS HUSBANDS AND WIVES have so many money quarrels — only about half of the families in America actually make out a budget. . .

NOW THEY tell me. It is statistically easier to cure many forms of cancer than obesity. Psychiatrists now feel that it is healthier for some fat folks to learn to live with their weight rather than go through the emotional ordeal of strict dieting . . .

ACCORDING TO the Catholic Digest magazine, music now is piped into some hospital operating rooms. It suggests as appropriate tunes: "I've Got You Under My Skin," "Mac, the Knife," "Why Not Take All of Me," "Seventy Six Thromboses," "Liver, Come Back to Me," and "Let's Cut the Whole Thing Off."

QUICKIES: Each year 100,000 U. S. children are poisoned by mistaking aspirin for candy. Husbands play tennis usually are more henpecked than those who go bowling. The things women talk about most are clothes, children, gossip and —men . . .

AND IT WAS Dr. Karl Menninger who observed, "Money giving is a very good criterion of a person's mental health. Generous people are rarely mentally ill people."

TWIN CITIES WEEK IN REVIEW

News Abundant; Placement Hard

By RICHARD TYLER
World Staff Writer

Remember the old Laurel and Hardy movies? What comedy buff doesn't?

The cleanest, yet most totally funny comics who ever lived, Stan and Ollie had a standing gag which inevitably found them wedged into doorways as they attempted to enter the same portal simultaneously.

Persons attempting to recap a week of news often encounter the same, or a similar problem. There's a long way to go when one gets going, but what goes first.

TYLER

There are other similarities, reflecting on the capabilities of persons who stick themselves in real or symbolic doorways, that need not be explored.

In a word, "news," last week, was spelled "politics," and covered every level of the subject. Hence the uncertainty over where to begin.

A noted speaker paid a call to review the international situation. The interplay of state and local interests in contrast to those called federal — a euphemism—bubbled to the surface again in the school lunch pool. State matters with local connections included fresh dispatches from a second front in the college fee increase dispute, as well as news from the convention in Shreveport of the Louisiana Municipal Association.

And that's only a sampling. It must, however, be apparent that readers whose preferences combine local and political reports had a gala week.

So much of the teasers. A few of the specifics:

People there are — many in high places — who obviously set great store by the mythical tale of "The Frog Prince." Knowingly or not, that is, they use its construction in forming their concept of foreign relations.

As much was implied Thursday at the noon luncheon meeting of Monroe Rotarians by Thurman Sensing, a Tennessee conservative who is executive vice president of the Southern States Industrial Council.

You know the bit — about the bumpy old frog, victim of a plain case of discrimination in the form of an evil spell, who's actually a handsome prince? A few magic conjure words and "he is — from frog to frugmaster" the boon of true love, and there is one easy step.

But that's only in fairy tales. In the hard realities of international politics, bumpy old frogs remain just so, down to the last wart, regardless of the conjure-words — peace and prosperity, for example.

Sensing, of Nashville, zeroed in on those exact words in a peppery address called "Phony Peace and False Prosperity." In brief, he gave Viet Nam as a perfect example of contemporary peace, despite the attempts of "professional peace - mongers" to paint other pictures. The heralded prosperity in the U.S., he showed, rests on a shaky base — inflation and revenue deficits in 28 of the past 34 years.

Neutralism and coexistence were other words in which the speaker lodged little faith, at least as they apply to world government maneuverings.

Cruising in conservative waters just now, we're reminded of the announcement last week of the coming convention in Monroe of Fifth District Republicans. Several hundred of that affiliation are expected here April 3 for "the largest and most important meeting of its type to be conducted in this area." Top names in the news will attend, among them John Grenier, Alabama Republican chairman, and, until he resigned during the bitter attacks on Dean Burch and Barry Goldwater, executive director of the GOP National Committee. Another visitor, whom we know in our heart is right, will be Louisiana Chairman Charlton Lyons. The Republicans will plan vigorous campaigns for coming shots at the big jobs, right down to precinct organization.

Voting is a two-edged subject these days, in light of the pending push for Mobocracy. Something of a surprise last week was the report which showed a drop during February in Louisiana voter registration of more than 5,000 persons — from 1,195,395 to 1,190,250. No doubt such declines are about to become even rarer. Ouachita Parish registrations stood at 31,577.

By way of diversion, we heard an interesting puzzle posed last week, based on the premise that literacy tests and other qualifications and records are about to go a-glimmering. What's to become of elections where the voter's real property is a factor? (Two are upcoming, in fact — on April 6, parish rural fire protection, and on April 13, city school bonds.) Agencies which use voter forms in maintaining records also may be facing a handicap. Even those people who need facts from voter records to obtain birth certificates could suffer if super-simplified forms are adopted during the current hysteria.

But if all this constitutes a puzzle, so does the attitude of the U.S. Department of Agriculture, with regard to school lunches and supply of surplus commodities for same.

Parish and city school officials were in Baton Rouge Wednesday to get the lowdown from higher-ups in the matter. Apparently, according to Ouachita Supt. Milton Hall, prospects at present for continuation of lunchroom assistance, without undue demands, are good, though the future is as nebulous as was any statement of just what the Health, Education, Welfare Department wanted for its good graces a while back.

For the time being, it seems, Agriculture is satisfied there's no discrimination in distribution of its food, and the groceries and "per lunch" financial stipends probably will keep coming. The local boards, Hall said, will be allowed to continue signing agreements in the program with the State Education Department, rather than with Uncle Federalia.

News confined strictly to local environs also was richly diverse, led perhaps by the area's third, and Twin Cities' second case of meningococcal meningitis of the year. Stricken was 20-year-old David Wayne Smith of West Monroe, hospitalized Tuesday, with the disease being confirmed Wednesday morning. The case joins those of West Monroe High School student Sherry Ann McClain, now released from the hospital, and a little five-year-old Bastrop girl, a fatality.

Local residents were shocked Tuesday by the freak explosion which seriously injured James Herbert Murphy, 21, of Mount Vernon Community. A cabinet maker, he had gone to work in a new home on Arkansas Road when the blast occurred, ripping fixtures, shattering panes, dislodging bricks and damaging the foundation. Murphy sustained severe burns of head, arms, hands and face. He told investigators he recalled lighting a cigarette. Gas leakage was suspected.

Closer to home, the City of Monroe's 45-project 1965 street improvement and construction program enjoyed relatively smooth sailing at a public hearing last week. Strongest objections developed over the proposed paving, at taxpayer expense, of the so-called Forsythe Extension in the Beidenharn Dam area. Property owners were urged to set their case before the Louisiana Highway Departent, maintaining as they did that state traffic is heavy enough to justify putting the roadway in the public system.

The door also was opened for protests against Monroe's proposed ban of parking after June 1 along DeSiard from Ninth to 26th Streets, but apparently because of a "mix-up" the hearing has been rescheduled for a council meeting April 13.

In other news:

Testimony began Thursday in the case of the two youngsters seeking readmittance to Neville High School on a preliminary injunction against enforcement of a school policy prohibiting attendance by married students. Testimony will resume Monday, despite a pending decision on a City School Board contention that the plaintiffs, Charles Pryor Heard and Judy Varnado Heard, have "no right of action" to bring such a suit against the board.

It was noted that of 48,097 vehicles in Ouachita Parish, only 22,194 have received 1965 state safety inspections. Deadline is March 31.

The World In Focus
Spring's Chilly Breath

By John Cale

A WELL-EXECUTED UNITED STATES space feat, our first effort with more than a solo pilot in orbit, held the spotlight last week while still another Ranger photo reconnaissance of the moon's surface sent back some of the best pictures to date of that satellite's surface.

Young - Grissom

Although such accomplishments point onward and upward, possibly toward an actual acceleration of the man-on-the-moon program, there were factors to the contrary also in last week's news.

Bad Enough

DOMESTIC RACIAL UNREST and the political appeasement left in its wake appeared pessimistic enough with both major U. S. political parties reluctant to apply the full meaning of assembly rights — and wrongs, state administration of voter registration, and the rational establishment of law and order as outlined in the Constitution.

But recently retired Air Force General Curtis E. LeMay put his finger on a more specific and immediate danger in a speech to the National Security Industrial Association Thursday.

He warned that Russia with its military space program may be developing space weapons while the United States concentrates its energies on an exploration of the moon's surface. He said Russia, working in this manner, could gain military superiority over the United States.

LeMay also warned that Red China is capable of developing intercontinental missiles with nuclear warheads.

The country that gains military superiority in the future will be the one which has "vision and purpose to capitalize on the promises of technology," he said.

LeMay said that the military, industrial and scientific communities formed an "unofficial but essential alliance," during World War II.

The alliance produced the abundance of weapons which deterred "a giant of a nation" — Russia — and forced it to alter its aggressive course in the postwar years, LeMay said.

He expressed confidence that defense policy makers would expand the American military effort if they see increasing threats to the country.

But he said it was up to military, industrial and scientific leaders as well "to speak out firmly if they feel the danger signs are not being headed."

Another Death

A THIRD DEATH OCCURRED in connection with the Selma-Montgomery, Alabama, demonstrations when a white woman, Mrs. Viola Gregg Liuzzo of Detroit, Michigan, 39, was shot to death in the car she was driving along U. S. Highway 80 near Lowndesboro Thursday night.

Only a few hours earlier, Governor George C. Wallace had said the fact that there were no incidents during the actual 50-mile march from Selma to Montgomery reflected credit on the state.

WALLACE

LeRoy Moton of Selma, 21, a Negro active in arranging transportation for voter-rights marchers, was sitting beside Mrs. Liuzzo on the front seat of the car. They had taken a load of marchers to Selma and were returning for more.

The shooting occurred in a desolate section of Lowndes County on U. S. 80, which was the route of the five-day march.

Moton said he heard a sound like a rock hitting the door of the car and Mrs. Liuzzo slumped over. The car skidded out of control, toppled three posts of a barbed wire fence and came to a stop in a pasture. Moton left the scene and hitchhiked back to Selma.

THE HUSBAND, Anthony Liuzzo, said in Detroit, "She died doing what she believed in and she believed in people, whether they were white, black, Jew or Gentile."

Liuzzo, 51, a business agent for Teamsters Local 247, said he tried to discourage her from going to Selma when she telephoned March 16 from Detroit's Wayne State University where she was studying sociology.

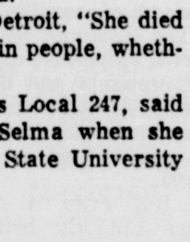
Contrasts

WHEN RACIAL upheaval hit the South during the Kennedy administration, the reaction in high government bureaus was as quick and positive as a normal, knee-jerk reflex. The late President would call an elaborate press conference and the former Attorney General, now Senator Robert Kennedy, would establish a "command post" situation in the Justice Department.

IS POLITICS SOME sort of show wherein the calendar serves as a curtain to divide scenes and players? Are what appeared to be matters of personal concern only a few years ago now to be passed off as someone else's troubles?

Answers to such questions cannot be found in generalizations. But the Washington "command post," itself threatened by demonstrators, lacked the atmosphere of tension created by such incidents as the integration of the Universsty of Mississippi.

IN FACT, ROBERT Kennedy last week was not in New York or Washington. His plans to comb Mt. Kennedy in the Yukon Territory of Canada happened to coincide with the Selma Alabama, march.



KENNEDY

The senator and his party, headed by Mt. Everest climber Jim Whittaker of Seattle, began an assault on the 13,900-foot peak Tuesday. By Wednesday, the eight-man group had reached the summit and planted a small flag as observed by newsmen and expedition officials flying overhead in planes.

Near Home

WHILE ASTRONAUTS Young and Grissom executed new maneuvers in their Gemini capsule, Molly Brown, and Ranger 9 located some apparent landing sites on the moon, Louisiana mayors heard Governor John McKeithen discuss more down-to-earth routes at the Louisiana Municipal Association's 28th annual meeting in Shreveport.

The Governor presented the possibility of toll roads to meet a growing "crisis in highway needs. He said a "comprehensive survey" last year for the highway department indicated that the state agency would need $32 million beyond its present budget in order to catch up on the backlog of needs.

GOVERNOR McKEITHEN said a Shreveport to New Orleans toll road — with Monroe "perhaps" included in the plan — would offer a partial solution to the state's highway problem. He also cited needs in other primary, secondary, and farm to market routes.

ANOTHER VOICE FROM the state, that of U.S. Senator Russell B. Long, spoke out for amendments in the President's proposed voting rights bill. Long, who holds the post of Senate whip, supports the measure as such. But he said Thursday he plans a series of amendments for the bill when it reaches the Senate floor in April.

Long did not spell out the changes he plans to propose. However, he says that he objects to the formula that permits the Justice Department to assign federal registrars in any area in which either voting registrations or actual voting in the general 1954 election was below 50 per cent of the adult population.

In Pittsburgh

IN THE NATION'S steel capital, it appeared that the results of a significant union election might not be known for months.

David J. McDonald, still confident that he has been returned to the office of president of the United Steelworkers union, has labeled as inaccurate a report of his defeat.

The silver-haired union leader strongly denounced a North American Newspaper Alliance dispatch from New York saying USW Secretary-Treasurer I. W. Abel had defeated him by 17,000 votes. The dispatch quoted George Abrams, director of the Honest Ballot Association (HBA) as reporting Abel the winner in the February 9 election.

ACCORDING TO Abrams, Abel had polled 308,645 votes to 291,355 for McDonald. The USW hired the HBA to supervise the vote tabulation which has been in progress since February 22.

McDonald issued a strong statement:

"If Mr. Abrams is correctly quoted, which I doubt, he is a liar. Even if he were correct, and he is not, any release of figures by him would be dishonest. I repeat what I said about a month ago. I am satisfied that the majority of the steelworkers who actually voted, cast their ballots for the McDonald slate."

Castro's Offer

PREMIER FIDEL CASTRO is reportedly training volunteers to join the communist forces in the Vietnamese crisis. His government has also called for more general aid to the Viet Cong in the form of 'men and weapons."

It means little that the present Cuban government can offer only token assistance. What the move does demonstrate is that a war involving any communist bloc country can call for help on a worldwide basis and receive at least something — even from the newer and weaker governments.

Thus far, this has not been the case in the United Nations. Where real trouble has developed, there has usually been debate on which side to help, and in many cases, debate has smothered any action at all.

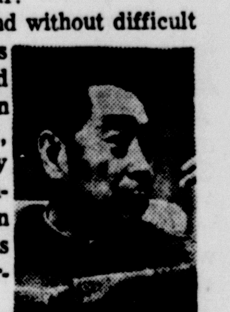
BUT WITH CUBA now offering aid to the Viet Cong—along with Red China and Russia—other new nations will be exposed to a strong propaganda gesture. For some reason, it appears to matter little that the United States is supporting and advising South Viet Nam. A pittance from Castro, however, will be cheered around the world by those boosting communist aggression.

Gas Warfare

MEANWHILE, THE United States was dealt a propaganda assault for the use of tear gas against guerrilla fighters in Viet Nam. Of course, the communist charges made no distinction between anti-riot gases and the poisonous gases ruled out by treaties following World War I.

So the charges match those of "germ warfare" aimed at the United States during the Korean War.

AGAINST THIS position, difficult to defend without difficult technical explanations, the United States also had to listen to taunts from Red China's Premier Chou En-lai last week. In an interview released late in the week, the premier said if the Americans "really want to provoke a wider conflict in southeast Asia, then the Chinese and Russian people will close ranks." He said that is why President Johnson is risking some surprises.



CHOU EN-LAI

This was apparently a warning aimed at the United States and South Vietnamese increased ground and air activity in Viet Nam and surrounding areas.

In reply, President Johnson said that he was ready to "go anywhere at any time and meet with anyone whenever there is promise of progress toward an honorable peace.

JOHNSON SAID he has no evidence so far of Communist readiness to negotiate an acceptable settlement and added: "There may come a change — if we all remain united "

Chou asserted "the American government will never force the South Vietnamese people and the Democratic Republic of Viet Nam (North Viet Nam) into negotiations by intensifying the war."

THE PRESIDENT'S readiness to engage personally in peace talks if his conditions are met was declared in a statement he made to a Cabinet meeting Thursday and subsequently made public. It is being circulated to American embassies abroad and broadcast around the world by the Voice of America.

He defined the purpose of U. S. policy as being to assist South Viet Nam as long as necessary to bring Communist aggression and terrorism under control.

Johnson also seemed to hold out to Communist North Viet Nam the prospect that if it would choose peace with a free and independent South Viet Nam, it might expect U. S. assistance.

HE SAID the United States looks forward to the day when the people and governments of all Southeast Asia will need only economic and social cooperation. He referred to development on programs already under way in South Viet Nam and elsewhere.

Stopping Place

WITH PATHS THROUGH space, up mountains in Canada, on U. S. Highway 80 in Alabama and Shreveport via Monroe to New Orleans in Louisiana all figuring in last week's news, some people were looking for a place to stop on the moon.

Scientists poring over some of the 5,814 photos taken by Ranger 9 say they indicate the moon's crater rims may provide future astronauts with safer landing areas than would crater plains.

This possibility, advanced by scientists at a California Jet Propulsion Laboratory news conference, was based on evidence of possible volcanic activity shown in pictures televised by Ranger 9 Wednesday just before it crashed into the 60-mile-wide crater Alphonsus.

ALPHONSUS, IN a highland area near the center of the face of the moon, is the site of red flashes which some astronomers have interpreted as hot gases escaping through fissures in the lunar crust.

Dr. Gerard P. Kuiper, chief of the scientific team, said many of the thousands of craterlets seen for the first time on Alphonsus' floor were not caused by meteorite impact. "They can only be the result of volcanic activity," he said.

Surprisingly, the smoothest and hardest areas on the moon seem to be crater rims — where there are spots apparently level enough for landings — and ridges found on crater floors, Kuiper said.

KUIPER SAID HE believes the floors of large craters and many of the moon's broad plains are composed of solidified frothy lava which might collapse under the weight of explorers.

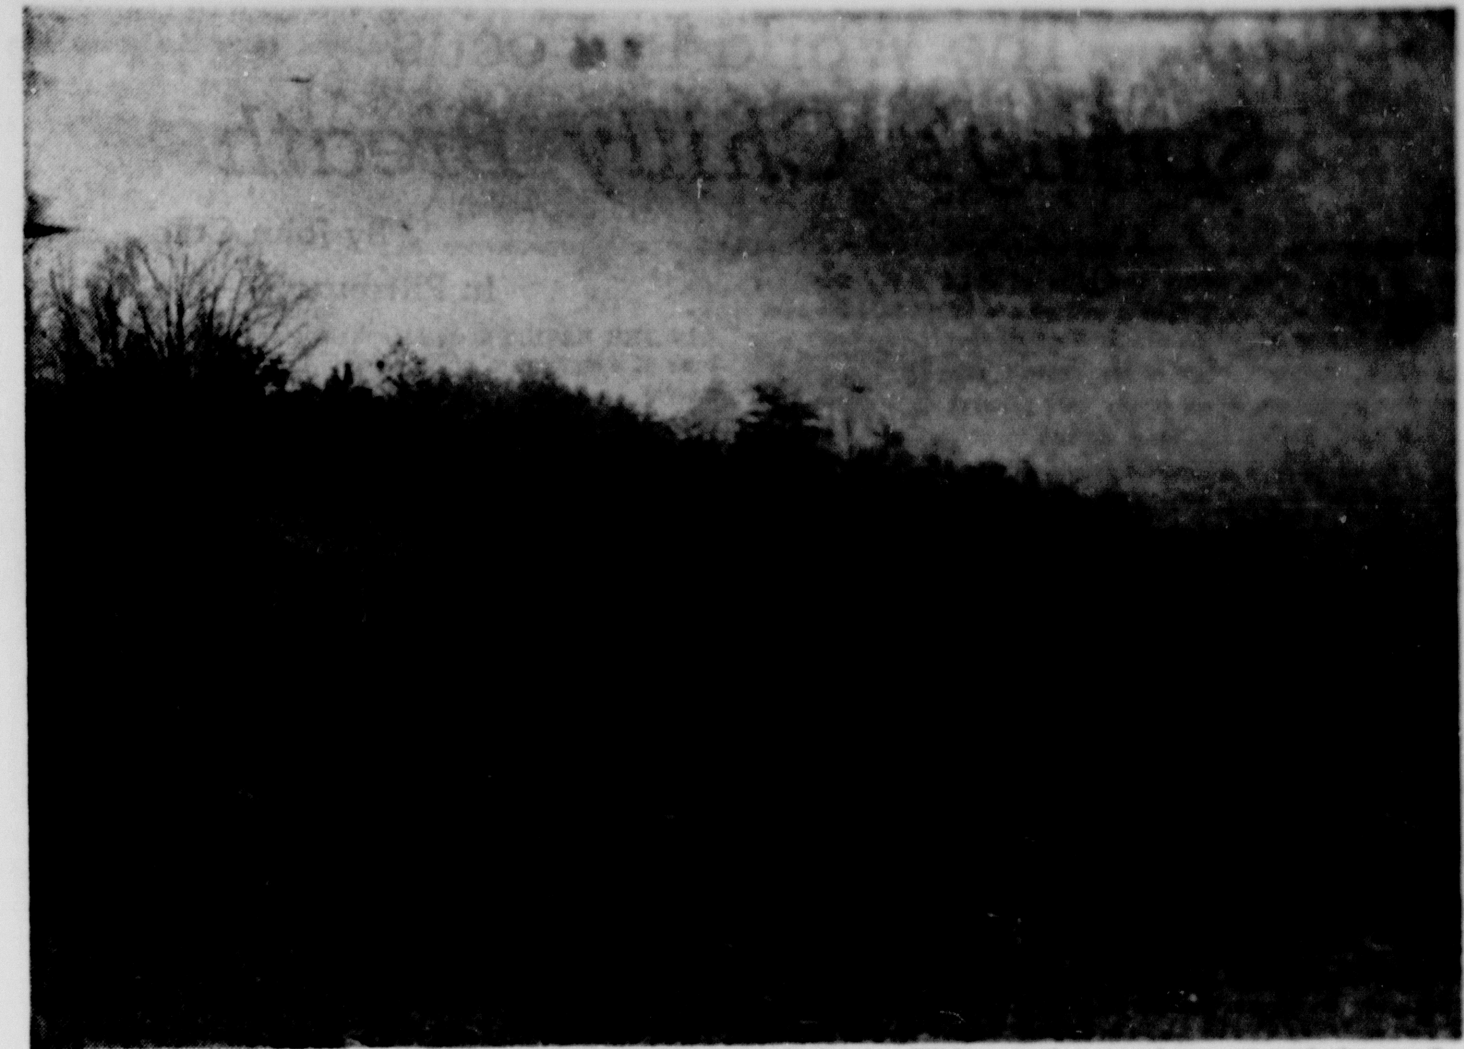
Confirmed

THE SENATE unanimously confirmed President Johnson's nomination of Henry H. Fowler as Treasury secretary succeeding Douglas Dillon.

The appointment of the 56-year-old former undersecretary of the Treasury was speedily approved Thursday as the first order of Senate business.

SENATOR HARRY F. BYRD, D-Va., brought up the nomination of his fellow Virginian, terming it a "fine choice."

Byrd's endorsement of the appointment was echoed by both Republicans and Democrats who paid tribute to Fowler's past service in government.



EARLY MORNING fog hangs in layers between the ridges that surround this eastern Kentucky farm near Hazard. Farming on the steep hillsides in the heart of Appalachia is marginal at best and many farmers must support the luxury of farm living with other jobs. Widespread unemployment and the availability of inexpensive unskilled labor have combined to pressure some small farmers to leave the land for full-time employment elsewhere. (AP Newsfeatures Photo)

Will There Be Hope For The Hopeless?

Anti-Poverty Bill Aims For Change

By BOB COOPER

HAZARD, Ky. (AP) "There is nothing left here for me. It is our children and grandchildren that we have to look out for now."

This assessment of the plight of eastern Kentucky's mountain region was made by a coal miner who has been out of work six years with a bad heart. By eastern Kentucky standards, it is almost wildly optimistic.

Here, despair has become a way of life for many who huddle in dark, drafty shacks tucked in the foothills of the Allegheny Mountains.

There are pockets of prosperity in this land of poverty. Businessmen in Hazard, Pikeville, Paintsville and Prestonburg are doing well. Main streets in those communities reflect this prosperity with a fair percentage of new or remodeled buildings.

One also may find subdivisions of modern brick homes. The residents are state and federal employes, doctors, lawyers, merchants and bankers. A few coal mine operators and businessmen still live in older structures costing as much as $75,000.

But even a casual visitor, traveling the better roads, can feel a sodden hopelessness. Coal dust covers everything. Thousands of gutted automobiles lie beside the roads.

A few minutes away from the main roads, along the muddy ruts that lead for miles up every hollow, existence from day to day is a struggle, never changing and never ending.

Life was never easy in the hill country, but there was a time when a hard life had its rewards. There was a time when men smiled.

But years have passed. The world outside has begun a new era—one that is lost in the lonely hills.

The Appalachian Recovery Act, recently signed into law by President Johnson, promises hope for eastern Kentucky, where 49 counties are affected by the legislation. The heart of the act is a vast highway building program, financed by $840 million in federal money and $360 million from the 11 Appalachian states.

Hopefully, these new roads — nowhere more needed than in eastern Kentucky — will open up a major recreational area for the Eastern Seaboard's cities and stimulate commerce and industry.

The act also provides money and legal authority for a federal-state effort to improve and intelligently exploit Appalachia's natural resources — water, coal, timber and farm land. Regional health centers and vocational schools will be built.

Other provisions cover grants for studies of flood prevention. Periodically, whole towns in eastern Kentucky are inundated by waters that run unchecked through mountains denuded by strip mining. There also are funds for communities too poor to put up matching money for federal programs.

Eastern Kentucky can be divided into two areas: the far southeastern section, where coal once was king, and the rest, which has never had a king at all.

In the country around Hazard, there was a time when all economy, every cent of it, came directly from the coal pits. It was hard work, but it was profitable.

With railroads changing to diesel, and homes to oil or gas, "King Coal" was tottering. With automatic mining machinery he fell. Employment at the mines plummeted.

Those areas not dependent on coal propped their economic lives on unskilled labor. "Why if a man would work, he could earn a little — enough to live," one resident said.

In those days, roads were poor, education was either brief or non-existent. Now the world has become a home of scholars and education here still is brief or non-existent for many.

Some new schools have been built. There are a few modern roads. An industry or two has grown here.

But for the unemployed man who watches his children gulp hungrily at whatever food he gets, it all seems a grim joke.

With each new program that is tried, hope rises again. But each time it does, it rises a little less than the time before — and for many it has dimmed into nothing.

One such program, still in force in many areas here, involves free government surplus food. Another program involves food stamps, for which qualified persons put up a small amount of money to receive a greater amount of stamps that are spendable at regular grocery stores.

The newest and most popular program involves work for unemployed fathers at $1 an hour. They clean roadsides, clear forest land or do other work.

For all of these, application forms must be filled out. For a man who can neither read nor write, this becomes a monumental problem.

One man waited for months before applying for aid. Meantime, he, his wife and seven children lived in a one-room, abandoned railroad station.

A few weeks ago, he was accepted under the unemployed parents program. "It is the first money he's had in years," a friend said.

To be fair, eastern Kentucky is not all poverty. There are many who are happy here. They are not rich — most of them — by the standards of modern society, but they are reasonably well-fed, clothed and housed. But even many of them have little hope for the future.

They key, perhaps is education.

Educators say eastern Kentucky's schools need libraries, laboratories, qualified teachers, better-trained leaders.

Thousands of children here never finish high school. A comparative few enter college, and most never finish.

In a 'cst given to 1,000 students recently, the valedictorians of eastern Kentucky schools placed in the lower 10 per cent, one college administrator said.

A sophomore at the University of Kentucky is the only member of her high school graduating class of 84 who is still in college.

An educator said, "And those who finish college and get advanced degrees never go back to eastern Kentucky. They get the training, then go somewhere else, where they can make more money."

But mountain life is a part of them. Many return to the hills when they retire. These are the fortunate ones.

The thousands of school dropouts find work if they can or just stand and wait for something to turn up. It seldom does.

Along the roads and on street corners in town, they stand in clusters. They swap rumors. They tell what scant news they have heard.

Mostly they just stand — a little bleary eyed — and do nothing.

Scattered through the mountains are a few who have met the area's [illegible] challenge and won.

Ada Combs, who says she is 84 but who is more likely close to 100, is one of them. She lives alone in a log cabin and uses her old age pension to buy what little she needs.

"I grow my own 'taters and vegetables and can them, too," she says. "I even give food to the family across the way. They've got seven kids and don't do anything to provide for them."

There also are those who live in the larger towns and make average livings. There are mine owners who are wealthy. But these make up only a small percentage of the population.

"There are 8,000 people here in Hazard and the county's population is 36,000," a retired miner said. "You know where that other 28,000 is? They're up in the hollows, that's where."

Up in the hollows, there are coal loading camps and mines that once rumbled with activity. Now they are quiet.

Up in the hollows, there are tiny houses that once were freshly painted. Now they are covered with dirt.

Up in the hollows, there are men who once carved a tolerable life from the rugged hills. Now they huddle in dejection.

"The hope for the future?" an unemployed miner repeated the question. "Well, now, I'll tell you the truth. I just don't think there is none."

ADA COMBS, 84, inherited the self-reliance that once was the pride of the Appalachian mountaineer. She buys what she needs with her small old age pension and raises vegetables to supplement it in a small mountainside garden. She still chops her own firewood for cooking and heating the 200-year-old cabin she lives in. (AP Newsfeatures Photo)

THREE-YEAR-OLD Betty Sue Duff stands in the doorway of her home near Hazard, Ky., quietly studying the hand of a gift doll. The curly-haired moppet lives in a one-room cinderblock house with her family of nine persons in an old mining camp on the outskirts of Hazard. Her father works for $1 per hour. (AP Newsfeatures Photo)

SHOULDERS HUNCHED against a driving rain, 17-year-old Walter Archer is a picture of dejection as he walks along a muddy, unpaved road in Blue Grass Hollow, a mining camp near Hazard, Ky. Archer quit school after the eighth grade and has no job. If he follows a pattern already set in this area, he will leave the mountains for one of the midwestern industrial centers to look for unskilled labor in one of the factories. Many who left, however, have returned because they found no market for their limited skills. (AP Newsfeatures Photo)

Who's To Blame For Youth?

By G. K. HODENFIELD
AP Education Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — When adults talk about teen-agers they can recite a string of indictments that seems to have no end.

Kids these days, they say, wantonly destroy things, have early sex experiences, drink, pet, steal, even use dope.

It all adds up to an increase in teen-age immorality, at least in the eyes of adults.

In an effort to find causes, PTA presidents in cities and towns throughout the United States were questioned. The responses were near-unanimous in declaring — adults are at fault.

Typical comments, from a story in the April issue of the PTA Magazine:

"Our society is appallingly sex-saturated. There is an increase in adult immorality. Too many parents are neglecting their children, and trying to buy their love with material things. Our kids are a lot better than we have any right to expect them to be — if we take an honest look at ourselves and our world."

The article exphasized: "If the younger generation is going to the dogs, the PTA presidents said, it's the fault of the adults; if it isn't going to the dogs, its' in spite of the adults."

Sixty per cent of the local PTA presidents responding to the survey said teen-age immorality is increasing in their communities. They mentioned, in this order of frequency: vandalism, teen-age pregnancies, drinking, petting, and thievery.

They also mentioned enough other things — smoking, discourtesy, bad language, lack of respect for elders.

The PTA presidents also were asked, "What do you think contributes most to moral conduct among teen-agers?"

"The answer," said PTA Magazine, "was virtually unanimous: It's what the parents do or don't do that makes the difference.

"Singled out were permissive parents; parents, the gutless wonders; working mothers; parents who push their children into adulthood too soon; and parents who set horrible examples for their children.

"And, of course, the 'sex-saturated society' of adults was blamed, as was violence on TV, shoddy movies, and pornographic books and magazines — all the responsibility of the adult world."

In their indictment of adults, the PTA presidents were echoing charges that experts in the field have been making for years.

Not long ago the scholarly "Journal of the National Association of Women Deans and Counselors" devoted an entire issue to the sex standards of college students.

It noted an increase in premarital intercourse and cited as a major reason: "A society which preaches strict standards of sexual morality, but does not practice what it preaches."

Other studies have shown that between the ages of 5 and 14, the average American child witnesses the violent destruction of 13,000 human beings on television.

"When the good guy wins on television, he does it by beating hell out of the bad guy," says Prof. William C. Kvaraceus, an authority on youth problems.

"Doesn't this prove that violence pays?"

What of last year's youth riots at Daytona Beach, Fla; at Seaside, Ore.; that shambles at Hampton Beach, N.H.? Teen-age narcotics parties in Yonkers, N.Y.? Teen-age drinking in Darien, Conn.

The PTA presidents seemed to be asking why parents allow such things to happen.

"What I think contributes most to moral misconduct among teen-agers is weak parents, who are afraid to say 'no' in fear they will be disliked, and instead say 'yes' and get disrespect and heartache," said a local president in Maricova, Calif.

BASIC TEACHING

"We must go back to teaching that right is right, no matter what 'best friends' may do or think."

"Many parents are too spineless to say 'no,' and one cannot maintain morality to any degree without the ability to say 'no' — whether to one's self or to one's children." (Bridgeton, N.C.)

"Many parents simply don't know how they stand on moral issues. Add to this — all too few parents are willing to insist on setting up standards in their homes, and expecting their children to abide by them." (Berkeley, Calif.)

Sexual immorality? Too many parents are actively promoting it, said many of the PTA presidents, by pushing their children into adulthood before they are ready for it.

"Parents push their teen-agers into adulthood too fast. The youngsters often feel they must drink, smoke and so forth, just as adults do." (Milford, Mich.)

"I believe that the 'growing-up too fast' idea contributes to a lot of teenage immorality. Early dating, wearing of heavy make-up by girls, and moving high school social events down to the junior high level. When the youngsters reach the normal age of dating and mixed parties, this is already 'old stuff' to them, and they are looking for more exciting things to do." (Kansas City, Mo.)

Parents can no longer demand of their children, "Don't do as I do; do as I say," the magazine continues. Too many parents, it said, are setting bad examples for their children.

It cited these responses as typical:

"There is no increase in teen-age immorality, but there is in adult immorality, and the children will follow the example being set for them." (Evans Mills, N.Y.)

"We grownups need to change our behavior before we can expect our teen-agers to improve. One needs only to look at our movies, our heroes, our pursuits and our ambitions to see what we, as society, value. I believe we are going to have to stem the tide of immorality that is sweeping the nation's grownups before we can expect our young people to behave any better." (Reno, Nev.)

"I lived in this same small town as a child, and I can see the difference. It is not the children but the parents who are immoral." (Iowa)

"Some adults even cheat in signing Cub Scout requirement cards (Lompoc, Calif.) "Look at our attitudes about stop signs, tax deductions, speed laws. How can the child help himself?" (Homedale, Idaho.)

And there were harsh words for mother, too — if she is a working mother who doesn't really have to work:

"Too many mothers go to work in order to keep up with the Joneses, and let their children go to pot." (Cleveland, Ohio)

"I think the mother should be home caring for the children and not out working unless the father is unable to work." (Kettle River, Minn.)

"What young people really need is less money and more love and attention from their parents. The mother is needed at home, and shouldn't be working unless it's absolutely necessary." (North Olmstead, Ohio).

"They should realize that the greatest necessity in the life of a child is an available, energetic, happy, loving and loved mother." (Pleasanton, Calif.)

A recent report by Project Talent, which studied 440,000 high school students, reported that, typically, the high school senior boy goes steady and has a car available.

And it was exactly these things that distressed many of the PTA presidents.

One, in Sacramento, Calif., said: "The widespread practice of presenting car keys to youngsters is very probably the greatest single cause of the increase in teen-age problems.

"The car, that bedroom on wheels, takes the youth away from adult supervision and community pressures."

The 40 per cent minority — those who said they do not believe there has been an increase in teenage immorality — were emphatic, the magazine said, in saying it's "mostly a matter of publicity these days."

Some said it was a matter of definition:

"More often than not, a practical joke is considered vandalism" (Youngstown, Ohio) "The definitions of delinquency have been stretched; what was once delinquency, now is not." (Painesville, Ohio).

And there were many, the magazine said, who saw nothing about which to be alarmed.

Business Sets Record ·Pace In First Quarter

NEW YORK (AP) — Business roared through the first quarter of 1965 with hardly a pause.

Businessmen are predicting that there will be little if any easing down the balance of the year.

The steel and automobile industries produced at record rates. Retail sales rolled at a high clip. The stock market climbed to a new peak.

About the only lagging elements were employment and housing starts.

The economy kept moving ahead despite a costly dock strike at East Coast and Gulf ports and heavy snowstorms that hampered industrial production.

Secretary of Commerce John T. Connor said the gross national product — total of all goods and services — will show "one of the largest quarterly increases of the postwar period" in the three months ending March 31.

The biggest postwar increase in the past was $16.8-billion annual rate gain in the third quarter of 1959.

If the current quarter's increase is in that range it would exceed a $650-billion annual rate.

Consumer buying is highlighting the current advance, according to Connor.

"Perhaps the best measure of the increase in the general prosperity of the American people is disposable or after-tax income," he commented. "It is running at about $2,520 annually per capita, up almost 20 per cent in the last four years."

Seven leaders of business and industry, participating in a panel discussion of the economic outlook at a meeting of the National Industrial Conference Board in St. Louis, drew a bright picture of the prospects.

They predicted that more people with more money will buy more products.

Among other things, they envisioned another 8-million-car year in 1965 and an increase in spending on construction to $67.2 billion, a gain of about 3.4 per cent over 1964.

The automobile industry maintained its momentum, building an estimated 213,000 passenger cars during the week against 213,854 the previous week and 165,178 a year ago.

General Motors scheduled Saturday work at eight of 23 plants. Ford worked an extra day at all but one of its 16 plants and Chrysler operated overtime at two of six plants.

The new car sales pace continued to sizzle with 271,885 cars being delivered in the middle 10 days of March. This was 22 per cent above 222,245 sold a year earlier.

The automakers were aiming at a new monthly production record in March. The old mark is 866,791 set last December.

The steel industry last week rang up its third straight weekly production record. It poured 2.78 million tons of steel, up .3 per cent from the previous week.

Users continued to buy whatever steel they could beyond current needs to build stockpiles for use in the event of a strike May 1.

It was estimated in some quarters that major users have accumulated enough of the metal to carry them through a 45-day strike.

The 11 basic steel companies and the United Steelworkers Union of America were bargaining on major issues.

An industry publication, Iron Age, said the atmosphere surrounding the negotiations was "strangely hopeful." And Secretary of Commerce Connor said there is "reasonable expectation" that negotiations can be completed before the May 1 deadline.

The Steelworkers and Continental Can Co. agreed on a contract, ending a strike that began March 1. The pact calls for 45.7-cent-an-hour increase in wages, pensions and fringe benefits over 40 months. The terms are similar to those accepted last week by American Can Co.

Cotton Futures Mostly Lower

NEW YORK (AP)—Domestic cotton futures moved irregularly this week, closing at mostly lower levels.

They were down 5 cents to $2.15 a bale at Friday's close on the New York Cotton Exchange.

Foreign contracts were up 40 cents to off 25 cents a bale.

At the preceding week's close prices had been up $1.25 to $2 a bale for domestic and unchanged to up 75 cents a bale for foreign.

Switching to later contracts early in the period was said to account for some of the weakening in prices. Later, commission house buying with limited offerings helped to erase portions of the declines. However, prices sagged again in the closing session.

Interest in the market continued limited. It had been anticipated that the President's proposal for changes in the cotton support program would have been introduced this week.

Stocks Take Small Loss During Week

NEW YORK (AP)—The stock market last week registered its second small loss in two weeks as the pace of trading fell off a bit.

It was a continuation of very small movements from day to day — except for Friday when stocks "fell off the shelf" in a mild way when Wall Street displayed nervousness over possible developments in Moscow.

It was delayed publication of the Soviet newspaper Izvestia which gave traders the jim-jams over what Russia might or might not do in regard to the situation in Viet Nam.

The result was the worst decline in about six weeks—since the big reprisal raid against North Viet Nam reported Feb. 11. But since the market averages had jogged upward for the first three days of the trading week, the weekly decline was not so great.

Although the Dow Jones industrial average took a loss of 6.68 on Friday, its loss for the week was only 4.13 at 891.66.

On Wednesday, the Dow industrials once more closed above 900 but they sank below that "magic" level Thursday and Friday.

The Associated Press average of 60 stocks last week lost 1.4 at 333.5.

Volume for the week was 25,612,950 shares compared with 26,674,970 the previous week.

Of 1,537 issues traded during the week, losers outnumbered gainers by the wide margin of 812 to 543.

Hopes for spring rally got nowhere. Airlines continued weak. The distraction of events in Selma, Alabama, also was no help. Weekly steel production made a record high for the third straight week.

Bond markets last week appeared to be waiting for a new trend to develop in price movements. Prices generally were mixed. U.S. Treasury bond prices were stronger.

Bond volume for the week totaled a par value of $53,685,000, compared to $53,095,000 the previous week.

Bay Springs Third Test Well Slated

JACKSON, Miss. (AP) — The third test well in the Bay Springs field is to get underway shortly with Shell Oil Co. securing permit for its Alexander No. 1, sec. 25-2n-10e, a 14,000 foot try.

The well is west of the Discovery well and is an offset to the Fender No. 1, sec. 25-2n-10e, currently drilling below 12,800 feet by Shell Oil and Pan American Petroleum Corp.

In Smith County, Pan American installed pumping units at its wildcat, the Sorey No. 1, sec. 27-4n-6e, with indications it will be completed as a discovery. The well swabbed oil at an estimated rate of 200 barrels per day but would not flow after acid and fracture treatments on perforations in the cotton valley zone at 13,808-18 feet.

Also in Smith County, Shell was moving in drilling rig at its wildcat, the Brown No. 1, sec. 24-2n-9e, northwest of the Bay Springs Field. The venture has contract depth of 17,250 feet.

Union Producing Co. rigged up at its Madison County wildcat, the Vandarsdale unit No. 1, sec. 30-12n-5e, northeast of the Pickens Field near the Attala County line. The venture is to be drilled to 11,500 feet to test the Smackover Lime formation.

California Co. drilled below 12,500 feet in its Hinds County wildcat, the Noble No. 1, sec. 13-5n-4w, southeast of Edwards. The venture is to go to 13,500 feet with no shows reported logged at current depth.

Production tests are underway at Callon Petroleum and Harry Hurt No. 21-8, U.S.A. sec. 21-6n-2e, Franklin County wildcat to test commercial worth of oil shows found in the Wilcox Formation. The potential new field find is located northeast of Roxie and logged oil shows at 6,340-47 feet.

Drilling operations are underway at the third well in the recently found Pisgah Field of Rankin County. California Co. is below 2,100 feet in its west No. 2, sec. 23-7n-4e, a scheduled 10,600 foot try.

In Perry County, the state's deepest drilling well is below 18,100 feet with the venture to be drilled to 20,500 feet. The wildcat is Phillips Petroleum Company's No. 1, Josephine sec. 35-1s-10w, northeast of Wiggins.

Grain Futures Market Closes On Firmer Note

CHICAGO (AP) — The grain futures market worked into a gradual firmer trend last week and built up small to moderate net gains for nearly all commodities on the Board of Trade.

Rye, the only exception, finished with small fractional losses on trading which probably reached its lowest volume in many months.

After having withstood its heaviest selling a week ago in about two months, soybeans began attracting an increasing support and posted moderately broad advances on three successive days. Gains ranged up to 8 cents a bushel on the May delivery but the move failed to recover all the losses of the previous week.

Brokers said the revived demand was in the pattern of market behavior following periods of withering pressure. A large volume of stoploss selling apparently drove many speculators out of the long side the market. Analysts seemed impressed, too, by the improved commercial demand which developed on the setbacks. They noted that export buyers filled several rather substantial orders.

Corn maintained a slow but fairly steady advance, almost entirely on consumer support, and again posted a succession of season highs. The continued cold weather and snow-covered fields caused a little concern about seeding of the crop.

At the end of the week, soybeans were 2¼ to 8 cents a bushel higher, May $3.00½-01; wheat ⅞ - 1⅜ higher, May $1.49½-⅜; corn ½-1⅛ higher, May $1.33¼-⅜; oats ¾ - 1⅛ higher, May 70⅜ cents; rye ⅛-½ lower, May $1.21⅞-¾.

MONROE CONSTRUCTION

The biggest news from the Monroe Building Inspector's office the past week was that three permits have been issued in the City of Monroe for the new City Hall complex.

Charge Alleges Minister Writes Obscene Novel

HOUSTON (UPI) — A prominent Norfolk, Va., Methodist minister was free in $10,000 bond ing a book he had allegedly written across a state line.

The minister, Rev. Arthur Edwin Shelton, 41, said he was "in the dark" about the whole thing.

"I have no idea even what the charges are against me," he said in Norfolk.

Shelton, who did not want to talk about the charges, said he does write.

"I write my sermons every Sunday and have them published," Shelton said.

Indictments against Shelton and two other defendants Wallace D. Maxey, 68, and Sanford E. Aday, 47, of Fresno, Calif., were returned Friday in Houston by a U.S. grand jury. The indictments contended that Shelton, writing under the pseudonym "Edwin A. Shell," wrote a book entitled "The Awaking of Cindy."

The indictments said the book was obscene, lewd, lascivious and filthy and was sent by the three men to newsstands in Houston. The indictments also alleged that Maxey and Aday sent other obscene material to other newsstands.

Aday and Maxey were arraigned Friday before U.S. Commissioner Frank C. Lerrigo in Fresno. Aday was released in $2,000 bond and Maxey $1,000 bond.

An FBI spokesman would not say how the connection between "Edwin A. Shell" and Shelton was made. He said no details of the case would be made available before the trial. Conviction on the counts could bring a five-year term to each man.

Northeast Second In Civitan Relays At Memphis

Ronnie Fountain Most Outstanding

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (Special) — The weather turned warm and the competition hot here Saturday afternoon in the eighth annual Civitan Relays and the result was 21 broken records and two-razor thin margins for team championships.

Kentucky State of Frankfort, Ky., scored 70 points to edge Northeast Louisiana State, the defending champion, by two points in the university section although Northeast did supply the meet's outstanding performer in its division in Ronnie Fountain. The swift sophomore tied the 9.7 record in the 100 yard dash and anchored the two record setting relay teams.

Benton, Ark. turned back Murphy High of Mobile 35-¾ to 35 in the high school division.

Only Murray State had a relative easy time in sweeping to the college division title. The Racers, apply named, scored 76 points to 61 for second place Oklahoma Christian.

Kentucky State won four events, setting one record, but had such overall depth it was able to stave off several top efforts by Northeast. The victors' record of 3:25.8 came in the sprint medally.

Northeast won six events, setting records of 41.2 in the 440 yard relay; 1:26.6 in the 880 yard relay and 211-11½ in the javelin by Tommy Slack.

A team composed of Dalton LeBlanc, Roger Morgan, Fred Vogel and Fountin ran both of Northeast's record setting relay victories.

Shortly after the meet Northeast track coach Bob Groseclose said that he was "extremely proud of our boys. The competition was real good and I felt we performed well."

Groseclose also added that injuries to several key men, including hurdler Morgan and sprinter LeBlanc, are coming along fine and they should be in top form within a couple of weeks.

Morgan ran on the shuttle relay team but did not run the highs, which are his specialty.

Southern University won the mile relay in a record 3:11.8 while its great high jumper Richard Ross raised the record in that event to 6-9¾.

Miami of Ohio's unbeaten distance medally relay team set a record of 10:01.5. Loyola of Chicago's nationally rated two-mile relay team was beaten by Kentucky State in 7:42, which is nearly seven seconds slower than the record. However, Loyola's crew of hurdlers won the 480 yards shuttle hurdle relay in 1:00.8, which went as a record because it is a new event.

The entire team totals for the university division read like this: Kentucky State 70, Northeast 68, Loyola of Chicago 45, Miami of Ohio 32, Southern of Baton Rouge 31, Memphis State 29, Mississippi State 13, Eastern Kentucky 10 and Kentucky 5.

Other Northeast results included:

First in the high hurdles by Roger Mann with a time of 14.5 and third by Fred Vogel with 14.8.

First in the discus by Gary Walker at 153-6.

Third in the 100 yard dash by Dalton LeBlanc with 9.9.

Third in the sprint medally relay with 3:29.3.

Third in the 480 yard shuttle hurdles with 61.4.

Second in the pole vault by Paul Hobgood (13-6) and fourth by John Linta (13-0). (Winning height was 14 feet.)

Fourth in the mile relay with 3:17.7.

Ampose Gets Upset Victory In Gulfstream

MIAMI (AP) — Ampose scored a startling upset in the $111,900 Gulfstream Park Handicap Saturday with Tronado, another long shot, second and the favored Gun Bow third.

Babington, an entry with Tronado, was fourth followed by Hot Dust, Your Alibhai, Lt. Stevens and Candy Spots in that order.

Ampose ran the 1¼ mile in 2:04 2-5, slowest time for this feature since its first running in 1946 when Do-Reigh-Mi needed 2:07 3-5 to negotiate the distance.

The record is 1:59 4-5 set by Coaltown in 1949 and tied by Round Table in 1958.

Gun Bow, under Walter Blum and a top impost of 130 pounds, was favored by the crowd of 21,316 at 60 cents on the dollar but the weight evidently was too much on the hot, sultry afternoon.

Candy Spots, second in the weight at 123 pounds with Willie Shoemaker riding, was second choice at 7-2. He was a close fourth for the first one-half mile but gave up in the stretch and was five lengths behind Lt. Stevens at the end.

Ampose, owned by Ace Fessenden of Miami Beach and trained by former jockey Doug Dodson, had Kennard Knapp aboard and carried only 112 pounds to his fifth victory in eight starts this winter.

Ampose, the only Florida-bred in the race, was the longest-priced horse in the field and returned $38.40 and $12.80. There was no show betting.

Tronado, bred in Argentina and brought to this country last November, paid $7 to place.

Ampose, who earned his start in the Gulfstream 'Cap by beating Old Hat, Editorialist and others in the seven-furlong Appleton Handicap here last Saturday, was fifth in the early running but was only two lengths behind Tronado when they made the stretch turn.

Player Predicts Arnold Palmer With Nicklaus

ATLANTA (AP) — Gary Player, who won the Masters Golf Tournament in 1961, said Saturday Jack Nicklaus and Arnold Palmer should be the overwhelming choices to win that classic this year.

But, he added during an interview at the Airport, Doug Sanders, has all it takes to win the tournament which begins April 8 at Augusta, Ga.

"I definitely feel that Sanders is to be reckoned with in this year's Masters," Player said. "He has a beautiful golf game and the kind of temperament that is necessary to win the tournament.

"I think a good many golfers have lost the Masters purely through temperament. The pressure just becomes too great for them toward the last," the South African said.

Player said the power of Nicklaus and Palmer, as well as their experience and winning habits, makes them the solid choices.

Others Player singled out as possible winners were Tommy Aaron, Bill Casper, Tony Lema and Bobby Nichols.

Player himself must also be counted in the running. He has never done badly in the tournament, winning it in 1961, losing to Palmer in a playoff in 1962, and tying for fourth last year, just three strokes off the winning score.

Bullets Beat St. Louis In Playoff Tilt

BALTIMORE (AP) — The Baltimore Bullets exploded for 77 points in the second half and crushed the St. Louis Hawks 131-99 in the National Basketball Association's Western Division playoffs Saturday night.

The Bullets, who lost to the Hawks by 24 points Friday night, took a 2-1 lead in the best-of-five semifinals series.

As they have in the two previous games of the series, Baltimore's starters scored the bulk of the points, only this time they were given last quarter rest after clinching the victory.

Walt Bellamy and Don Ohl scored 23 points apiece for Baltimore, Kevin Loughery added 22, Bailey Howell 20 and Gus Johnson 19.

Johnson, who it only one of 10 shots in the first half, sparked the runaway midway through the third quarter after sinking one of his colorful fast break dunkers. Johnson finished with 14 rebounds and three assists, although he made only five of 20 shots from the floor.

The Hawks, who finished eight games ahead of Baltimore in the Western Division, trailed all the way after the Bullets opened up a 42-36 advantage.

Baltimore led 74-67 with 3:30 remaining in the third quarter, and then spurted to a 90-73 lead by the end of the period.

Zelmo Beaty led St. Louis with 18 points. Bob Pettit, who was given a rocking chair denoting his upcoming retirement during halftime ceremonies, made only 12 points, and player-coach Richie Guerin was held to two points.

Ohl connected on 10 of 17 shots from his backcourt position, while Bellamy sank of nine of 16 while grabbing 18 rebounds.

The fourth game of the series will be played in Baltimore Tuesday night.

EXHIBITION ROUNDUP

Cincinnati Winning Streak Broken By Milwaukee, 6-5

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Milwaukee, aided by four errors and two balks, snapped Cincinnati's winning streak at five with a 6-5 victory Saturday in an exhibition baseball game.

The Braves scored two of their runs on balks by Sammy Ellis, who also gave up nine of Milwaukee's 10 hits. Cincinnati home runs by Vada Pinson and Don Pavletich couldn't overcome the Braves' lead.

An infield out drove in the deciding run in the seventh inning after Mike dela Hoz singled and went to third on a double by Lee Maye.

The Chicago White Sox handed the New York Yankees their ninth defeat in 11 games 2-0 behind the combined six-hit pitching of John Buzhardt and Bob Locker. Floyd Robinson and Ron Hansen singled across the White Sox' runs in the first inning against Bill Stafford.

Three other shutouts were posted around the citrus circuit. Houston defeated Philadelphia 2-0, the Astros' Claude Raymond pitching out of a bases-loaded jam in the ninth inning.

Jim Kaat, Dave Boswell and Jerry Fosnow allowed a total of four hits in Minnesota's 3-0 triumph over Kansas City while Ron Piche and Marcelino Lopez scattered eight hits in a 4-0 decision for the Los Angeles Angels over Cleveland.

Detroit nipped St. Louis 3-2 on Willie Horton's run-scoring single in the eighth inning, and the Los Angeles Dodgers erupted in the seventh inning for five runs and an 1-8 victory over the New York Mets. The first seven Dodgers reached base in the uprising.

The chicago Cubs battered Juan Marichal for three home runs, whipping San Francisco 7-3. Ernie Banks, Glenn Beckert and Billy Williams each hit four-baggers.

Dalton Jones' two-run single in the 10th inning boosted Boston to an 11-9 victory over another Cleveland Squad. And Pittsburgh edged the Dodgers' B team 3-2 while Baltimore's B squad stopped Toledo of the International League 3-1.

Baltimore's regular team played Washington at night.

SECOND-HALF RALLY

Robinson Leads West Win, 87-74

LEXINGTON, Ky. (AP) — Wyoming guard Flynn Robinson came off the bench Saturday to trigger a second-half West rally and lead his team to an 87-74 victory in the East-West College All-Star basketball game.

The East jumped to a 40-35 halftime lead behind Michigan's Bill Buntin and North Carolina's Billy Cunningham, and built a 56-45 margin the first six minutes of the second period.

Then Robinson replaced Oregon State's Jim Jarvis and the West began to move. Robinson and All-America Gail Goodrich of UCLA carried most of the load as the West rolled up 17 straight points. Goodrich and Robinson also hit back-to-back goals to ice the game at 81-66 with three-minutes remaining.

Goodrich and Robinson led all scorers with 20 points each. Goodrich was named the game's most valuable player. Billy Cunningham of North Carolina, who won the sportsmanship trophy, led the East with 19.

The game developed exactly as West Coach Doggie Julian of Dartmouth and East Coach Joe Lapchick of St. John's had predicted.

"The East has the size," Julian had said, "but I think our backcourt will compensate for that."

Goodrich and Robinson also manhandled the East on defense as Cunningham and Evansville's Jerry Sloan were playing guard for the first time in a college game.

The East controlled the backboards, out-rebounding the victors 45-40. All-America Fred Hetzel of Davidson played only about 15 minutes but led all rebounders with 12.

The West outshot the East from the field, 43.8 per cent to 38.1.

Buntin scored 16 points for the East, and 1964 All-America Dave Stallworth of Wichita had 15 for the West.

Tibaldo Easily Wins Race At Aqueduct Track

NEW YORK (AP) — Tibaldo, an in-and-out Argentine-bred performer, had on his racing shoes Saturday and easily won the $60,200 Westchester at Aqueduct as the strongly backed Cupid wound up fourth in the one-mile race.

Braulio Baeza kept the 5-year-old son of Ttan-Elite close to the early pace set by Power of Destiny and turned him loose in the final one-quarter mile. He hit the finish line 5½ lengths in front of lightly regarded Quita Dude. Power of Destiny held on for third money, beaten one-half length for runner-up honors. Cupid was another two lengths back.

In winning, $39,130 for J. R. H. Thouron, Tibaldo packed 116 pounds over the mile in 1:36 3-5 and paid $14.90, $8 and $5.40 to his backers in the crowd of 51,537.

Quita Dude, left alone to Carry Sidney Factor's silks when well rated Sledge was scratched, returned $18.70, and $10.10. Power of Destiny, owned by Mrs. Ethel D. Jacobs, paid $5.50 to show.

Cupid, a romping winner of the Paumonok in last Saturday's snow storm, had no excuse. He was well placed from the start by apprentice Bill Mahorney but didn't have it when the bulky field swept into the home stretch and Tibaldo opened up with a burst of speed that settled the result one-sixteenth of a mile from the finish.

WIN NIGHTCAP, 6-5

Tribesmen Gain Split With Nicholls Colonels

By STUART HILL
World Sports Writer

Red Hall bunted in the winning run in the last inning of nightcap to give Northeast State a 6-5 victory and a twinbill split with Nicholls State Saturday afternoon after the Colonels had won the opener, 6-2.

Hall's bases-loaded bunt with one man out brought home centerfielder Bill McCullar, who was a hitting standout during the days' action along with Hall.

Hall finished the day with three hits in six trips and chipped in four RBI's while McCullar had a 4-6 day at the play and contributed three RBI's.

In the first game, Nicholls touched Tribe starter Mike Tinnerello for a single run in the first inning and picked up five more in the fifth before he was relieved by freshman David Davis in the sixth.

Tinnerello, the loser, struck out two and walked two with Davis walking one and striking out one.

The split left Coach George Luffy's Tribesmen at 3-1 for the season after taking a doubleheader from Austin College earlier last week. Nicholls is 6-3-1 for the campaign and has a date at Northwestern State College before returning to its home base.

The games were played under adverse conditions with the temperature climbing to 46 degrees by the time the games ended around 6 p.m.

The two teams, which were rained out of a slated doubleheader Friday afternoon, had planned to play a tripleheader Saturday, starting at 11 a.m., but the first game was called off because of cold weather and the day's action began at 1 p.m.

Glynn Saulters pitched the first six innings of the second game and gave up four runs on as many hits while walking two and striking out five Nicholls batters. Mike Vining, who went the final frame for the Tribe, took the victory, his first of the season.

Nicholls pieced together a five-run fifth inning in the opening game to insure the win. The spree broke open 1-1 tie with Northeast coming back in the sixth to cross the plate with one more run.

Catcher Larry Lasseigne got things going for the Colonels in the fifth when he led off with a single and advanced to second on Joey McGinn's error off the bat of Nicholls' pitcher Dennis Shelley, who was the winner. Errol Defresne was intentionally walked to load the bases before Michael Pitre fanned for the first out of the inning.

With the bases loaded, Emil Jolley singled in Lasseigne and Shelley. Another intended walk to Warren Hecard loaded the sacks again with David Faulk singling in three more runs after another strikeout.

Tommy Naquin singled before the inning's leadoff man, Lasseigne grounded out to retire the side.

Northeast picked up both its first game scores in the sixth inning. Don Boniol walked to lead off the frame and reached third on the following play when Eddie Kincaid doubled to left.

Hall then singled in the two runners. A double play and a ground out killed the inning.

In the second game Northeast scored its first run by pushing McCullar across in the initial frame. He scored on a single by Hall with two men out.

Nicholls came back to knot the score in the second inning and the game remained tied until the bottom of the sixth when the Tribe shot back into the forefront by scoring another run.

The Colonels threw a sweep-scare in the game in the top of the seventh by scoring four runs to move well ahead. Two singles, a walk and a throwing error by Vining accounted for the scores.

In the climatic last half of the seventh, David Worthington started things off by reaching first on an error. A ground ball by Gary Fields forced Worthington at second but Joe Huffman, sophomore from Shreveport, pinch hit for Vining and singled to keep the rally alive.

McGinn then walked and McCullar drilled a booming triple to right centerfield, scoring three runs and tying the game, 5-5.

Nicholls, trying to set up a double play, then walked Alton Thomas and Kincaid to load the bases. However, Hall came through with his one-out bunt to score McCullar and end the game.

Fair Park Ace Gets No-Hitter

SHREVEPORT (Special) — Fair Park's hard throwing Dick Hicks, apparently undisturbed by a chilling wind and temperatures in the low 40's, fired a brilliant no-hitter at Ouachita here Saturday afternoon to carry the Indians to their 10th straight victory of the season, 9-0 in a 1-AAA contest.

Hicks, now 5-0 for the year, has allowed only four hits in his last 31 innings and has recorded three shutouts to help keep the Tribe unbeaten.

The nearest Ouachita came to a hit was in the first inning when left fielder Tommy Beach grounded to third. The ball was knocked down by Fair Park's William Duncan and he was given an error on the play as Beach raced safely across first.

Roy Holloway, in his first mound appearance of the season for Ouachita, was the loser. He went the route and gave up 11 hits, five earned runs and struck out three batters. He didn't walk a man.

Fair Park scored one run in the first on an error, wild pitch and single by Tommy Ford, then came back with five more in the third and three in the fourth.

In the big third inning spree, center fielder Don Barteet got things started with a bases-empty homer to right field with one man out. The Indians managed their other four runs of the frame on singles by Jim Norman, David Warren, Duncan and Hicks plus a couple of Ouachita miscues.

In the fourth Fair Park tallied on two singles and two more Lion errors.

Ouachita will be in action again when it goes back to Shreveport for a bout with Woodlawn Monday and travels to Rayville for a doubleheader with the Hornets Tuesday night in action which was rained out this past week.

The Lions of Coach Zeke Zametto will play five days this week.

Two Brothers In Record Win Of Twin Doubles

MIAMI, Fla. (AP) — Two brothers from New Jersey, described as heavy bettors won a $124,972 twin double at Gulfstream Park Saturday—largest payoff ever made at an American thoroughbred track.

They stored their winnings in the track vault until Monday for safety.

"Give me a receipt," John C. Sabatini of Hackensack, N.J., told mutuel officials who greeted him in an office even though the windows were closed.

John, who owns a neon light company, and his brother Charles L. Sabatini of Spring Lake, wouldn't talk about how they picked the four longshots.

"We just played a hunch," said John.

The winning numbers were 4-4-4-3 and they were worth about $4,000 more than the previous high thoroughbred payoff, $123,217.60 at Hialeah March 1.

Will Grimsley To Get Award

SALISBURY, N.C. (AP) — Will Grimsley of The Associated Press was named Saturday winner of the second annual Martini & Rossi Award for outstanding writing about a sportsman's sport.

Grimsley, cited for his tennis coverage, will receive the award at the National Sportscasters and Sportswriters Awards program here April 6.

Allison Danzig, tennis writer for the New York Times, won the award last year.

Jay Trump Upset Winner In England

AINTREE, England (AP) — Tommy Smith rode Jay Trump to a narrow victory in a thrilling Grand National Saturday and made racing history.

For the first time in 128 years the fearsome steeplechase was won by a horse bred in the United States, owned by an American and ridden by one.

Smith, from Middleburg, Va., fought it out neck-and-neck with Freddie, the 7-2 favorite, over the last few hundred yards. He won by three-fourths of a length.

Mr. Jones was third 20-lengths behind. Rainbow Battle fourth. Both were 50-1 shots.

Jay Trump's owner, Mrs. Mary Stephenson of Cincinnati, Ohio, greeted Smith with a big kiss in the unsaddling enclosure. The win brought her a first prize of $61,714. Jay Trump was 100-6 in the betting.

Jay Trump, twice winner of the Maryland Hunt Cup in the United States, was timed in 9:30.6. The record is 9:20.4, set by Golden Miller in 1934.

It was the second straight victory for an American-owned horse in the National, which was run for the 124th time since 1837. Last year's winner was Team Spirt.

The victory was the sixth by an American-owned horse in the long history of the world's most famous steeplechase.

Two other American-owned entries fell. They were Red Tide, owned by Paul Mellon of New York, and Leedsy, owned by Mrs. Clare Levy of New York.

Smith managed to avoid trouble through most of the four-mile, 856-yard course but he had a couple of frightening moments. Jay Trump landed on a fallen rider at one obstacle and he had to skip over a fallen horse at the next-to-last fence.

"I was lucky to get a clear run all the way," Smith said. "Jay Trump and I were getting awfully tired when we reached that finish line. Another half mile and we wouldn't have won."

Smith, 27, told the story of a fantastic race in which 47 horses started and only 14 survived the 30 fences to finish.

"I've never been in such a bedlam," he said. "there were horses falling all over the place, and a lot more running loose and wild."

Trainer Fred Winter, who won two Grand Nationals as a jockey, tild Smith before the start to "Keep to the inside."

"But other horses were already there," Smith said. "So I pulled Jay Trump back and got on the inside, well back in the pack."

The same crisis came at dreaded Becher's Brook — the sixth obstacle. There was a pile-up of horses. Jay Trump landed smack on a jockey who had been thrown.

"That almost made me sick," Smith said. "We fell back, but we kept going."

He didn't know who the jockey was. But Bobby Coonan, rider of Forgotten Dreams, was one of those who fell there and was later hospitalized with a broken collar-bone. He said a horse landed on top of him.

"I didn't want to be up front too soon," Smith said. "We hung back until the Canal Turn on the second time round. There we made a good jump and gained on the leaders."

That was the 24th obstacle.

"Then Freddie went by me, and I decided it was time to stay with him."

At the last fence the horses were dead level.

"I was getting more and more exhausted, Smith said. "Twice I nearly gave up, but I knew I couldn't."

The 8-year-old horse, sired by Tonga Prince out of Be Trump, was bought for $2,000 dollars for flat racing.

Mrs. Stephenson said "He never did any good on the flat, but he's made up for it as a jumper — nine wins out of 11 starts."

Jay Trump's triumph cost the bookies a pocketful of money. One bookie, William Hill, said he was paying out $1,338,400 to bettors — his biggest pay-out on the Grand National to date.

All through the morning, stable hands watched for the coughing epidemic which has spread through British stables. Jay Trump had his temperature taken every two hours. But there were no new victims.

Queen Mother Elizabeth's The Rip — the horse most Britons wanted to win — finished seventh. She and Princess Margaret watched the drama.

Mrs. Stephenson said Jay Trump would next race in the French Grand National June 20.

Russell Earns High Respect

By Keith Prince

NOTES AT RANDOM: Bill Russell, recently named the NBA's Most Valuable Player for the fourth time, has just about wiped out all doubt that he is definitely the difference between Boston's tremendous success and a mediocre season. Jackie Moreland, former La. Tech basketball star now playing with the Detroit Pistons, is one of many pro cage players who says without hesitation that "Without Russell Boston would not win the championship." . . .From the Drilling Log, pamphlet of publicity for the Houston Oilers, comes a by-lined story from quarterback Don Trull saying that his former Baylor teammate Lawrence Elkins is a sure-fire future hit in pro football. Says Trull, "Elkins has the moves of Raymond Berry and Charlie Henningan, speed of Lance Alworth and hands of Lionel Taylor." If Elkins can live up to that description AFL statisticians might as well get out some new record books. . .

There never was much follow up dope out on the statement Wilt Chamberlain made several months ago about wanting to try professional football. He had spoken wth Hank Strom, coach of the KC Chiefs, but it was doubted that the Chiefs would have enough money to attract the 7-1 basketball star. However, Ben Kerner, owned of the St. Louis Hawks cage team, said if the Chiefs didn't have enough money to lure The Stilt into football he would be glad to chip in all they needed. Nice of him wasn't it . . . From Sports Illustrated we saw where, when asked if he would sign his 8-year-old son to a football contract, KC Chiefs owner Lamar Hunt said, "No, I'm hoping he'll be drafted by the Jets." . . .

BELATED CONGRATULATIONS go out to Jonesboro-Hodge for its second straight double-A basketball championship. We hear they are planning a Broadway-type play for the near future called, "Will Success Spoil Larry Toms" with the theme song of "It's Getting To Be A Habit With Me." Seriously, Coach Toms has done a remarkable job with the Tigers of J-H as have the fans who make Jonesboro one of north Louisiana's real sports-minded hot beds. . .

Danny O'Connell, retiring coach of the Washington Senators, recalling a game in which he hit three triples of the Phillies' Robin Roberts, earning him a record-book citation along with 33 others: "Roberts and I talk about it every time I see him; I usually bring it up." . . . Remember when Cassius Clay, upon winning the heavyweight championship from Sonny Liston, said, "I will now quit yelling about how great I am and act my normal self again." Yeah, it is rather hard to remember at that. . .

OUR AREA WAS WELL represented on this year's prep basketball all-state teams. In fact, we feel we could get a 10 man team to compete with most anyone just by going with boys from our area. The old pro here would have a starting five of Block's Jeff Foster and West Monroe's Sammy Brewster at forwards, with Rickey Peel of Weston and Mike Gammill of Oak Grove at guards and J. Dodd Brooks of Neville at center. Our "second team," which would be one heck-a-va reserve list, would line up with Jonesboro's Jimmie Stewart and Caldwell's Boone McCarty at forward, Tom Holmer of Bastrop and Jimmy Phillips of Jonesboro at guard and James Futrell of Calhoun at center. How sweet it would be . . . Of course, it would be nice to stretch our region out just a wee bit and come up with Belmont's 6-6 James Wyatt as a "bonus" boy . . .

Astrodome Facts 'N Figures

IF OSCARS were handed out for special achievement in the field of construction, Houston's Astrodome would surely be the top vote getter. Talking with some tall Texans who have already gone through the eighth wonder of the world, we keep getting comments like, "There is just no way to describe it," or "It is absolutely magnificent."

Maybe you have been doing some heavy reading on the mighty structure already but here are a few facts and figures you may not have come across.

1. There are 41,000 cushioned, upholstered (seat and back) theatrical type seats in the stadium and 4,000 pavilion seats that have cushioned upholstered seats and wooden backs.

2. Wide, low-pitched ramps and two sets of escalators provide easy access to the seats and the entire stands can be emptied in nine minutes with a maximum crowd.

3. The playing field was built approximately 25 feet below ground level, requiring the removal of 250,000 cubic yards of dirt.

4. Luxurious "minature private clubs" are located on the upper level of the stadium. These 24- or 30-seat boxes are joined by a private room, appropriately decorated and carpeted, featuring closed-circuit TV, refrigerators, ice makers, telephones, private rest room and catered hors d'oeuvres. Private elevators deliver the occupants of these boxes to their seats, and a unique dining room featuring Japanese "tempura" is available for exclusive dining.

5. The stadium features five dining areas in addition to concession areas on each level of seating.

6. The total cost of the Astrodome is $31.6 million. Breaking the total down, the all-purpose stadium was constructed by the citizens of Harris County at a cost of $20.5 million, plus $3 million for the land with the additional cost including access roads and parking areas. The 710-foot-diameter structure covers 9½ acres, and the entire complex 260 acres.

6. The stadium is leased for 40 years to the Houston Sports Association for an annual lease fee of $750,000. The Association has the right to sublease the stadium, which it does. Organizations now planning to use it include the Houston Astros baseball club, Houston Oilers of the AFL, University of Houston football team, Houston Livestock Show and Rodeo, Conventions of all types, Religious conclaves, Shows and circuses, Championship boxing matches and many other sports and functions.

Southern Illinois Relay Teams Get Wins In Florida

GAINESVILLE, Fla. (AP) — Speedy Bill Cornell sparked three Southern Illinois relay teams to victory in the rain-marred Florida Relays Saturday and was voted the outstanding performer of the meet.

He anchored the distance medley and spring medley squads and ran the second leg on the mile relay team. The distance medley team set a meet record of 10:00.2.

A torrential downpour, including hail, struck midway through the afternoon and completely cleared the field of athletes, officials and spectators. The rain delayed the meet so long that final events were run with police car headlights for illumination.

Record books and mimeograph machines got soaked, and official results on many of the events were apparently obliterated.

Late Saturday, track and University of Florida officials were scrambling around to try to find the winners and times of some events.

One official said he was drying his records with a fire and hoped to be able to decipher the blurred entries.

Despite the weather, records fell — especially in the high school division.

Richmond Flowers Jr. of Montgomery, Ala., broke the broad jump record with a leap of 22-7½. The Sydney Lanier High School athlete also triumphed in 120-yard high hurdles.

ONE-STROKE MARGIN

Phil Rodgers Takes Azalea Tourney Lead

WILMINGTON, N.C. (AP) — A slimmed-down Phil Rodgers, gradually shaking off a two-year slump, shot a four-under-par 68 Saturday to move into the 54-hole lead of the $28,750 Azalea Open Golf Tournament.

His total of 206 on rounds of 68-70-68 gave him a one-stroke lead over Dick Hart, the 36-hole pace-setter, who shot a par 72. Joe Campbell shot 69 to jump into third place at 208 going into today's final round.

Rodgers, who took stock of himself last fall when he weighed 198 pounds and said "I didn't know whether I was walking or rolling," went on a diet that lopped some 25 pounds off his 5-foot-8 frame in two months.

He hasn't won a tournament since the Texas Open 23 months ago, a few weeks before he lost a British Open playoff to Bob Charles.

Rodgers won $400 in bonus money for leading the round and $150 more for shooting one of four 68s, the day's low round.

"I played better today than I have in quite a while," said Rodgers who will be 27 next Saturday.

His nine hole scores were 32-36 over the 6,700-yard course.

In 54 holes he has missed only three greens, two of them on Saturday.

Hart had 16 pars, one birdie from 25 feet on the second hole and one bogey, when he took three from the edge of the 13th green. But his round was not as routine as it sounds.

He missed seven greens, but one-putted the first five, saving pars on four of them — from 25 feet on the fifth.

Campbell, who also has missed only three greens in 54 holes, shot seven threes in his last 14 holes to move into contention on a 34-35 round. He has only one bogey in three rounds.

Tied for fourth at 211, five shots off the lead, were 53-year-old John Barnum, Jacky Cupit, Bob Zimmerman and Gary Floan.

Barnum, Bob Batdorff and Larry Beck, the other 68 shooters, each won $150 as their share of the $600 prize for the low round of the day.

Tryouts Set Today At 1 At Speedway

Approximately 25 cars are expected to be on hand today at 1 p.m. for tryouts at the West Monroe Speedway as the final countdown nears for the April 4 official opening.

Mrs. Allie Smith, manager of the oval speedway track, has announced that there will be no grandstand admission price for today's trials although a $1 pit coverage is being charged.

During regular races admission will be $1 and 50 cents.

Although rain and cold weather have slowed preparations somewhat, Speedway officials said that the tryouts will definitely be held if it doesn't rain today.

"The track is in excellent shape, and are not too wet for the tryouts," said Mrs. Smith.

The West Monroe Speedway is located just off the Jonesboro road three miles south of the papermill.

Freak Accident Hurts Mechanic

SEBRING, Fla. (AP) — A freak accident injured a mechanic behind the pits in the Sebring 12-hour endurance race Saturday.

Wyne (Red) Pierce of Santa Monica, Calif., was shocked while trying to ground an electric wire which had shocked another crewman in the Ford Cobra group.

He was taken to a Sebring hospital for a checkup.

Hall, Sharp End Ferrari's Control

SEBRING, Fla. (AP) — Jim Hall, wealthy young Texas oilman who races sports cars for fun, brought his speedy Chaparral through heat and rain, through daylight and darkness to a surprise victory in the Sebring 12-hour endurance race Saturday.

Hall and Hap Sharp, his fellow business man in oil well drilling as well as driving, were in first or second place all the way in their pure white machine with unorthodox appearance and unprecedented automatic transmission.

They put an end to the reign of Ferrari, which could do no better than third place after winning here the past four years in a row.

The winners covered 197 laps unofficially and averaged 84.723 miles an hour.

Because of a violent rainstorm, the record of 214 laps and 92.364 m.p.h. held up. Mike Parkes and Umberto Maglioli set it in a factory Ferrari.

There was no question the Hall-Sharp Chaparral was the fastest in the field of 67 cars which started. Its big Chevrolet engine, with a set of exhausts behind the driver looking like a pipe organ, turned it around the flat 5.2-mile airport course in record breaking laps. Only an hour-long deluge of rain prevented it from a full race record.

Sharp had the honor of driving the record lap in 2 minutes 59 seconds — a speed of 104.58 miles an hour. It erased the 3:06.2 and 100.539 m.p.h. record set by John Surtees in a Ferrari last year.

Yet Sebring veterans said the Chaparral was a fine sprint car but wouldn't hold up for 12 hours of pounding on the abrasive concrete and asphalt surface. They said its automatic transmission would put too much strain on the brakes at the sharp turns.

They were wrong. Hall was right when he said the automatic transmission, an innovation in road racing. Would free the driver's hands for better control and more speed in the corners.

A Ford GT prototype which won the Daytona continental race at 2,000 kilometers (1.243 miles) only a month ago, finished second.

It was four laps behind the winner and its veteran drivers, Ken Miles of Hollywood, Calif., and Bruce McLaren of New Zealand were nursing their machine through the hours after darkness fell.

Carroll Shelby, who entered the Ford GT and its twin which fell victim to mechanical trouble early in the race, ordered his drivers to avoid charging at the winner through the late hours.

"We'd rather finish second than nt finish," Shelby said.

David Piper of London and Tony Maggs of Pretoria, South Africa, drove a green Ferrari to third place.

The fastest Ferrari to qualify retired with a broken clutch three hours before the finish. While it was running, Pedro Rodriguez of Mexico City and Graham Hill of London kept it in contention.

They were running second when mechanical failure sent their white machine behind the pit wall in a cloud of smoke.

The same fate befell Dan Gurney's Lotus Ford sports car earlier. It was the leader at noon when the race was only two hours old. Then the oil pump broke.

A similar fate befell millionaire John Mecom's exotic Lola Ford sports car at an early hour.

It was a day of exeremes.

The afternoon heat was so intense that two drivers required hospital treatment for heat exhaustion.

A rain squall hit with unprecedented violence at 5:25 p.m. The deluge was so heavy that the lap speed dropped from better than 100 miles per hour to 28 m.p.h. for nearly an hour.

Phil Hill, former world driving champion from Santa Monica, Calif., said the water inside his No. 16 Cobra was up to his waist and sloshing back and forth in waves.

There were six accidents. Four drivers and two spectators were taken to hospitals, but none were seriously hurt.

The most spectacular crash involved three cars on the asphalt road stretch between a series of curves known as "the esses" and "hairpin turn."

Trouble started after Nick Cone's Volvo blew an engine and stopped. George Reed piled into the car with his Cobra after Cone had stepped out of his machine. Along came Chuck Stoddard in an Alfa and flipped over and over as he tried to avoid the wreck.

Reed, from Midlothian, Ill., was taken to a St. Petersburg Hospital for emergency treatment. He had only cuts and bruises. The other drivers were not hospitaled.

An Italian built Grifo sports car was involved in two accidents. With G. C. Rainville of Providence, R.I., at the wheel it skidded into a snow fence on the first lap. Two spectators along the fence were treated for bruises at a Sebring hospital.

The car continued in the race, and during the rain, Mike Grammino of Providence rammed it into a bridge over the home straightaway.

Another Grifo, driven by Silvio Moser of Italy, wrecked at the hairpin and he had a broken jaw.

Ed Hugus of Pittsburgh and Tom O'Brien of Newark, N.J., were treated for heat prostration but returned to the track.

SEBRING, Fla. (AP) — Here are the final unofficial standings of the Sebring 12-hour endurance race:

1, Chaparral, Jim Hall-Hap Sharp, 196 laps. 2, Ford GT, Ken Miles-Bruce McLaren, 192 laps. 3, Ferrari, David Piper-Tony Maggs, 190 laps. 4, Ford Cobra, Joe Schlesser-Bob Bonduarnt, 187 laps. 5, Porsche, Lake Underwood-Gunther Klasu, 185 laps. 6, Porsche, Ben Pon-Joe Buzzetta, 185 laps. 7, Ford-Cobra, Bob Johnson-Tom Payne, 185 laps. 8, Ferrari, Umberto Maglioli-Giancarlo Baghetti, 184 laps. 9, Porsche, Herbert Linge-Gerhard Mitter, 184 laps. 10, Porsche, Scooter Patrick-David Jordan, 183 laps.

Tech Extends Win Record To Seven

RUSTON (Special) — Louisiana Tech's half-frozen baseballers warmed up enough here Saturday afternoon to sweep a doubleheader from Arkansas State Teachers, 3-2 and 6-1 to run their winning streak to seven games.

Tech has a 10-1 recrod for the campaign while ASTC departed with a 6-2 mark.

The Bulldogs had to come from behind to win the first game with a two run rally in the bottom of the seventh. Southpaw David Lee of the Bears was breezing along on a one-hitter before running into trouble in the last frame.

ASTC took a 2-0 lead in the fifth after Tech's Gene Smith had blanked the Bears for the first four innings. Righthander Ronnie Bell ran into trouble immediately in the fifth when he walked the first batter and Lee and Jim Fulmer reached first on bunt singles Bell, who ultimately won his third game without a loss, walked in one run and another scored on a fielder's choice.

Tech got one run back in the bottom of the fifth when Willie Reese walked, moved to third with a pickoff attempt went wild and scored on Randall Fallin's single.

The Bulldogs rapped it up in the seventh when Reese walked, moved to second on a walk, and Fallin's sacrifice moved him to second. Pinch hitter Rick Huckaby singled but Reese had to hold at third. Douglas Britt walked to load the bases and John Richardson came on to relieve Lee for ASTC. George Stone bounced out as a pinch hitter but Reese scored.

With two out, Rennie Howard's liner to left center pushed over the winning run.

Stone and Arnold Ramsey combined on a two-hitter for Tech in the nightcap with the Ruston rookie southpaw picking up his second win without a loss. Stone gave up one hit over the first four innings and struck out eight.

Robert Marrus got things going for Tech with a long solo homer to left in the second. It remained that way until ASCT starter Tom Hutto weakened in the fifth and Tech shoved over five runs. Two walks, two wild pitches, a single by Britt, and two run singles by Alden Reeves and Reese accounted for the scoring.

Tech meets Henders on State for a double header in Arkadelphia, Ark., Monday afternoon.

Season Opens Saturday

Next Saturday marks the opening of the hunting season that separates the men from the boys, or the lucky from the unlucky.

The turkey season opens in Louisiana at dawn April 3rd for three full weekends through April 19th. It'll be the most challenging season of the year.

That's because gobblers are hard to fool. The art of calling them is a feat few hunters have accomplished.

This year's season has an added attraction in that the Georgia-Pacific Game Management Area will be open the first two days, April 3-4th, for half-day hunts. Located north of Bastrop, the area will be open for hunting from daybreak to noon.

The Louisiana Wild Life & Fisheries Commission doesn't want the Georgia-Pacific turkey population reduced greatly.

It will be operated much on the same basis as Chicago Mill Game Management Area. Hunters must obtain a permit from the wildlife commission and check in at check stations to be operated around the area.

In the case of the Georgia-Pacific area, you can obtain a permit from the Monroe wildlife office, or at check stations that will be manned at the entrances to the hunting area.

Permits for Chicago Mill can be obtained at the Ferriday office of the wildlife commission. Just drop supervisor Dewey Wills a line.

Dewey also plans to operate check stations for Chicago Mill at Cooter Point, Sharkey Road, Lake One, Hunter Bend Road and the Tensas River bridge between Tensas and Franklin.

The season limit, of course, is one gobbler.

And there's another thing to consider. If you used up all three tags on your big game license during the deer season, you can get a special turkey tag at the Monroe or Ferriday offices.

All turkey hunters must have a big game license.

You also know that the law permits still hunting only. The use of dogs, rifles and shotguns larger than 10 gauge and baiting specifically prohibited. A lot of hunters believe the rifle should be permitted as it is in other states.

Louisiana should have a good turkey season. Every year the turkey population expands. It should get better, because the commission is stocking birds at various locations.

But a lot depends on the weather in turkey hunting. The weather we've had lately is not right, to say the least.

If you've never been and like to hunt, you owe it to yourself to give it a try. It's a great hunt if you like a challenge.

Nelson Cox Here

Nelson Cox of the Arkansas Game & Fish Commission will be in Monroe Tuesday to address the Ouachita Wildlife Unit at 7:30 p.m. at the Virginia Hotel.

Cox was director for nine years, stepping aside just a few weeks ago to cut down on his pace. He had a close call a couple of years ago with a heart attack.

Now he's working in the public relations field with the Arkansas commission.

Needless to say, the Ouachita club hopes to have a big turnout of sportsmen for Nelson Cox, because it's not every month that the club can arrange for a speaker of his caliber.

As director of Arkansas' commission, he was recognized numerous times in wildlife circles for his contributions. He's also one of the best mallard men in the country.

Nelson, whose mother lives here, was in Monroe about two years ago for a public appearance, participating on the waterfowl panel that attracted such a big crowd at the Virginia.

This time he's bringing along a film just released by the Arkansas commission. In addition, he will speak and as we've said his address should be a good one.

The public is invited.

In addition, Andy Anders, club president, plans a report on the Louisiana Wildlife Federation convention last weekend in Baton Rouge. Andy emphasizes that he will go into detail regarding the convention action on the upcoming duck and deer seasons.

With Nelson Cox, ducks and deer, the Tuesday night meeting shapes up as one of the best.

Firearm Legislation

Congress again has been flooded with firearms bills aimed at curtailing the freedom of owning a gun.

But Congressman Bob Casey of Houston thinks he has the soundest approach to satisfy the people who are clamoring for action and at the same time protect the right to bear arms.

Casey, smart enough to explain his bills in letters to members of the Outdoor Writers Association of America, introduced two bills March 2nd to set a mandatory 25-year federal sentence for use or possession of a firearm during commission of a major crime.

H. B. 5641 pertains solely to the District of Columbia, which has a serious crime problem.

H. R. 5642 covers the nation as a whole. It places the penalty rightfully where it belongs, on the criminal, without putting the useless burden of registration or ineffective licensing schemes on the law-abiding citizen.

Casey's bill sounds fair to us.

Sen. Thomas J. Dodd of Connecticut again has introduced a firearms bill, which basically would require gun owners to register their weapons with a law enforcement agency.

There's more to Dodd's bill than that, but registration won't stop criminals from obtaining guns. It will, however, limit a basic freedom in this country.

If you don't want to lose that freedom, you'd better let our delegation know about it. Drop Congressman Passman a line, along with Sen. Long and Sen. Ellender.

Little Man's Corner

It was spring, but the weatherman didn't know it and the little men shivered making news afield.

In fact, most of the sports stayed home.

One, however, didn't. Johnny Rowe of Monroe several days ago landed a bass that weighed 7-lb., 4-oz. at Black Bayou. He was fishing with a purple H&H.

But Johnny went out Wednesday on Black Bayou and caught a fine string of bass. He's catching fish when most everybody else is staying at home.

Joe Herring, who now lives in Baton Rouge, breezed through Monroe Wednesday after filing a lease agreement for the Wild Life & Fisheries Commission at the Morehouse courthouse. It was on 18,505.60 acres of land in the Georgia-Pacific Game Management Area. It's now owned by John W. Barton of Baton Rouge, but the state has it under a five-year lease at no charge.

At Lake Providence, W. P. Rushing landed two good size bass with a Jigg and pole. One weighed 4½ pounds while the other went 5½ pounds. Red Kirby caught a nice string of crappie at the Stump Hole.

From West Monroe, Oscar and Earl Melbert landed the limit of chinkapins and white perch at the Blue Hole. Mr. and Mrs. R. B. Baughn of Vidalia had the limit of bass in Lake St. John.

From Jonesboro, Adrain Caser and his brother M. L. also had the limit of chinkapins and crappie in the Blue Hole.

Locally, L. D. Holcomb of Monroe caught 29 specs weighing 49½ pounds at Black Bayou. Marie Johnson got 25. On one of those cold days, H. L. Statham got eight large specs.

During the better weather, R. E. Formey and Sonny Taylor of Ferriday caught 40 white perch on the southend of Lake St. John on minnow. Rayford Lofton of Ferriday caught the limit of bass and barfish in the Blue Hole.

Down at the convention last weekend, Dick Yancey, the assistant wildlife director, recieved the award for the outstanding accomplishment in the professional field of game management. Dick was the only recipient of an award who received a standing ovation, which was more of a tribute to him than the award.

Hobson Norris, the new wildlife commission member from West Monroe, attended his first meeting Monday and Tuesday at New Orleans. He says he enjoyed it.

Senators Assign Hurlers To Farm

POMPANO BEACH, Fla. (AP) — The Washington Senators assigned pitchers Alan Koch and Don Loun to their Hawaii farm club of the Pacific Coast League Saturday, but Koch said he does not plan to report.

The 27-year-old right-hander, who had a 3-10 record with the Senators last year, plans to return to his Demopolis, Ala., home and will continue his law studies at the University of Alabama.

Cassius Can Still Joke About Fight

MIAMI BEACH (AP) — A bulging, overweight Cassius Clay is plainly worried but he still can muster a joke about his May 25 title defense against Sonny Liston.

"For a man that's never been knocked down, that Sonny sure gets picked up a lot," the heavyweight boxing champion quipped after a brisk workout in the Fifth Street Gym.

"I guess you got to blame me for the last time that ugly bear was arrested," Cassius added, straining to stifle a mischievous smile. "He was riding along the street in Denver in an open car and somebody hollered 'Hey!' Sonny thought the man yelled like me and he took off like a shot.

"The cops must have found that case of Bourbon I gave him for Christmas."

Clay, who prefers being called Muhammad Ali, is an inch taller and about 15 pounds heavier than when he took the crown from Liston here 13 months ago, but he's lost none of his braggadocio and puckish humor.

The champion, his massive copper body glistening with sweat, slumped in a big, comfortable arm chair in his four-by-six foot dressing room and rambled — sometimes seriously, sometimes facetiously — on a variety of subjects.

On his return fight with Liston —

"Sonny is hungry. He's lost his title. He's lost his friends. The whole world seems against him. He'll really be out to beat me. He will beat me, too, unless I'm at my best — so I got to be at my best."

Cassius' trainer, Drew (Bodini) Brown, interrupted. "You're taller, too, champ. Last year I looked down at you, now you look down at me. You're still growing."

The champion's eyes brightened and he assumed the role of a fanatic when the subject got around to the Black Muslims.

"Elijah Muhammad is the Messenger of God," he said, referring to the American leader of the Islam movement. "He can see the future before it ever comes.

"Elijah has pictures of the men on Mars. He got them from Allah. He also told us about a big ship in the sky — a mile long and a mile wide. You can see it twice a week, like a star. God is on that ship, sending representatives down to earth. They get enough oxygen for a year and go back."

"We have 20 million Negroes, and not a factory among them. But voting's not the answer. Integration is not the answer. You have to leave it to Allah to work it out. He has a plan. Some day all black people will be Muslims.

"As for me, I don't want to march and cause trouble. If somebody don't want me in their neighborhood, I don't want to be there. It makes me uncomfortable. If they don't want me to eat in their restaurants, I don't want to eat there. I don't like that Southern greasy food, anyhow."

Cassius suddenly became philosophical.

"You know what the word Negro means? It comes from the Spanish, meaning black. Okay, in that case, them gloves over there (pointing to some black boxing gloves) are Negro gloves. That coat you got on is Negro coat.

"There's a Greek word, too, 'Nekro.' It means 'dead.' Spirtually, Morally, intellectually, economically, we're dead, we're the lost sheep the Bible talks about, but it won't last forever."

Cassius was asked about his propensity for poetry, his occasional ranting, cane-swinging demonstrations of "I am the greatest — am the prettiest" — an outworn act.

"A wise man can act a fool, but a fool cannot act a wise man," the champion replied. "But I'm changing my image."

Cassius said he was going around the country buying up chicken farms and horse ranches in remote places where he may retire when he's through fighting.

"I like chickens, and little children," he added. "I love small people — people who haven't been given a chance in the world."

He said on a recent trip to California he has gone into the hills — old Indian country — and buried $10,000 under some old rocks.

"I didn't make a map, but I can go find it any time I want," he said.

If he is able to beat Liston again, Clay said he would like to fight Floyd Patterson — "I can outclinch and outbox him" — and then Ernie Terrell — "He fights like an old woman."

Then to a chicken farm, or his palace in Pakistan or his holy mountain in Ghana.

The champion said he probably would renew his contract next year with a group of Louisville business men who financed his start in professional boxing.

"They're a nice group of men," he added. "They're all millionaires. They don't bother me at all. They just like to come to the fights on free tickets and sit in the stands, flicking their cigars and saying: 'That's our champ.'

"I signed the first time for $10,000. It'll be different now. I'm more valuable. Let me see — I'd say I'm worth $500,000 now."

Bodini Brown, the trainer, said Cassius' strong points are the fastest feet and hands the boxing game has ever known — and a clean life.

IN PRO RANKS

Next Quarterback May Be Unknown

NEW YORK (AP) — Don't be surprised if pro football's next great quarterback comes, not from the campus of Alabama, Texas, Notre Dame or Southern California, but straight from the Bushes.

And the Bushes mean just what they used to in baseball — the minor professional leagues where young athletes toil at considerably physical and financial hardship to learn the finer points of his trade.

There aren't many such leagues, but their recent appearance reflects the growing popularity of pro football. In the past a player who failed in the big league could go to Canada, where opportunities are limited. He could play sandlot football, where Johnny Unitas learned the hard way to become a star National League quarterback. Or he could quit the game.

The suggestion that a new field is opening up came from Jim Lee Howell, who was head coach of the New York Giants until he gave it up a few years ago for the less taxing job of supervising the club's talent search.

"These leagues could help us a lot," said Jim, "especially since they formed the Continental League. I understand they're going to pay more than they did in the United and Atlantic Coast Leagues so the boys can afford to go there.

"We have a boy coming up, in The United League last season. He was a good quarterback at Purdue but he couldn't make it with us in camp. He wanted to play, so he went out there. Now he'll be back.

Howell wasn't exactly hinting that DiGravio could be a secret weapon in the Giant quarterback arsenal, somewhat undergunned since the retirement of aging Y.A. Tittle. But his emphasis on the value of experience was unmistakable.

The other Giant candidates are Gary Wood, No. 1 relief man for Tittle last fall; Henry Schichtle, who spent most of his time answering the phone on the bench, and Glynn Griffing, who was relegated to the nonplaying taxi squad. As a minor league regular, DiGravio probably got more game experience than all three.

"Pro football has advanced so far in recent years that only an exceptional rookie can make good right off the campus," Howell continued. "It isn't like when Sammy Baugh, who really was exceptional, came right up to be a star. Most of the boys are fighting for their lives in camp and we have to go with the players who show the most there."

In the past, most pro coaches have been reluctant to use untried players at the important quarterback spot. Even a good one such as Bobby Layne had a long stretch of bench warming before he gained enough experience to be a starter.

There have been some recent exceptions, such as Fran Tarkenton, Charley Johnson and Norm Snead, who were forced to fight for their lives on the field as well as in camp and survived to become stars. But a lot of fine prospects never made it.

"He asked me, 'when can I get to play?' and I had to tell him, 'A few minutes sometime late in a game after it's lost.'

"He wanted to play too, so he went to Canada and ran into the same situation because they can use only a few players from the U. S. Finally he got to be a free agent and signed with San Diego in the other league. He got to play there. Then they traded him to Buffalo and he led them to the championship."

Detroit Tigers Sell Righthander

LAKELAND, Fla. (AP) — The Detroit Tigers sold right-handed pitcher Bill Faul to the Chicago Cubs Saturday for an undisclosed amount of cash or a player to be named later.

Faul, 24, appeared in one game for the Tigers last year after an 11-1 record with Syracuse of the International League.

AFTER 7TH STRAIGHT CROWN

Boston Celtics Resting Before Playoffs Start

BOSTON (AP) — Boston, the National Basketball Association's Old Man River, is marking time before the playoff push aimed at an unprecedented seventh straight world championship.

The season began for the Celtics amid more problems than they had ever faced in their title reign. It ended with the team handing the NBA's strongest field the most decisive beating in league history.

Riding the crest of determination and defense, the Celtics shook off the loss of four pillars of their famed bench, advancing age among their veterans and a string of injuries.

Johnny Havlicke, successor to Frank Ramsey as one of the best sixth man in the game, bounced back from a serious cartilege operation performed last summer.

The 80-game battle is over, and "now to win the war," said General Manager-Coach Red Auerbach.

Typical of the team drive, Auerbach had his squad racing through a sharp drill 19 hours after closing the winningest season in NBA history with its 62nd victory. Boston doesn't swing into action in the Playoffs until April 4.

"We'll go on from here to win the championship again," said captain Bill Russell, a runaway selection as the league's Most Valuable Palyer by players and writers. "We want to win it more than ever in memory of Walter Brown."

Brown, the club founder and owner, died shortly before the season began.

"Anything can happen," said Auerbach who is nearing his 1,000th coaching triumph. "But we still have the championship. They still have to take it away from us.

"I don't like to compare this Celtics team with the others.

"But look at the record and it comes off the best. It won more games when the league was supposed to be tougher.

"It is a different type — a more aggressive, defensive ball club than the others."

The club has won nine straight division crowns and over the same span its only championship setback came when Russell was immoxilized by a bad ankle.

Trainer Buddy Leroux best caught the "we, not me" philosophy when he said "In this locker room there are no stars, just individuals who treat each other the way they deserve. After all, isn't that what life is supposed to be like?"

How did the Celtics overcome obstacles like the biggest personnel turnover in years when Ramsey, Jim Loscutoff, Clyde Lovellette and Johnny McCarthy left?

"Three things happened," explained Auerbach. "First, some of the veterans have come through with their best year, as if in answer to a challenge.

"Second, we've been fortunate in things like beating Cincinnati as regularly as we have (8-2), in shaking off major injuries, in the way our three rookies have come along.

"Third, we've showed a faculty for gaining momentum and maintaining which I don't think I've ever seen in a Celtics team to this degree before."

Boston won its first 11 games of the season. Not long after it put together an NBA-record tying 17 straight victories.

"Russell has had his best year in a long time," Auerbach continued. "I think he's a little stronger. The responsibility of his being captain has helped both the team and himself. He's taken hold very well.

"Sam Jones has had a great year. Havlicek had an outstanding season, too.

"K.C. Jones gave us his usual fine effort. Tom Sanders has had a good year and scored a little better.

"Larry Siegfried helped us.

"Tommy Heinsohn and Willie Naulls both have had it tough.

"Heinie injured his foot in early December. Naulls got a concussion in January.

"Relative to the draft I just don't know who we could get who could beat out our rookies Mel Counts, John Thompson and Ron Bonham. They've done what I expected of them.

Red Auerbach, Celtic Mentor, Coach Of Year

NEW YORK (AP) — Arnold (Red) Auerbach, a coach so successful they almost gave him the club, was named Coach of the Year in the National Basketball Association Saturday.

Auerbach coached the Boston Celtics to their ninth straight Eastern Division title in the NBA this season, and the club is bidding for its seventh straight league championship in the playoffs. Auerbach also serves as general manager and vice president of the Celtics and recently bought a block of stock in the club on terms that principal-owner Lou Pieri called "very favorable."

A panel of 27 basketball writers voted for the Coach of the Year. Auerbach drew 21 votes, Fred Schaus of Los Angeles four and Dave DeBusschere of Detroit two.

Auerbach joined the Celtics in 1950 after three seasons of coaching the Washington Caps and one with Tri-Cities. In 14 seasons the Celts won 884 games and lost 453 in regular season play. They established a league record of 62 won and 18 lost during the 1964-65 season. In playoffs, Auerbach had an 80-59 record up to this year.

Lew Alcindor Named To Prep Mythical Squad

NEW YORK (AP)—Lew Alcindor, 7-foot-1 star of New York's Power Memorial, is the first player to be selected three times for the All-America high school basketball team picked in a nationwide poll of college and high school coaches.

The ninth annual squad, chosen for Parade Magazine and announced Saturday, consists of five seniors and averages 6-7.

The first team includes Alcindor; Sim Hill of Midland, Pa.; Don Ross, East, Waterloo, Iowa; Pete Maravich, Needham Broughton, Raleigh, N.C.; and Richard Braucher, Kutztown, Pa.

Maravich is the son of Press Maravich, coach of North Carolina State.

Jim McGregor Is Cage Coach At New Mexico

LAS CRUCES, N.M. (AP) — Jim McGregor, 44, who since 1953 has coached the national basketball teams of six countries, has been named head basketball coach at New Mexico State University, Athletic Diretor Warren Woodson announced Saturday.

McGregor has coached teams in Italy, Turkey, Austria, Sweden, Greece and for the past four years, in Peru. In 1957 he accepted an assignment in Poland with State Department sanction and became the first American to coach basketball behind the Iron Curtain.

He succeeds Presley Askew, who announced his resignation after 12 years as head coach. He will become assistant dean of students July 1.

American League hitters belted 239 home runs at Municipal Stadium in Kansas City in 1964.

Grambling Gets Shutout Sweep Of Wiley, 5-0, 1-0

GRAMBLING (Special) — Ralph Garr, a hustling holler-guy, who holds a some-times erratic Grambling infield together, laced a bases-loaded single into left field Saturday to enable Grambling to sweep a doubleheader from Wiley, 5-0 and 1-0.

Garr broke up the nightcap inning after the Tigers whacked the Wildcats in the abbreviated opener.

Alex Pero and Bullpen specialist Henry Newman shutout the Wildcats on two hits in the first inning. Pero fanned 12 batters in five frames in winning his fourth game.

Two pitchers with overly impressive credentials combined to shutout Wiley in the second game. Jess Huggins whipped seven in four innings before Gophrey Brown took over and fanned 12 with a zipping fastball.

Grambling raised its season record to 11 games without a defeat.

Richard Hodge and Lawrence Long were the losing pitchers for the Wildcats. Long worked the extra inning contest alone on sheer determination.

The two teams will play a single game in Marshall, Tex. Monday.

Ladylike Look Revealed In New Handbags

Soft handbags and the soft "ladylike look" are ready to stroll arm in arm through this stylish spring. In the most elegant leather textures and prettiest colors, the new handbags are fashioned with great flair and a new-found femininity.

Bag shapes are rounder, detailing is more delicate, and leathers are more distinctive than ever. Among the interesting leather textures this season, are grained, smooth, patent, embossed, waxy and suede, reports Leather Industries of America.

With fashion in a feminine mood, daytime bags — from the pouch and box bag to the envelope — display a variety of charing touches. Cut-outs, with contrasting or printed underlays, are used effectively.

Scalloping, dainty brushed gold hardware, and self-leather trim are other style notes designed to point up the textures.

Back for another season is the soft quilted leather Chanel-look bag with its brightly shining gold chains, sometimes braided with matching leather.

For the gal who likes to be casual, the unadorned satchel or tote in grained, waxy or smooth leather is the perfect answer. Simple — but smart enough to pass any fashion test — these bags for the tailored taste are trim, yet proportioned to hold all the essentials and more.

Many versions of the returned-to-favor shoulderstrap bags fall within this casual category.

Vinyl Patent, Bonded Fabrics Ideal For Rain

By FLORENCE de SANTIS

It's a good thing rain has become so fashionable, since there's so much of it in the spring. The news this spring is in fabrics rather than styling, as rain coats long ago took over the look of regular coats.

High on the fashion list is vinyl patent, usually black or white, followed by grained vinyl that looks like lizard. Some coats come with complete matching accessories of boots, hat and umbrella, but there are plenty of these to be picked up if the coat happens to be a lone item.

Poplin remains number one fabric, but in colors now, including navy, pink, blue and plaids, not to speak of houndstooth checks, which are also big in water-repellent wool.

Bonded fabrics and laminates appear in flannel, mohair and wool crepe, again for coats that are really all - weather coats, with enough warmth to be worn as is on chilly spring days. Many of the bonded fabrics are in the silk and man-made silken print fabrics that make evening raincoats, long or short.

Of course, the James Bond rage has brought back the trenchcoat, often as one side of a reversible that turns into a straight coat of bright wool.

New Hair Spray Comes In Color

A new day is dawning in a new hair spray which not only holds the hair in place, but adds color highlights without changing the hair color.

The new product contains a special brightener and a color magnifier that actually brings out the natural color of the hair. New Dawn may be used on all shades of brown, black, auburn or blond hair and is contained in cans color coordinated to match the hair spray shade enclosed.

Sheer in texture, it can be used as often as desired and is now available in local stores. It is said to contain no lacquer and boasts non-greasy or sticky qualities.

U. S. Department of Agriculture scientists have developed an inexpensive treatment that improves cotton fabric's resistance to weather and rot.

Shoes For Spring '65 Underline Elegant Look

Fashion, the barometer of seasonal change, is also the expression of feminine elan, the clearest indication of the way women feel about themselves. In the Victorian era, dress was modest. In the '20's and '30's it reflected an eager, if uneasy, grasp of freedom. Today it mirrors a woman who is self-assured, vital, who thinks for herself and demands an opportunity for self-expression in every area of her life. Hence the range of possible looks is broad.

Hemlines sweep the floor or settle well above the knee. Silhouettes are narrow or fly-away. Anything goes as long as it contributes to the leggy, casual elegance that is prized now. And the shoes that underline the look are elegant too, in the softest, tenderest shapes of the decade.

LIGHT FANTASTICS

The little light shoe carries the most fashion weight, making the open shoe the best investment of the season. This look is no longer tentative, no longer experimental. It is so absolutely right that there are expressions of the idea for every hour, every foray when fashion counts.

Sandals look right in the city, solidly strapped and with swingy lowered heels for day. At night they go all feminine and fragile, with the barest minimums of spidery straps and higher, shapely heels. Mules are traveling to town now, wearing wicked little nighttime expressions in sinuous silk, embroidered satin or glovey pastel kid.

The ubiquitous new openings lighten an afternoon shoe, give a breezy look to the sensible little walker, and make heretofore closed pumps downright sandalous. Sometimes backs are opened in strapping new ways, or both backs and sides might open up to new treatments of spaghetti straps, tiny buckles, sling backs, side ties, or the new-looking spindle back. Sometimes only the toes are bared, for the newest look in town.

The lightweight concept brings devasting changes to the classic closed shoe, scooping out sides into lowdown curves and lowering throatlines into deep decolletages that bare the beginnings of the toes. Sometimes sides are straight but still quite low, contrasting with a high, somewhat rounded throatline called the high cone. Backs are pared to the minimum. They open up to racy slings or the all-the-way bareness of the mule.

HEEL AND TOE

Toes are shaping up to some of the biggest news of the season. The fuller, softer toe is the comer, new enough now to turn heads, and the odds-on choice, to be tomorrow's indispensable. Liked for the way it shortens the vamp while keeping the prized long look of the arch, it has been interpreted in every category. One little snub nosed shoe in topaz patent all but hides its forepart under an enormous rhinestone buckle. Another emphasizes its toe-in-the-round with spectator stitching and two shades of sun-yellow pigskin. Heels, here, are almost invariably in the medium to low range since designers like the balance of the broadened toe with a down to earth look at the back of the shoe.

Hang Pictures On Paper To Study Effect

NEW YORK (UPI) — Hanging pictures can be a frustrating task. But here's a trick professional decorators and Girl Scouts find handy to achieve an effective wall arrangement with several framed pictures.

Place a piece of paper the size of your wall area on a flat surface and arrange frames until you hit on the scheme that suits you. Outline pictures marking the spot where the nail or hook should go. Next, tape paper to wall, place hooks. Now, just remove paper and hang pictures. It's simple and foolproof.

MR. AND MRS. MICKEY COX

Cox-Hester Vows Read In Memorial Methodist

White cathedral tapers and baskets of white gladioli with greenery formed a background setting in Memorial Methodist Church for the ceremony Sunday, March 14 which united in marriage Miss Reba Jo Hester and Mickey Cox.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Sam J. Wilcox of Macon, Georgia and Mr. Cox is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Lester C. Cox of Monroe.

Rev. Loyd E. Williams performed the double ring ceremony at 2 p.m. following appropriate nuptial music by Mrs. Irene Nelson, at the organ.

The bride was given in marriage by her father. She wore a suit of pink arnel wool knit with a pink flowered hat and white accessories. Her bouquet comprised a white cymbidium orchid, surrounded by stephanotis and pink streamers.

Miss Juanita Woodruff of West Monroe was the bride's only attendant. She wore an aqua silk shantung suit with white accessories and a corsage of white feathered carnations.

James E. Brown served as best man and ushers were Jim Love and Kenneth Wright.

Mrs. Wilcox, mother of the bride, wore a pale pink linen suit with pink accessories and a white carnation corsage. The bridegroom's mother was wearing a blue silk shantung costume with matching blue accessories. Her corsage was of white feathered carnations.

A reception was held in Fellowship Hall of the church following the ceremony. A pink and white floral centerpiece and pink tapers was used on the bride's table which was covered with a linen cutwork cloth. Mrs. G. W. Adkins, Dallas, Texas, aunt of the groom, served the tiered wedding cake and presiding at the punch bowl was Mrs. C. C. Bedenbaugh. Miss Elaine Cox presided at the guest book and tea girls were Misses Linda Wilcox, Sharon Powell and Ann Cox.

After a short wedding trip the couple will reside at 2500 Oliver Road. Mrs. Cox was graduated from A. L. Miller high school in Macon, Ga. A graduate of Neville high school, Mr. Cox attended Louisiana State University, where he was a member of the football team.

SUNDAY BEST

A boy in his "Sunday-best" suit inevitably shows his "Sunday-best" manners, says Ron Postal of the National Council of Men's Fashions. His posture improves, his attitude of respect begins to grow and it is the rare occasion when he receives compliments of his appearance.

Each year at about this time, we observe National Doctors' Day. This is primarily an informational holiday, designed to acquaint the general public with little known aspects of the medical profession and the doctors' contribution to the community.

On the lighter side, the Women's Auxiliary each year invites members of the Ouachita Parish Medical Society to a dinner party ending Doctors' Day observances here. It is always a carefully planned affair, with theme carried out to the last detail. Last night's Showboat Party, with clever CAROL RAPHAEL as chairman, was no exception.

Invitations mailed last week were double - fold affairs, printed with a drawing of the paddle-wheeler "Queen of Hearts", and containing information as to time and place. HELEN ROBERTS and BARRIE SPENCER were responsible for invitations.

Decorations in the Paragon ballroom carried out the theme. A large drawing, six feet long, of the "Queen of Hearts" hung against one wall. On columns encircling the dance floor were large cutouts of playing cards and dice. Crepe paper "chandeliers" hung about the room, and music was provided by a player piano. CONNIE JONES, TOMMIE SUE SARTOR, and BARBARA VREELAND were responsible for decorations.

Feature entertainment of the evening was a skit, an "Old Fashioned Mellerdrammer". GENE WORTHEN narrated the story, which was acted by WILLIE ELLIS, PAT BLANCHARD, DOYLE HAMILTON, DICK VINES, and IRVING WOLFF.

Hostesses in Gay Nineties costumes circulated during the evening. These were VIRGINIA WHITAKER, CAROL TENNIS, TRACY WELCH and BETTY GEISLER. ALICE BENNETT and PEGGY FOLDS were the committee for the buffet dinner which was served during the evening. Others on the general committee were ALTHEA KELLY, CAROLYN SIMPSON, and MATT HIRSCH.

Following dinner, there were games for prizes and play money. CHERIE LONG was in charge of this feature of the entertainment. Her committee included FRED MARX, BEN COBB, ED LONG, JEAN HAMILTON, ELLEN MINTZ, ELAINE MILLSAPS, MORTIMER RAPHAEL, DEAN WELCH, PAUL TENNIS, BARBARA and ED BROWN, guests JEAN and DICK YOUNG, CALVIN FOLDS, ROY KELLY, BILLIE SPENCER. Over one hundred attended the party.

Visitors in the home of MARIE LOUISE and GEORGE SNELLINGS last weekend were MRS. FRANK STUBBS III, MRS. EARL LONG, and MRS. EDWARD BLOOM of New Orleans. These ladies are touring the state on behalf of the Louisiana Association for Music and the Performing Arts, an organization designed as a clearing house of information. Its first project is the effort to save the old court house in the Vieux Carre for future use as an opera house. JOE BARRY MULLINS has agreed to accept the chairmanship of the local group.

Former Monroyan JACK MADDEN was in town for three days last week and was the guest of JACK TOM JACKSON in his home on Roselawn. The D. V. LOFLINS joined Jack Tom in inviting Jack's old neighborhood in for dinner with the visitor.

Three Mexican straw figures, arranged with pine straw, ivy, and daffodils, formed the centerpiece for the table. Burnt orange placemats echoed the color of the serapes worn by the figures. The menu served to fourteen guests included shish kabob, wild rice, green salad, and strawberry pie . . . During the evening, the group called Pat in Brevard, North Carolina, and obtained her promise to visit here during the month of June.

Following Tuesday night's performance by the Royal Welsh Male Choir, members of Louisiana Tech Concert association were invited to meet the performers at a reception in Adams Parlor on the Tech campus. This affair was hosted by the Tech Men's Glee club, assisted by members of the Women's Glee club. The visitors, a group of delightful individuals, seemed to prefer punch to American coffee. Their only comment about our weather was "It's rather warm, wot?"

Other visitors from out of the country were honored in this area Wednesday evening when ROSALIE and WILLIE ROUNTREE entertained at their home in Tallulah. Guests of honor were the Viscount and Viscountess STONEHAVEN of Scotland. The Rountrees have visited Rickarton House, home of Lord and Lady Stonehaven on a visit to the British Isles some years ago. The guests remained several days in Tallulah, and then travelled to Natchez for a visit to the Pilgrimage. Tomorrow they are to be honor guests at a luncheon at International House in New Orleans, and later in the week will travel to Houston.

IVY OLIVER and JACQUE BIEGENWALD of Monroe were among the more than one hundred guests who called at the Rountree home between seven and ten Wednesday.

On Thursday members of Pi Beta Phi met for luncheon at Bayou DeSiard country club. Guest of honor was MRS. HAROLD B. HUNT of Kansas City, province president, who with Mr. Hunt is making a tour of the South, visiting Pi Beta Phi chapters. Spring flowers, bulbs, and quince formed the centerpiece for the table in the private dining room. The program of the afternoon was a tribute to the founders of the group.

Expected tomorrow for a visit with local KAPPA DELTA alumnae is MATTIE RUTH GALLAGHER, a national officer of the sorority. She is to arrive late tomorrow, in time for a meeting of the group at eight p.m. in the Louis Locke room of Ouachita Parish public library. On Tuesday morning, a brunch is planned in her honor at 10:30 a.m. at Bayou DeSiard country club.

A party gay as Easter was that planned for VALERIE LEWIS and QUINCIE RIVERS on their third birthday last Friday. The party was held at the home of Quincie's grandmother, JEWEL RIVERS, on Park avenue. The birthday girls wore dresses made alike in different colors. Valerie's was yellow with brown trim, worn with a corsage of tiny yellow rosebuds. With a similar dress of pale pink batiste trimmed with brown, Quincie wore a corsage of pink split carnations.

Seventeen little girl friends were seated at especially painted tables: blue legs, green table tops. Little chairs were in blue, green, yellow, pink, and blue. Each table was centered with an Easter nest filled with yellow daffodils. Placemats were pink.

At each place was an Easter basket filled with candy eggs. Refreshments included a bunny rabbit cake iced with white coconut, and lime sherbet-ginger ale punch. After watching movies, the group hunted eggs in the yard. These were special: plastic eggs filled with tiny chickens or sticks of gum. The prize eggs were found by AINSLIE McDONALD and CATHERINE RYAN.

This coming Saturday, April 3, is the date set for Chi Omega state day in Shreveport. The affair is planned for the Centenary campus, and all area Chi Omegas are invited.

Coming events cast a long shadow in the case of the BIG TIMERS' dance club spring formal set for Saturday, May 8. The Big Timers' board, meeting Tuesday afternoon, announced that members who missed the fall dance may invite guests for this affair. Music for the dance is to be provided by JOE REICHMANN and his orchestra, the group who made such a hit at last year's spring party and are returning by unanimous demand of the club membership.

For March, here is Christina Rossetti's poem, "Who Has Seen the Wind?"

Who has seen the wind?
Neither I nor you:
But when the leaves hang trembling,
The wind is passing through.
Who has seen the wind?
Neither you nor I:
But when the trees bow down their heads,
The wind is passing by.

Accessories Make News

There's news in this year's accessory favorites. Belts are appearing on many of the newest Paris fashions. The rule for belts this season is from one-half to two inches wide and made of patent leather, kid or crocodile. Jeweled belts will be a favorite for spring and summer evening wear.

Two-tone shoes are the latest word from Italy. They will highlight rounded toes and thickish heels with many summer styles

MISS VIVIAN FRANCES WALLACE

Fresh Flowers Accent New Season's Wear

In the spring a woman's fancy turns to thoughts of fashion, and this season's forecast is sweet by day and saucy by night. The fashion-conscious can add the right amount of spice at any time of day with fresh flowers.

Corsages have new shapes, and can be worn as a piece of jewelry. For daytime dresses, Florists' Telegraph Delivery experts suggest pinning fresh flowers front and center on a high collar — where grandmother wore her cameo pin. Or, follow the curve of a neckline with a half-moon of rosebuds.

Many fashions this spring appear in a blaze of white — the perfect setting for flowers in splashy colors and perky shapes. For a jaunty look, tuck some daisies into a pocket. On new suits and jackets, pockets are sewn high and handsome.

Bold color comes into play after dark, and the look is young and daring. FTD florists recommend a series of tiny buds or one big blossom for late-day dresses.

A bracelet of miniature carnations can be worn to pick up the dominant color in new floral and paisley prints, or pin a single gardenia or one perfect rose on a softly draped waistline.

Flowers for the hair are a fashion plus on spring evenings. Try a tiara of flowers for the long, smooth hair-do. For off-the-face styles, trail tiny blossoms along a deep wave or around a twist.

By long tradition, spring and flowers go together. According to legend, the goddess of spring was hatched from a heaven-sent dove's egg. She wore vines in her hair and walked about the land spreading flowers and bringing sunshine.

The ritual is still repeated in a small Italian town called Genzano. Every spring, women pave the main street of the city with flowers set in an intricate pattern.

The future bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. John Nix of Rayville. Following their marriage the couple will be at home in Gulfport, Miss., while Mr. Nix is with the U.S.A.F.

Carol Jean Nunnally Weds F. E. Hardcastle Jr.

Baskets of carnations, gladioli and chrysanthemums formed a setting in the First Methodist Church, Bastrop, for the wedding of Miss Carol Jean Nunnally and Festus Ewing Hardcastle Jr., which was solemnized Sunday, March 14. Rev. Robert L. Peyton performed the double ring vows at 2 p.m.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William J. Nunnally Jr., Old Monroe Road, Bastrop and parents of the bridegroom are Mr. and Mrs. Festus Ewing Hardcastle of Kinder.

A prenuptial concert was rendered by Mrs. Howard Wailes, organist and Mrs. Darrell Foreman, soloist.

For her wedding the bride wore a three piece costume suit of white silk knit, with white pearlized shoes. A cabbage rose of silk organza held her brief veil of illusion. She carried a bouquet of stephanotis, and stock florets centered with a yellow throated white orchid, tied with white velvet streamers.

Miss Lynn Levy, Bastrop, maid of honor and only attendant for the bride, wore a yellow knit suit, matching straw hat and yellow patent pumps. She wore white gloves and carried a nosegay of yellow roses, daisies and acacia.

Eric Nelson of Hallach, Minn., served as best man for Mr. Hardcastle.

Following the ceremony the bride's parents entertained at a reception in their home. Mrs. Nunnally, mother of the bride, was wearing a mauve pink lace sheath with matching chiffon trim, pink kid accessories and a hat of flowers and veiling. The bridegroom's mother chose a teal blue silk linen jacket dress with accessories to match and a hat of blue straw, ringed in flowers. Both mothers wore corsages of white feathered carnations.

Guests were greeted by Mrs. John Tully and presiding at the guest registry was Mrs. George R. Couch. An arrangement of white gladioli and greenery was displayed on the table with the guest book.

The bride's table was covered with a white satin floor length cloth with a white net overskirt and garlanded with net bows centered with blue forget-me-nots and lilies of the valley. An all white arrangement of chrysanthemums, carnations and gladioli was used with a silver candelabra centerpiece holding white tapers.

Mrs. Henry Messinger served the tiered wedding cake, which was decorated with white roses and crested with double wedding bells and lilies of the valley. Presiding at the crystal punch bowl was Mrs. Billy Eubanks and tea girls were Miss Mary Lynn Jenkins, Ruston and Miss Dorothy Ann Norman, Bastrop. The bridegroom's grandmother, Mrs. E. F. Hardcastle, assisted in the receiving line and others assisting with courtesies were Mrs. Milton Cockrell, Mrs. John Defee, Mrs. Paul Norman and Mrs. Elton Clark.

The coffee table in the den was covered with a white cloth, overlaid with pink net, caught up with pink roses and wedding bells. An arrangement of pink gladioli and greenery centered the table where Mrs. A. B. Edwards, Farmerville, presided at the coffee service.

Rice bags were presented guests by Miss Mary Elizabeth Nunnally, sister of the bride; Miss Phyllis Eubanks and Miss Pamela Tulley.

Mutation Sable Expected Soon On Fur Market

By GAY PAULEY
UPI Women's Editor

NEW YORK (UPI) — The Russians soon may claim another "first" in the world—the first to mutate sable.

Word that mutation of this most precious of all furs may soon be possible came from Leo Ritter, a furrier for 32 years. Ritter, who's to fur styling and class what a Mainbocher or Balenciaga is to clothes, has made several buying trips to Russia for the crown sable pelts he says are the finest in the world.

Said Ritter, "I hear they'll soon be doing mutations."

Why, I asked, if the United States can develop mink mutations, can't it also mutate sable and grow the little animals on farms as mink are reared on ranches?

Most Precious Product

"Because we can't buy the live sables from the Russians," said Ritter. "Sable is their most precious product."

He doubts if such a Soviet breakthrough would affect the world market prices on the fur to much degree. "We would just have more sables," said Ritter.

"Everything finds its place," he said. "The industry can't survive on one or two items."

There is some sable trapped in Alaska and the Yukon, Ritter said. But most of it has to be dyed to rid it of reddish brown overtones. Russia's crown sable that Ritter looks for is darker and, like the mink he handles, does not get any color treatment.

Ritter said there never has been so much fashion in fur as there is at the moment — such fashion items, for instance, as the floor length evening coat in yellow silk and lined completely with sable from his current collection. He's made a similar one in black silk for the editor of one of the fashion magazines.

Poor Women's Coat

I asked Ritter why a woman would buy sable only to hide it as a lining?

"That," smiled Ritter, "is supposed to be a poor woman's coat."

He mentioned prices other "poor" women were paying for top quality furs these days. A daytime sable coat of the darkest skins will go for $7,900 on up to $40,000; an empress chinchilla, $11,000; and one of the newer mutations of mink, say violet hom azurine, for $5,500 to $7,000. These are wholesale prices and Ritter said the markup by the retailer runs around 35 to 45 per cent more.

FANCY GEMS

All signs show that diamond and precious stone jewelry are moving to greater heights in spectacular beauty and ingenious design, the Jewelry Industry Council reports. Fancy shapes of diamonds and other precious stones, such as the marquise, pear, oval and emerald cuts, are being used in a variety of intriguing ways to create spectacular and intricate designs.

Use Vinegar On Hemline Of Lengthened Dress

By FLORENCE de SANTIS

Q: Saw a reader's inquiry about getting the hemline crease out of a lengthened dress, and thought I would pass on my method. Lightly sponge the hemline with white vinegar and press with steam iron on the wrong side. I have found this to work well on wools, heavy cottons, and crepe. Of course, if the material is old enough for the color to be slightly worn, that is another matter.

A: Thank you for this hint, which is new to me. Perhaps other readers have good solutions to this problem.

Q: With a champagne three-piece costume, what colors would you suggest for hat, gloves and shoes?

A: If the costume is being worn for general day wear, shoes should be somewhat darker, as in the taupe range, gloves the same shade as the costume. For dressier wear, shoes should be a light shade. The hat can always be a contrast color, and as beige is a basic color, you can choose deep pink, green, orange or blue. White can be used, but is probably not enough of an accent with a costume so pale itself in color.

Q: My daughter mistakenly washed in the machine a beautiful mohair sweater, which shrank from a size 34 to what would fit a slim 10-year-old. Is there any way of restoring the fibers?

A: I am sorry to say, no. Wool can't be restretched once it has been shrunk that way.

Q: For my son's wedding I chose an aqua chiffon sheath with a lace bodice, short sleeves, floating panels over each hip. I haven't worn it since, wonder whether it would be suitable for an April restaurant luncheon for a church organization? Is it too dressy for this and similar luncheons?

A: So often the answer depends on what the group in general wears. If they all turn out in suits or knits, you would be over-dressed. However, if the members generally regard these occasions as events to dress for, so can you. Can you sound out a few of the members on what they plan to wear?

Q: I attended a wedding reception recently at which I was surprised to see how many of the women wore black. I always thought this was incorrect. Am I wrong? I wore a light blue dress and felt conspicuous. For my niece's wedding in June, what should I wear?

A: You are right that black has always been thought unsuitable for weddings as being a color of mourning, and as far as I know, that is still the standard. However, for a winter wedding, you could have worn a deeper color than light blue. This shade would be more suitable to the June wedding you mention, in lace or chiffon.

If you have a question concerning fashion, send it to Florence de Santis, in care of this paper, enclosing a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

IT'S SURPRISING

Sudden exposure surprises in spring sportswear, from playtime coordinates to casual dresses. Cut-outs, large and small, appear in unexpected, but discreet, spots.

Shoes Bared For Spring

Stanley Philipson, who features the barest shoe to go with the sheerest or most textured of hose, recommends a shoe wardrobe for spring to set off the new costumes. Slings, cutouts and mules in lavish, many-hued leathers will lead his lines. "Nothing takes a finish like leather." this craftsman says.

Harlow Revival Influences Sportswear

By FLORENCE de SANTIS

The return of Thirties fashions, plus the hoopla over a new movie about Jean Harlow, has set California sportswear makers on a Harlow trend in summer sportswear.

Ruffles, big puffed sleeves prints in splashy florals are all the summer thing. A slip dress of pink double voile with puffed sleeves has a black overdress with white cotton lace pattern. Floral-print cotton satin overblouse with double-puff sleeves goes over cotton - blend stretch pants. Jump suits become pajamas with ruffles outlining the slits on flared legs.

Those beach shifts are out, in favor of the playdress, revived with all its little-girl charm of waist definition, ruffled neck and hemline, bloomers beneath.

With these Harlow ideas, go big-brimmed straws (who ever tanned her precious skin in the Thirties?) or little ruffled kerchiefs.

The U.S. Public Health Service reports that more than 20 million Americans are edentulous — toothless.

'Pop-Op' Art In Makeup Newest Fashion Mad Fad

Editor's Note — The latest vogues in the constantly changing world of art are op and pop, that is art which tricks the eye with lines or color, and art which is based on a reproduction of common, everyday items. The world of fashion, always on the alert to attract the lady buyer, has taken advantage of the new interest in op and pop. Fashion writer Jean Sprain Wilson reviews the latest in this sometimes mixed up milieu.

By JEAN SPRAIN WILSON
AP Fashion Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — When Audrey closed her left eye a swirl of lines drawn on the lid converged into a weird, hypnotic second eyeball. Her right eyelid was plaid and her cherry red lips were outlined in black.

Not at all a clown, the comely model was wearing pop-op party makeup.

When she shifted her shapely legs two painted eyes, one on each knee, ogled back at the leg-watchers. Seated at her feet, William Loew, makeup director for Charles of the Ritz, tediously labeled one eye "Stop" and the other "Go," then sealed this literal leg art with a cloud of powder.

It's absolutely the latest in pop-op beauty. Well, maybe.

Being on top of what is "absolutely the latest" is not easy because the beauty and fashion industries are rushing their adaptions of the current art vogue to market at lightning speed. They have to move fast, lest the fad fade into pure folly as quickly as it exploded onto the fashion scene.

Pop, say some art critics, is an artful spoof. Op is visual trickery. When it is hard to draw the line between what is op and what is pop, they call it "pop-op."

Pop was first to pop into fashion, but op was only a quivery line away. Setting a climate for a silly style season, American fashion designers uninhibitedly borrowed for their summer collections the output of pop advocates like Andy Warhol and Roy Lichtenstein.

Instead of needles, they used paint brushes to put collars, ties, belts, buttons and vests onto dresses; they even drew on watch fobs and corsages.

Kenneth Lane and other avant-garde costume jewelry makers did their spoofing with beads the size of doorknobs and, rings as big as ping-pong balls. Dr. Seuss-type animals curled around arms as bracelets. Opaque sun glasses turned the wearers into blank-eyed Orphan Annies.

Loew, looked upon by many as the founder of op leg art, calls the whole movement in fashion "a tool of the modern woman's total originality, a part of her new status as a cerebral woman.

"Her audacious wit expresses her new confidence, her new security," he says. She no longer needs to rely on the false competitiveness of sex appeal, pretending she doesn't have an ounce of brains in her head."

Almost everyone in the field agrees that op, pop, or pop-ops are frankly impractical, strictly for fun, and destined to disappear by fall — at least from the fashion field.

If it does, another art form may fill the void, for the fashion industry has trained its eye on the art world.

Ouachita Film Shown Chief Tusquahoma DAR

Chief Tusquahoma Chapter, Daughters of the American Revolution held its March meeting Saturday at the West Monroe Branch of Ouachita Parish Public Library with Mrs. Herman M. McGuire, regent, presiding.

Highlight of the meeting was the showing of a film, "Gift of the Ouachita," which was narrated by its author, Dr. George C. Brian, professor of drama at Northeast Louisiana State College. Dr. Brian was introduced by the program chairman, Mrs. W. L. Corley. His film gives a complete history of the founding of Monroe and West Monroe by Don Juan Filhiol, who lived and died in West Monroe, where he owned and maintained a large plantation. The narration also revealed that Mrs. Don Juan Filhiol was the first school teacher in this vicinity.

Miss Mary Katherine McGuire, a guest at the meeting, expressed appreciation to the chapter for being named a page at the recent state DAR conference held in Monroe, and also expressed appreciation for support given by the chapter to the Children of American Revolution, of which she is a member.

Mrs. J. E. Dupuy, for national defense, gave a talk on "Shadow of Things To Come — Arctic Disarmament," taken from the National Defender. Mrs. J. B. Landreaux reported on the DAR conference and Mrs. J. A. Rainbolt, chairman of DAR schools, announced she was preparing another box of clothing for this project.

Mrs. Landreaux, by-laws chairman, distributed a tentative outline for the new set of by-laws for the chapter and old Arsenal booklets were distributed by Mrs. J. M. Bell.

Announcement was made of awards received by the chapter at the state conference. These included state honor roll, gold ribbon; first place for supporting DAR schools, $5; first place press book, $10; first place publicity on American History Month, $5 ;first place Americanism, $2; most outstanding Constitution Week; most outstanding public relations, including press, TV and radio; most outstanding coverage on "The Flag of the United States, Flag Kit." For JAC work, the following awards: first place scrap book, Robert E. Lee club, Crosley sixth grade; second place scrapbook, Robert E. Lee club, Millsaps fifth grade.

It was reported that the inscription for the Trenton marker has been approved by the Louisiana Tourist Development Commission. A gift by the City of West Monroe to the chapter of 3,000 bricks from the ruins of the old city hall was announced by the regent.

Refreshments were served from a beautifully appointed table where Mrs. Herman McGuire presided at the coffee service and punch was poured by Mrs. Landreaux. Hostesses for the occasion were Mrs. Joseph B. Landreaux, Mrs. D. R. Cannon, Mrs. D. C. Golson, Mrs. V. O. Allen, Mrs E. W. Stinson Jr. and Mrs. Frank Jones.

Other members present were Mrs. R. E. Harrell, Miss Katie McGee, Mrs. Ruth Hudley, Mrs. H. C. Ervin, Mrs. J. A. Rainbolt, Mrs. J. E. Dupuy, Mrs. W. G. Haynes Jr, Mrs. J. M. Bell, Mrs. H. C. Mize, Mrs. G. L. Roy, Mrs. W. L. Corley, Mrs. Herman McGuire and guest, Miss Mary Katherine McGuire.

False Eyelash Cleaning Tip

NEW YORK (UPI) — When you buy false eyelashes you get guidance on fitting, cutting and application, but often there is no information on cleaning.

The gummy buildup from the surgical adhesive which holds lashes in place is best removed by dropping the lashes (with tweezers, please) into a small bowl of cleaning fluid. The fluid removes the gum, but with lashes so close to eyes the cleaning fluid also should be removed. The best way: wrap lashes around a pencil and wash them gently with castile baby soap applied to a clean mascara brush. Then, rinse them, dry in a towel. Put them on and "flutter" for flattery.

YOUR PROBLEMS

Engagement Ring Not Just Decoration

By ANN LANDERS

Dear Ann Landers: I am a 17-year-old high school senior and have been going steady with a 22-year-old fellow. Tim has had two years of college and is now working for his father.

I like him a lot and we have talked about marriage in a roundabout way, nothing personal. Tim must have though I was a lot more serious about him than I really am because last night he brought me an engagement ring. It is a beautiful diamond in a platinum setting and I'd love to keep it as a decoration but I am not ready to get engaged.

Also, my parents would go into orbit if they knew so I have not told them. Tim knows how my folks feel and suggested I just keep the ring in the toe of a shoe until I graduate from high school, and then tell them.

I'm afraid if I give the ring back he may be hurt and give it to someone else on the rebound. I need some advice. — RING AROUND ROSIE

Dear Rosie: An engagement ring is no decoration and you know it. Give the ring back to Tim and tell him to keep it in the toe of his shoe or better still suggest that he take it back to the jewelry store.

Dear Ann Landers: The letter from the 13-year-old boy who said he was a nervous wreck because of his four-year-old sister brought back memories.

I spent five years in the delivery section of a maternity ward. Every expectant father wanted his first born to be a boy. Half of them, of course, were disappointed — and said so. I used to think it was terrible the way some of those dopes even told their wives they were "let down."

I made it a practice to get the disappointed fathers to one side and tell them it is always better to have a girl first because as she grows older and is told to watch her little brothers and sisters it will come naturally and she will enjoy it. When a boy is told to watch his younger brothers and sisters, however, he is ready to pack his toys and leave home.

I've often wondered if those fathers remembered what I had told them, as the years went by. I hope so. — MEMORIES

Dear Memories: I hope not. I'd hate to think that yours is the best reason to rejoice over the birth of a daughter. Is a daughter important only because she can save you some baby-sitting money?

A father who would complain because he didn't "get what he wanted" is immature and stupid.

Dear Ann Landers: I married Ralph a year and a half ago. He is a great guy who had been ditched by a gold digger. Two weeks before the wedding she drove out of his life in the new car he had given her as an engagement present. Ralph owes a balance of $350 on that car. So this is my question:

Ralph and I file our income tax jointly. We will soon be getting back about $375 from the government because we overpaid last year. Should I let Ralph take that money and pay off his obligation on the car? Or should I take the half that rightfully belongs to me and buy myself something nice?

Most of the people I've asked feel I should be a good sport and give Ralph my half. But I don't want to be a sap. This obligation was incurred before I knew Ralph and I honestly resent it. —BALLERINA

Dear Bal: Help Ralph pay off the debt by kicking in your half of the refund check. What an ideal way to show him you are a Number One Number Two girl.

Ann Landers will be glad to help you with your problems. Send them to her in care of this newspaper enclosing a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

Choose Scent To Match Personality

Fragrance has been one of woman's secret weapons all through history. Circe tempted Ulysses with fragrance, and Shakespeare described Cleopatra's journey down the Nile as "so perfumed that the winds were love sick." Today, no woman is well-dressed without fragrance.

Start springtime right by choosing the light floral scents for your perfume wardrobe, and match them to your personality. If you're a sympathetic soul, violet scents are your best choice. Geranium is for the active and daring, lily of the valley for the shy, and honeysuckle scents have a special appeal for women with a whimsical turn of mind.

Lenten Dish Is Cheesy

NEW YORK (UPI) — To glamorize an omelet for a main course meatless meal, add tangy American blue cheese.

Make it this way: use one egg per serving. Beat in one tablespoon milk or coffee cream, a dash of salt and pepper. Pour egg mixture into a buttered skillet set over low heat. Cook eggs slowly. As the underside becomes set, tip pan slightly, lifting cooked eggs so that uncooked portion can flow underneath and cook. When mixture seems barely set, sprinkle about two tablespoons coarsely crumbled American blue cheese in center. Then fold or roll omelet.

Average Woman Spends $200 A Year On Apparel

By PATRICIA McCORMACK
United Press International

NEW YORK (UPI) — The average homemaker spends $200 a year on apparel.

But averages can be deceiving. For example, the family with an income of $10,000 or $15,000 puts out nearly $500 a year on women's clothes. The woman gets just $167 worth of new togs in families with incomes of $4,000 to $5,000 a year.

The typical woman in her thirties probably has as much as $2,000 worth of clothes in her closet, bought during the past five years or so.

Whatever your income, these figures from Uncle Sam's statisticians point to an interesting conclusion: You may have more money hanging in your closet than you have in a savings account.

"That's one reason you ought to know the value of the contents of your closets," says Walter H. Vernier, vice president of State Farm Fire and Casualty Co.

Vernier advises that you keep an inventory of any new clothes purchased this season. In case of a fire in your home or apartment, such an inventory could be invaluable.

In fact, it's sound to have an inventory of everything in your home.

Here's why: The comprehensive coverage provided for your household and personal possessions through the popular "package" homeowners and apartment dwellers coverage will reimburse you for loss due to fire, theft and other perils specified in the policy.

But, before you collect, you must present your insurance company with a list of the items that have been lost or damaged. All insurance companies ask for such an inventory. Producing the list isn't always as easy as it seems.

In the excitement following a fire or other misfortune, people often forget hundreds of dollars worth of possessions for which they could make legitimate claims.

Vernier said one company in the industry had a claimant who even forgot to list a baby grand piano among items lost in a fire.

Here's what you ought to do to make sure your possessions, including clothes, are protected:

—Make a list of all valuables and their worth. Give a copy to a friend or your lawyer, or keep one in your safety deposit box.

—Add new items to the list as you purchase them. Take old ones off as you dispose of them. Bring the list up to date once a year.

—Take photographs of your possessions. Snapshots of your home or apartment interior can be filed as part of your insurance application, thus providing a visual record of the quantity and quality of your possessions.

Brush and Palette

by Jan Bank

VISITORS TO THE Masur Museum of Art during the first regional competitive show, which opened March 14, have had the opportunity of viewing the work done by contemporary professional artists of our area. The experience has been a sort of double exposure as out of 43 selected paintings over one-fourth have been created by artist educators. The winner of the $700 purchase prize, Dan F. Howard, is in his seventh year on the faculty of Arkansas State College.

Northeast Louisiana State College is represented by the faculty of the art department with some very fine work. One painting by Harry Miller, two by Ed Shutz and two by Dr. Mack Vaughn. Such talents prove why Northeast is chosen by so many students desiring to enter the fields of commercial and fine arts.

Louisiana Tech shows their artistic prowess with the work of Ron Alexander and Jack Beard, having two paintings each hung in the exhibit.

When the juror, such as Gugmund Vigtel head of the Atlanta Art Association Museum who judged our show, chooses an award winning painting, he looks for all the basic components a good painting must possess. Color, from design, balance, technique and of course personal appeal. The only concern of the juror is with the painting itself and not the academic background of its creator. Yet, glancing through many volumes of "Prize Winning Paintings" you will find a great majority of the award winners are faculty members of colleges and universities. This fact alone should give ample cause for thought to the viewer inclined to state that many contemporary works can be done by any child splashing some paint on canvas. It must be extremely gratifying to the teacher who has laboriously struggled with all the technicalities and history of his profession.

Of course most of these knowledgeable educators would probably be the first to agree that it is not always the artist with the most knowledge of his craft that makes the biggest news. Many of the recent developments in todays artistic market are pure Barnum. But even little Barnum can be beneficial. Take the recent "Pop" art exhibition held at the elegant Four Seasons restaurant in New York City. The art was either eye catching or eye repelling depending upon the beholder. The reported comments seemed to be divided between the hang-the-expense and the hang-the-artist school of scorn. Exhibited were 100 works by 44 artists, some loaned from private collections and some price tagged from $50 to $4,500 from nine established galleries. The objects d'art included Leo Jensens "Champions Choice" — a metal baseball player with a box of wheaties in his chest, a prosaic empty laundry bag hanging from a green background, a circle of track carrying a white engine that shoved a blue painted table tennis ball over a column of air that bounced the ball high enough to pass through a hoop of wire on the engine when it came through on the next round. Also included in the collection insured for two million dollars, were hanks of hair, wooden soup cartons, pictures that talked back and less enigmatic canvases. Seven hundred fifty visitors to the one day show payed ten $25 each in behalf of mental health, the nations, if not their own. The moral of the story? There's nothing wrong with some hokum, as long as it isn't winning regional and national exhibitions.

THE COMPETITIVE SHOW will be hung through April 4. As well as the work of the Northeast artists, you'll see the paintings of such well known local artistic personalities as, Carolyn Adair, Ann Eberle and Ivy Oliver of Monroe. M. L. Padgett of Collinston and New Orleans artists Mildred Wohl, John Payne, John Clemmer and Juan Jose Calandria, a merit award winner. There are 43 paintings from artists throughout Louisiana, Arkansas and Mississippi.

AUXILIARY MEMOS

Hostesses during the museum hours of 2 to 5 p.m. daily except Monday will be as follows: Sunday, March 28, Mrs. A. K. Kilpatrick. Tuesday, March 30, Mrs. James Rivers and Mrs. Doyle Hamilton. Wednesday, March 31, Mrs. Kent Anderson and Mrs. Harry Bell. Thursday, April 1, Mrs. Dot Masur, Mrs. Thomas Henry and Mrs. Chris Ulrich, Friday, April 2, Mrs. Earl Grasser, Mrs. Harold Woods and Mrs. Thomas Godfrey. Saturday, April 3, Mrs. Louis Masur and Mrs. Charles Masur.

HERE AND THERE

HERE: Talented students, astute teachers and the uninhibited creative minds of children all add up to a dazzling array of art using medias and techniques most adults would be cautious to try. Lexington school will be open during school hours this week for those who would like to attend the show. The quality of the work is excellent and an inspiration to parents. Much credit is due principal, Miss Rosa Belle McDonald, city art teacher, Mrs. Thurla Bordelon, and the teachers of each class for producing a large scale show of original works.

ANOTHER show in the news this week is the flower show by the Twin City Garden Council. All of the arrangements were art by any standards and having one named for this column and your reporter was a big thrill. Thank you all.

THERE: The Mississippi Art Association watercolor show will hang May 2-31 in the gallery at Jackson. Fee is $3, jury and prizes. The show is open to all. Write the association, Box 824 in Jackson. Cards are due April 16, and work on April 20.

AREA CRAFTSMEN should enter the Mississippi River Craft show at Brooks Memorial Gallery in Memphis, Tenn. May 1-30. Entries are due April 1, and all media are eligible. Write the gallery Overton Park, in Memphis.

THE FIFTH ANNUAL Hodges Gardens Arts and Crafts Festival has been set for June 4, 5 and 6 at the gardens near Many with Louisiana Artists Inc. as the sponsoring group. There will be prizes in painting, sculpture and crafts. Open to all Louisiana artists over 18 years of age. Registration deadline March 31, so hurry. Write Mrs. Clyde Connell, Arts and Crafts Festival chairman, P.O. Box 1703, Shreveport.

COINS AND COLLECTORS

Gem Of Truth To Be Faced

By JOHN BLUCK

"Why, that penny was made the year the Civil War started!"

That's the way an acquaintance explained his interest in an 1861 copper nickel Indian cent that he had saved. It was one of the more than 100 Indians that he had accumulated through the years.

Our friend doesn't consider himself a coin collector. He didn't know the number of 1861 cents minted. He didn't know his coin was a part of the series that started with the rare 1856 Flying Eagle and ended with the scarce 1909-S. He did not know, and was not the least interested in, the "key" coins in the Indian series.

He did know that the coin seemed to be slightly "thicker" than his other Indians and that it was a different color. "It looks whiter," was the way our friend described the coin's appearance. He was right on both counts.

Our acquaintance may not have known it, but his interest in that one coin contained the germ of truth that all coin collectors must face sooner or later — that the pleasure in collecting coins doesn't necessarily come from acquiring rare coins or coins in superb condition or in completing a set of coins. Instead, it is the enjoyment and satisfaction that comes from collecting coins that are of interest to the collector.

It should be of no concern to the collector that his main interest is in collecting foreign commemoratives or mint errors while all his friends strive to assemble complete sets of brilliant uncirculated Buffalo or Jefferson nickels. After all, "Whose collection is it?" Certainly not his friend's; but his, and his alone. And if it brings him satisfaction and enjoyment it should be of no concern to anyone else.

We don't know the condition of our friend's 1861 copper nickel Indian cent. It probably isn't a choice piece that would send the Indian cent specialist into ecstasies. Chances are it is a well circulated specimen; maybe even a badly beat up and mishandled relic of the coin shortage which existed during the Civil War and post-Civil War days. The point is that the coin was pleasing to our friend because it served as a tangible link for him with the tumultuous events of a momentous period in our country's history.

A knowledgeable and astute dealer in ancient coins once made the surprising statement — surprising to us at the time, at least — that "if a coin doesn't please your 'inner eye,' don't buy it."

The coin in question was a tetradrachm of Gela (Sicily). The obverse, with man-headed bull, graded good. The reverse, with quadriga and driver with Nike flying above to crown the team of horses, graded very fine.

It was a better than average coin. But the obverse ruined the overall attractiveness of the coin for us. Even though the price was reasonable we returned the coin. It just did not satisfy our "inner eye." And we still haven't found another coin of that type in the condition we would prefer at a price we can afford, so the type is missing from our collection.

What does this personal anecdote have to do with our friend's 1861 copper nickel Indian cent? Simply that he was happy with his coin because, for him, it served its purpose. It brought home to him the fact, as nothing else might have done so well, that the Civil War did begin in 1861. The coin was his link with the event and the times. And it satisfied his "inner eye."

This is one of the unique advantages of a coin collection. The coins themselves may not be anything to shout about. But they are a bridge to the past which few other things can provide at such a modest price in money alone.

Almost anyone would be interested in a collection that contained coins of the times of George Washington and the Boston Tea Party, the French Revolution, Henry VIII, Columbus, the Crusades, Julius Caesar, Alexander The Great or Aristotle. These, and many more coins of equal interest, are easily available to the collector who is interested in people, the times in which they lived and the events which made them important.

It is hardly likely that we ever could own one of the tea chests thrown overboard by the colonists in Boston Harbor. But is is possible to assemble a sizable collection of Colonial coins. Neither can we own artifacts of Julius Caesar. But we can, for a few dollars, own a Roman denarius that bears the head of the Caesar who gave the title to all his successors.

Collectors seldom stop to think of their coins in this way. But those who view their coins as a small part of the era in which they were struck have a solid basis for greater enjoyment of their collections. And along with this concept they will find a growing curiosity to learn more about their coins — why they were designed as they are; why they were issued at all — and the details of everyday life of the period.

Last week's column referred to the illegality of owning gold coins dated after 1933. Through error, the date "1993" was substituted. Anyone owning gold coins dated after 1933 may find that they are subject to confiscation by the U.S. government.

Sure there's a difference between the luxury '65 Chevrolet and expensive cars

You can put most of it in your savings account

Maybe you've only seen them on the street so far. If so, come on in and see a Jet-smooth '65 Chevrolet right in our showroom. We think you'll do a double-take when you get up close enough for a look at that price sticker. Most people do. Because the major difference between this one and cars that cost quite a bit more is simply—price.

Take room, for example. Chevrolet has more of it than many expensive cars do. You get extra foot room with the new frame and forward engine design. And those handsome curved side windows are one reason for all of the extra shoulder room, front and rear.

And there's plenty of luxury. The smartly functional instrument panel is easy to read, puts everything at your fingertips as well. Color-keyed interiors feature tastefully rich fabrics and vinyls, foam-cushioned seating and plush deep-twist carpeting. And even the low-cost Bel Airs and Biscaynes include these luxury touches.

There's a great choice of power, from Chevrolet's economical, spirited 140-hp Turbo-Thrift Six on up. And that famous Jet-smooth ride is even better this year. A new Full Coil suspension, new wider tread and over 700 sound and shock absorbers work together to give you the feeling there's a foot of air between you and the road.

You can tailor the car exactly to your taste, too. Our catalog lists nearly 200 ways to do that—and our salesmen can show you how easily your present car and realistic monthly payments will have you driving a beautiful '65 Chevrolet nearly as quickly as you've read this message.

HOUSE OF THE WEEK

Space View Generous In Modest One-Story

By ANDY LANG

Our house this week is not exactly the vine - covered cottage famed in song and story. But its exterior has the same homey appeal and charm of that traditional favorite, plus all the interior advantages of modern design and materials.

Note its inviting front porch, with trellises at the sides and top, and a rail at the front. Full - length shutters, a picket fence and a lamp post help to turn the clock back to a captivating era. There's even space on the porch for one of those love seat-gliders so popular with both the young and old.

EXTRA CARE

Because Design H-76 in the House of the Week series is a one-story home of modest size, architect Rudolph A. Matern has taken extra care to give the appearance of generous space without adding to the budget. The square bay window in the kitchen and service entrance provides a big-room look from the outside but spans two room inside. By the inclusion of the breakfast room into the kitchen in a side-by-side arrangement, an 18' 8" room is created.

Still another space improvisation is the combining of the living room and dining area into one impressive 28' 4" room. Those desiring to establish the extremities of each room can do so by the manner in which the furniture is placed. The front foyer, located in line with the end wall of the fireplaced living room section, gives an unobstructed view of 23' from the front entrance. There are no projections from the ceiling to interfere with this view.

EFFECTIVE

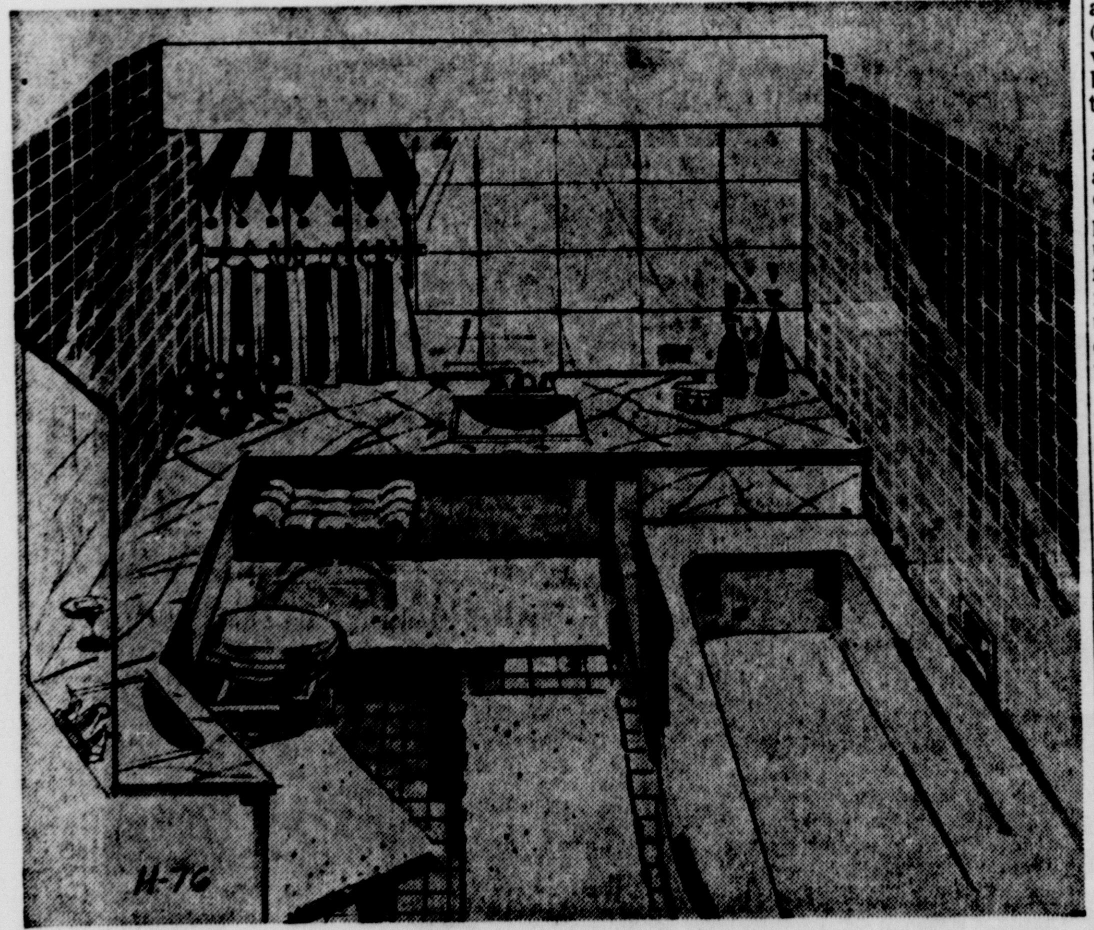
This always-effective arrangement of guiding the eyes from a vantage point along a grand expanse of space is also taken advantage of in the master bedroom. Its rear doorway sights along the covered porch for a distance of about 40'. This rear porch also can be entered through sliding glass doors in the combination dining - living room. An attractive bow window next to the doors gracefully projects into the porch.

OTHER FEATURES

Here are some of the other features in this three-bedroom, two-bath house with its 1485 square feet of habitable area:

A laundry out of, but next to, the kitchen and at a service door; a dressing area with vanity or desk space just inside the master bedroom; a built-in oven; plenty of closet space; a countertop planter in the kitchen; a square bathroom with fixtures on three walls; and an over - deep and extra - wide one - car garage, providing room for storage and a workbench.

This house has a good traffic pattern, with the bedroom wing directly to the right of the front foyer, the kitchen-breakfast area to the left and the dining-living room combination straight ahead. All three of these sections can be entered from separate entrances as well as from the front door — and in no case need any of the other sections be walked across.



THIS IS ONE of two bathrooms in the latest House of the Week. Its square shape lends itself to the placement of fixtures on three of the walls.

Here's The Answer

QUESTION: Someone recently asked you about the kind of shingles to use on the roof in an area often hit by high winds. You said something about shingles with special adhesive tabs. Do these tabs come on wooden shingles, since I am considering using red cedar shingles?

ANSWER: The reply in question referred to asphalt shingles. Cedar shingles need no such tabs. They have an exceptionally strong resistance to high winds. In a test conducted some years ago at the University of Wichita's wind tunnel, a roof panel of red cedar shingles stayed intact against the maximum wind velocity which the tunnel could generate — 136 miles per hour. Since then, wooden roofs have stood fast in actual hurricanes and other types of storms.

QUESTION: I expect to buy a portable electric drill soon. Can you tell me something about the adjustable speed drills I have heard about?

ANSWER: These adjustable speed drills are for greater precision work in different kinds of materials. The simplest type has two speeds, which change mechanically by means of gears. Others have two-speed switches and some are controlled by the pressure on the trigger or the rotation of a dial or knob. The purpose of all these adjustments is so that the user can make the drill operate at the best possible speed for the material being worked on.

As you know, heavy duty drilling or working with certain drill attachments calls for slower speeds to achieve maximum results without too much strain on the machine. Whether you need such a drill or the ordinary portable drill depends on the kind of tasks you will be undertaking.

DRY SIDE

Herbs grown indoors in pots or planting boxes should be kept on the dry side. The humid air of your kitchen (or laundry room if you have one) probably is the best spot for an indoor herb garden.

Caladiums Add Color

By AUDREY H. DAWSON

If you, Mrs. Gardener, need color in the landscape during the summer months, perhaps the caladium would serve the purpose. There's a color for every one, and be sure to mass colors for unity in the landscape. If you need green and white, then Candium is an excellent choice. For pink and green, consider Dr. Grover, Miss Chicago, Lord Derby and Mrs. W. B. Holdeman. These are all gorgeous. If red and green is your desire then the following are beautiful, Spangled Banner, Itacapus, Exposition, Red Ensign, and Crimson Wave. Caladiums grow best in shade and they are excellent for color from early spring until fall.

Another plant to give consideration for color during the summer months, if you do not have any shade, is the hibiscus. This plant is a member of the cotton family so needs plenty of sunlight. Your nurserymen will have plenty of plants.

Fertilize azaleas and camellias as flowers finish.

Continue pruning spring flowering shrubs that have finished blooming such as spirea, forsythia, flowering quince, weigela and deutzia.

TULIP FESTIVAL

Congratulations to Ruby Haight, of Colony Home Demonstration Club, for her blue ribbon award on the arrangement "Party Time," a symmetrical design.

Also, to Mildred Chapman and Lillian Ford for a red ribbon award on their arrangement, "The Rebels," which was a salute to the West Monroe High School. They are members of the Progressive Home Demonstration Club.

Other entries from the Home Demonstration Clubs were Better Homemakers, Easter Parade, and Claiborne Club, a Day at Cheniere Lake.

Other Home Demonstration Club members who helped with the Tulip Festival were Mrs. George Welch, Mrs. H. T. Everett, Mrs. Emma Nenny, Mrs. George Risdal, and Mrs. C. H. Long.

STRAWBERRIES

Did you, Mrs. Homemaker, know that fresh strawberries are an excellent source of Vitamin C or acid. Orange juice is considered the traditional source of Vitamin C, but fresh strawberries supply almost as much. One-half cup of fresh strawberries will supply 61 per cent of the recommended daily allowance of vitamin C for the adult. Vitamin C is needed by the body for making the cementing substance which holds the cells together. The human body does not store Vitamin C for later use. Since the body needs it daily, it is necessary to include a source of vitamin C in one's food every day.

If you, Mrs. Homemaker, are interested in freezing strawberries for later use choose firm ripe red berries preferably with a slight tart flavor. The berries may be frozen sweetend or without sweetening. However, sugar and syrup packs make better if the strawberries are covered with water containing one teaspoon crystalline ascorbic acid to each quart of water.

PLENTIFUL FOODS

If you, Mrs. Homemaker, need variety in cooking during March perhaps you'd like to include the food items listed in above normal supply. The U. S. Department of Agriculture lists the following foods on the plentiful list: Eggs, peanuts, rice, canned pink salmon, cabbage, celery, carrots, apples, red tart cherries and canned pears.

March egg supplies are expected to be well above those of a year ago, due to mild winter weather in most areas of the country.

GARDEN CENTER NOTES

Springtime In Designs

By MRS. JOHN TOLAR

Design with theme names were displayed on the Fifty District Garden Center program last Wednesday. Members of the Fleu de Lis Garden Club made seven lovely Springtime designs from flowers out of their own gardens.

Each one was distinctive and very interpretive of it's individual theme. The club president, Mrs. Percy Neely, made two of the designs. Her first arrangement, "Sunrise," featured orange - pink glads in full bloom. These formed the massed triangle line in a soft green compote container. Japanese plum formed the secondary line, creating interesting color contrast since the deep bronze foliage of the plum accented the color of the glads. Deep pink azaleas blossoms formed focal interest.

A round wooden base (dark brown) added proper balance. For her second design, "Good Morning," Mrs. Neely used aspidestra leaves to form an asymmetrical design in a green compote container. The central part of the design was filled with golden yellow daffodils. Near the basic part of the design she used variegated euonymous for filler. A black base was added for balance.

'SPRINGTIME'

"Springtime" was the theme of Mrs. W. R. Haight's design featuring pussy - willow in full bloom for the primary line. The container was a black ceramic bowl on a footed teakwood base. To one side of the vertical line of pussy willow she placed a vertical placement of gold tulips. On the opposite side she used the yellow daffodils in an airy manner. The variegated (gold and green) euonymous was used for accent filler at the base. It certainly depicted its theme name, Springtime.

Two ladies, Mrs. S. J. Russell and Mrs. L. A. Shelton created a modern design, "Salute to Outer Space." A horizontal placement of sago palm was used in a cut glass compote. For focal interest a massed placement of white fugi mums was used. This was a lovely table design accenting cool colors for the modern home.

Mrs. Dwight Alverson used the theme, "Amber Glow," for her design. Formal balance placement of Cunninghamia foliage filled - in with pearl bush (in bloom), formed the overall line in an amber compote container. Within the line she used the small narcissis for accent filler against a background of gold dust acuba. White daffodils formed the central interest.

'TROPICAL SPLENDOR'

Mrs. Joe Monroe interpreted, "Tropical Splendor" in her bold, modern design using the large leaf of the loquat for her primary line in a dark brown cylinder-type container. Three deep pink camellias formed the focal interest. These were accented with a grouping of small magnolia leaves.

The last design was made by Mrs. Henry C. Ray, Jr. This design was very interesting as a conversational arrangement with the theme name, "Escape." Very cleverly she used three small hanging pots on the metal frame by placing them securely against a picture frame, thus making a stand for them. In each pot she placed a red camellia. A background of green foliage (fan-shaped) was used for accent. One dark red camellia was placed about the group of three (out of a pot) as though it was overlooking the three, thus, escaped from the pots — making an interesting motif design for a coffee table, or den console table.

FLOWER SHOWS

The flower shows have been wonderful, and are still to be enjoyed throughout the area. This is a wonderful time of year when excitement is in the air over the many displays and lovely specimens of blooms at the shows. The Twin City Garden Club Council has just staged its annual show and the excitement is still in the air. Congratulations to all the winners, and to all who had a part in making this show a success.

April 2-4, is the date for the LGCF Convention in Alexandria. Make plans to attend a part, if not all of the events. Remember that club attendance will count toward winning The Silver Bowl, given yearly by Mrs. N. P. Martone, past president of LGCF, to the club with most members present.

Wednesday, the program will feature birds. With the help of Mrs. W. Moseley and Dr. Everett Lawson, this program should be one of interest.

Mrs. Kestel Speaker For Garden Meet

A nationally known arranger, accredited flower show judge and author, Mrs. John L. Kestel of Waterloo, Iowa, will be featured speaker during the Louisiana Garden Club Federation State Convention, April 2-4 in Alexandria.

She will appear there under the sponsorship of the Louisiana Council of Nationally Accredited Flower Show Judges.

She will speak at 8:30 a.m. April 4 at the Ramada Inn, on the topic, "At Home With Flowers," the title of a book she authored in 1964, which is now in its second printing.

BACKGROUND

Mrs. Kestel has served on the Iowa State Board of Federated Garden Clubs for five years, as exhibit chairman, co-program chairman, and at present she is district director.

She has exhibited and judged in five of the Central Regional States as well as in Texas and Florida.

Pictures of her arrangements have appeared in the last four National Council Calendars. She was chosen as a contestant to the Jackson and Perkins Rose Tournament in 1961.

SOUTHERN GARDENER

Plants Spill Over Banks

By WILLIAM LANIER HUNT

Some of the most beautiful plants to spill over high banks are the scrambling and trailing elaeagnuses. These vigorous, heat resistant broadleaf evergreens are also quite resistant to drought. All of them have tiny scales on their leaves that keep the moisture in and resist very bitter cold weather in winter. Underneath, the leaves are silvery or bronze.

Elaeagnuses are not plants for small banks because they are, all of them, rampant far-ranging shrubs when allowed to be themselves. We have mentioned several times in the column that you can make an evergreen tree out of a deciduous one by planting an elaeagnus and letting it scramble its way to the top by means of the hook-like spurs on the new growths. In the second season, these spurs lengthen into side branches.

Where there is nothing for them to climb and when the long branches are not pruned off, they will trail on the ground, and this is exactly what we want to hang over a high bank and provide it with a green cover. In autumn, all the elaeagnuses scent the air in November and December with their musky sweetness — a much more pervading and plentiful scent than even that given off by the osmanthuses.

Besides their bank-covering and tree-climbing virtues, the elaeagnuses have the virtue of providing us with long branches of evergreen leaves which are excellent for decorations in winter. These 10-to-15 feet long willowy branches can be twined around posts or through bannisters or used as a garland for the family portraits. They last as greenery much longer than ordinary material because of their scale-covered leaves which hold in the moisture. Most Christmas decorators know that elaeagnus branches can be turned over to reveal the silver or bronze underneath their leaves. This saves a lot of the effort of "silvering" foliage for decorations.

You will find in southern nurseries several elaeagnuses. Those listed as E. pungens have bronze underneath their leaves. The variety listed as E. simoni is the most upright and not suitable for bank covering because it tends to be more of an upright shrub than the others. The most robust variety and the one which flowers most profusely is the variety "Fruitlandii." This superb shrub originated in the Fruitland Nursery at Augusta, Georgia years ago. It is probably a cross between E. pungens and a tender species with large leaves. At any rate, the silvery reverse of the foliage and enormous crops of sweet flowers make it one of the finest broadleaf evergreens where something rampant is wanted.

The little dangling sweet fruits of the elaeagnuses are beautiful in late winter and early spring. The birds feast off them and, as we have mentioned in other columns, you can make a ryj eellfy falsa sprr te--bermome umns, you can make a false raspberry jelly from them.

Ghosts Of Opera Being Displaced

EDITOR'S NOTE — Rich in years and memories, the Metropolitan Opera House closes next year, but the legends of 83 years will live on. There'll be a new Met, of course, but never like the old.

By JORIE LUELOFF

NEW YORK (AP) — The ghosts will have to move.

Maybe they'll join the rest of the Metropolitan Opera Company at its new home. Or maybe they'll just disappear, along with the old Met.

Back in 1908 — 25 years after its opening — Met manager Giulio Gatti-Casazza was promised a new opera house "in two or three years."

Now, 57 years later, the dream is coming true. The old Met will close in the spring of 1966 and that fall the new Met will open as a gleaming marble showplace in the Lincoln Center for the Performing Arts. There it will join the new Philharmonic Hall, New York State Theater and other cultural buildings at the center, 30 blocks north on Broadway. The old Met, now in the heart of the bustling garment center at 39th Street and Broadway, will come down, to be replaced by an office skyscraper.

NONE TOO SOON

And not a moment too soon for Rudolph Bing, who has been the Met's general manager for 15 years.

"The actual working conditions of the old house are no longer tolerable," says Bing.

When the great gold damask curtain — the Met's trademark — falls for the last time, many will turn back for a last glimpse at the stage which has provided a setting for so much in the past 82 years — names, incidents and events that have become legend.

Glorious moments will be recalled along with a few painful ones, and at least two real life tragedies.

Perhaps the most cherished memory of all is Caruso, a name nearly synonymous with the Met. Both the voice and personality of Enrich Caruso have become legendary.

"He left a mark on the place in a way nobody else ever has," says Francis Robinson, assistant general manager of the Met. "This was his artistic home for 18 years — 1903-21 — and he opened each of those seasons except one — 1906 — when he bowed to Geraldine Farrar.

"The footlights didn't exist between him and the public. For example, the night his daughter was born the whole audience knew it and the whole gallery shouted, 'Vive papa!' "

Caruso's practical jokes were a source of amusement to the entire company. Once, in the first act of "La Boheme," he pressed a lump of ice into the soprano's hand in order to give realism to the phrase "Che gelidea manina!" — what a cold hand.

Since "La Boheme" seemed to be Caruso's favorite target, he was the prime suspect when Mimi's deathbed was pulled out one evening to reveal a chamber pot.

Long before he became a member of the company, baritone Robert Merrill attended performances whenever he could.

"I had a friend who was an electrician at the Met," Merrill explains. "He used to sneak me in and I heard operas from the loft above the stage." This handy arrangement came to an end abruptly when Merrill dropped his apple onto the stage during a performance.

TROUBLE ON STAGE

Merrill, now celebrating his 20th year at the Met, also has had troubles onstage. During an aria in "La Forza del Destino," he opened a box supposed to contain a picture of his sister. Instead, there was a picture of a nude! "I was so shocked I lost the beat," he recalls. "I glanced into the wings and there were half a dozen stagehands, hysterical!"

An unintentional mishap occurred in a new production of "Carmen". Merrill leaped onto a table to sing his important aria and rolled right off into the wings. "I started to sing, jumped off the table, ran back on stage and didn't miss a beat," Merrill concludes proudly.

Stage tragedy is the order of the day at the Met, and death in the audience is not uncommon. But twice in the 82-year history true death has touched the Met stage itself.

COLLAPSED

During a performance of "Marta" in 1897, Armand Castlemary collapsed and died.

On March 4, 1960, Leonard Warren died during a performance of "La Forza del Destino." The man who pronounced him dead, Dr. Adrian Zorgniotti, recalls:

"He had just sung his important aria when he turned to stage right and toppled over like a tree. By the time I got to him, which couldn't have been more than a minute and a half, he was practically dead."

Resuscitation was attempted but the famed baritone had died at 48 of a coronery arrest of the heart.

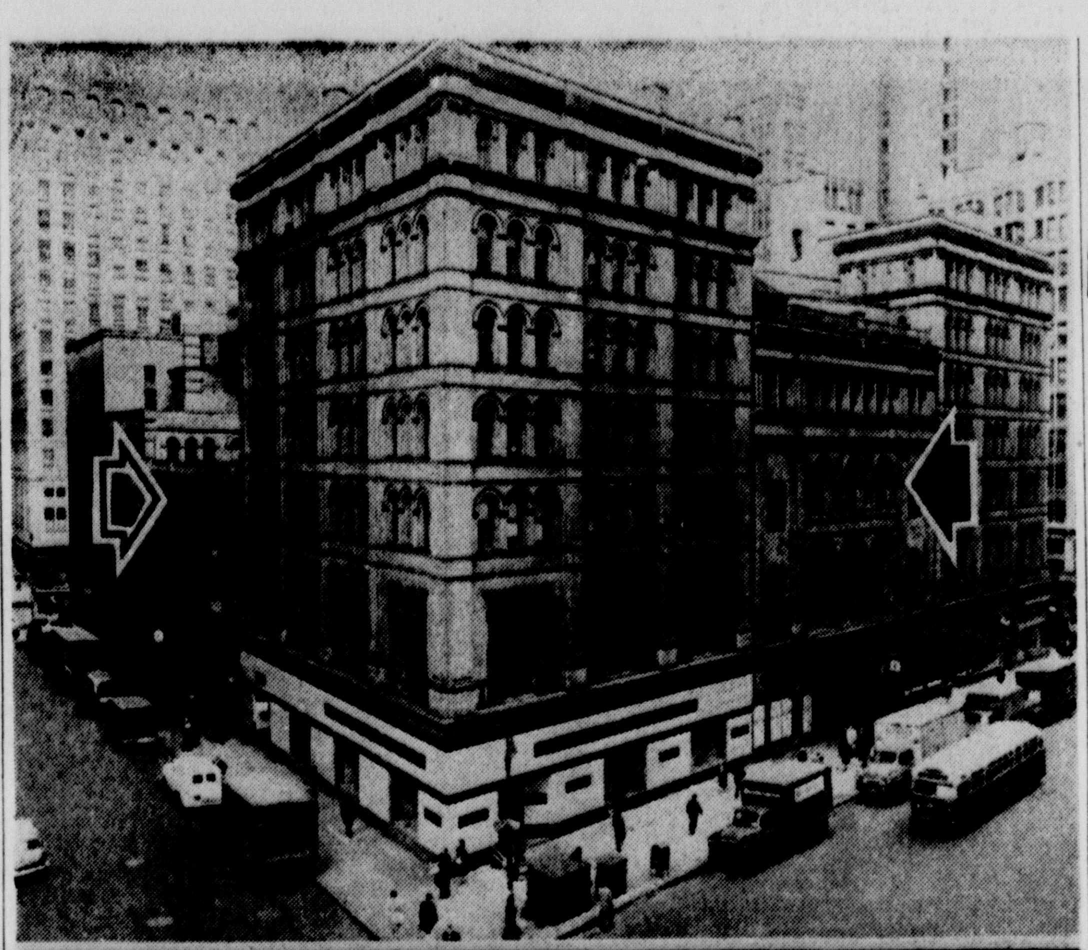
"I should imagine the last thing he heard was the applause for his aria," says Louis Edson, master mechanic and a 14-year veteran of the Met.

PRIMA DONNAS

Many a prima donna has graced the stage — Lillian Nordica, Lucrezia Bori, Lilli Lehmann, Emma Eames, Olive Fremstad, Kirsten Flagstad, Grace Moore and countless others.

There was Lily Pons, whose maid appeared an hour and a half before each performance to furbish her dressing room with chintz slipcovers and curtains, "so madame will feel more at home."

And there was Rosa Ponselle, who had a penchant for fresh air. "She wanted all the windows in her dressing room, the hall, everywhere wide open," recalls Bidu Sayao, who herself starred at the Met in the 30's and 40's. "She used to walk miles and miles from her home to the Met, snow or not, for the exercise."



TOP: UNIMPRESSIVE outside, but elegant inside and full of memories, this is the Metropolitan Opera House in New York's bustling garment center. Since it opened Oct. 22, 1883, it has been filled with the world's golden voices. But it has long been outdated as a modern home for opera. The building on Broadway will be torn down to make way for an office building when the Met moves. Arrows point to front (right) and 39th Street side entrances.

BOTTOM: A model of the new Metropolitan Opera House in Lincoln Center, scheduled to open in the fall of 1966. Facing Lincoln Center Plaza, the modern theater will have a setting more in keeping with its importance than the old Met. The audience will have a better view, the singers will have better dressing rooms. But many will say goodby to the famous old opera house with regrets. (AP Newsfeatures Photo)

CURTAIN CALL

By JACQUE BIEGENWALD

Everyone loves a good mystery, and Little Theater is putting on one of the best, "Ten Little Indians," opening this Friday evening, April 2. Curtain time will be at 8:15 nightly on Friday, Saturday and Sunday, April 2, 3, and 4, and on Thursday, Friday and Saturday, April 8, 9 and 10. There will be a matinee on Sunday, April 11 at 2:30 p.m.

This Agatha Christie story about a little band of oddly assorted strangers, invited by a mysterious host to his home on the island of Devon off the coast of England, is bound to please our audiences.

FIENDISH PLOT

Following the theme of the nursery rhyme, "Ten Little, Nine Little, Eight Little Indians," these weird guests are killed off, one by one. In the beginning, they suspect suicide or accident, but as the play progresses, with a tiny statue falling off the huge mantelpiece with each death, they begin to know the awful truth — there is a fiendishly clever murderer in their midst.

The suspense mounts rapidly, with each one inevitably suspecting the other. Being a confirmed mystery fan myself, I wouldn't dream of even hinting at the outcome, but it is a shocker.

You may make reservations by filling out the form sent you in the mail or by calling the box office at Strauss Playhouse. It will be open from 2 p.m. until 8 p.m. on the following days: March 31 through April 4 and April 7 through April 10. On Sunday, April 11, it will be open from 10:30 a.m. until 2:30 p.m.

The box office phone number is 323-1235.

FURNITURE NEEDED

Technical Director Chris West has finished his sets, but still needs two pieces of furniture. If anyone among our readers has access to a long, heavy library table and one or two heavy chairs, Chris would appreciate borrowing them for the run of the play. Call him at the theater, 323-1235.

As always, Executive Director Lonny Fraze is deep into his next play before the last one even finishes. He will hold tryouts for Little Theater's final play of the regular season, "Mary, Mary," on Monday and Tuesday, April 5 and 6 at 7:30 p.m.

This comedy hit by Jean Kerr calls for three men and two women, all adults. More about this next week.

We may sometimes think that Louisiana is a long, long way from anywhere else, but in reality it's a very small world, to coin a phrase.

ATTENDED PERFORMANCE

Your reporter attended the performance in Ruston this past week of the Royal Welsh Male Choir and was enchanted with the reading of some selections from Dylan Thomas by the young narrator, Barry Ashton.

Talking with him after the performance, I discovered that he has worked with the Royal Shakespeare Theater in London as part of their reportory troup — and just finished a run of "Sound of Music" in Wales!

He understudied the part of Rolf, the young messenger boy, and played the part of the Gauleiter, the German emmissary sent to force Captain von Trapp into submitting to German demands.

Pound To Stay At Present Level

LONDON (AP) — The treasury formally denied Saturday rumors that the pound will be devalued.

A spokesman told reporters "This is the latest of a long series of rumors about the pound and it is as baseless as the earlier rumors have proved to be."

Officials said resources backing the pound are strong enough to see it through any temporary setback. Technicians added that the pound is in good technical position.

They said its long-term position is equally strong — although it is not surprising that some people are holding back to wait and see what the Labor government's budget has in store for them. Budget day is in the second week of April.

PRAYERS SAID

Marchers Again In Selma Streets

SELMA, Ala. (AP) — More than 200 white and Negro demonstrators, mostly young people, marched to the County Courthouse and to City Hall today to show their resentment over the highway slaying of a white civil rights worker from Detroit.

It was the first street demonstration here since the start of a 50-mile march to Montgomery last Sunday.

Viola Gregg Liuzzo, 39, was cut down by a sniper's bullet Thursday night while operating a shuttle car to return the marchers from Montgomery to Selma.

At the courthouse Saturday, a minister said in a prayer: "She gave her life that freedom might be saved throughout this land."

A Toronto, Canada, minister, the Rev. Lawrence Duncan Heat, walked at the head of the line from the Browns Chapel A.M.E. church to the courthouse. The quiet, orderly line followed, two abreast, along a route prescribed by U.S. Dist. Judge Daniel H. Thomas of Mobile, who authorized the march.

About 125 of the 200 who left the church were Negroes. A motorcycle policeman and a state trooper car moved along the street with the marchers. A few white spectators stood along the 10-block route to the courthouse.

Speaking from the steps of the courthouse, James Orange, a Negro active in the civil rights drive, said: "We are gathered here for a few facts. We don't like what happened here the other night."

Orange, a huge man, recalled the deaths of two others in the Alabama racial struggle — the Rev. James J. Reeb, a Boston white minister fatally clubbed by white men here; and Jimmie Lee Jackson, a Negro who died of a gunshot wound suffered in nearby Marion.

A Roman Catholic priest said a prayer and Heat prayed "for all the people of Selma, high and low."

The demonstrators sang their theme song, "We Shall Overcome."

Many of the marchers wore skullcaps as a sign of mourning.

After 12 minutes at the courthouse, the marchers crossed the street and walked back in the direction of the church, some of them humming.

After three blocks the marchers halted at the City Hall. About 40 more Negroes joined them. One of the march leaders instructed, "Women in the center; men on the outside."

Orange again spoke. He said they were going to move Mayor Joseph T. Smitherman out of office. Smitherman was at the church when they left.

Orange also told the group: "When Col. Lingo starts ripping heads again, he's going to have a lot of heads to beat. The Negro people of Selma are not going to take any more beatings. But, if we get beat, we're not going to hit back."

Col. Al Lingo is head of the state troopers. Troopers who turned back a planned march on March 7 with tear gas and billy clubs.

About 150 Negro spectators gathered across the street from City Hall but made no effort to jon the marchers.

Four uniformed policemen stood on a nearby corner.

The marchers sang, "I Love Everybody." A prayer was offered and they walked back to the church.

Smitherman complimented the people of Selma "for their restraint and dignity" during the march.

The city public safety director, Wilson Baker, said before the march he would provide police protection.

"Saturday is not a good day to march," he said. "They've never marched on Saturday before. But they've got a court order and I'll just have to do my best."

Monroe police said the accident occurred about 9:55 a.m. Saturday when Mrs. Canoy, going south on Sterlington Road, ran into the rear of a car driven by Joseph B. Brewer of 22 Elmwood St., Monroe, and was in turn hit from the rear by a car driven by Charles Donald McClain of Kemah, Tex.

Police said the first vehicle had stopped in the traffic lane to make a left turn.

Rossini and Waguespack were in Hayman's car.

Hayman was injured seriously. Waguespack was treated at a hospital and released.

He is survived by his widow and one brother, Emmett Cavanaugh of Leesville.

Pontiff Confers With Committee On Birth Rate

VATICAN CITY (AP) — Pope Paul VI met Saturday with his commission on birth control. There was no formal announcement about the meeting but informants said the pontiff encouraged its members in their difficult task.

The 40 or 50 experts on the commission are said to be deeply divided on use of contraceptive pills. Their scheduled three-day meeting, which was to have ended Saturday, has been prolonged until Monday or Tuesday.

By then, informants said, the experts hope to be able to present to the Pope a first interim progress report that might form the basis of a papal speech on birth control before Easter, April 18. But the sources said the commission probably will not finish its work for months.

The Vatican was handling news of the commission with unusual discretion. The names of its members have never been announced. Informants said it had been given the title "Commission on the Problems of Population and Birth Control," but this has never been formally announced either.

Even the papal audience was not mentioned in the regular list of papal appointments. The Vatican press office issued no communique about it. A speech by the Pope to the commission members was not made public.

L'Osservatore Romano, the Vatican paper, did not mention the audience. It has not yet carried a word about the commission or its work.

Man At Homer Critical After Wife, Son Slain

HOMER (Special) — A 28-year-old Homer man shot and killed his wife and son and then tried to take his own life early Saturday afternoon at the family home at Lisbon, according to Claiborne Parish Sheriff R. W. Wasson.

Dead are Mrs. Ruth Elmore, about 26, and her six-year-old son.

According to the sheriff, Jerry Elmore, the husband, called the sheriff's office at 12:55 p.m. Saturday, and "hysterically yelled for me to bring a deputy, coroner and an ambulance" to his home. Sheriff Wasson said that he could get no other facts from the man at the time of the call.

Dr. E. A. Campbell, parish coroner, and Deputy Marion Aycock accompanied the sheriff to Lisbon.

Upon arriving at the Elmore home, they found Mrs. Elmore, the child and Elmore lying on the kitchen floor. There was a 20-gauge shotgun and 22 pistol lying beside Elmore's body.

The investigating officer said that Mrs. Elmore had been shot four times and the little boy was shot once. Both were dead when the officers arrived. Elmore was injured in the left side. He was rushed to Homer Memorial Hospital where he underwent surgery. He is listed in "very critical condition."

Dr. Campbell, said that Mrs. Elmore had been shot twice in the head, once in the left arm and once in the chest, just above the heart. The young boy was hit in the left temple. The coroner attributed their deaths to wounds received from a 22 pistol. He stated that Elmore had shot himself with the shotgun.

The Claiborne Parish law official said that Elmore had left a note on the kitchen table in which he indicated that he had shot his family and then tried to take his own life because of "financial difficulties."

Dr. Campbell said that the shot from the shotgun punctured one of Elmore's lungs and broke two of his ribs.

Monroe Negro Stabbed Fatally

A 49-year-old Monroe Negro, Luther Gamble was dead on arrival Saturday night at E. A. Conway Memorial Hospital after being stabbed at his home, 605 Goldman St.

Police booked a Negro woman, Johnnie Lee Perry, 37, for murder and transferred her to Ouachita Parish jail. She gave the same home address as Gamble's.

Details were sketchy and police late Saturday were piecing together the incident.

Gamble died of a stab wound in the left chest, reports indicated, and hospital authorities said he was dead on arrival at the Conway.

Officers said Ernest Barker, 2814 Jackson St., reported the "cutting" at 7:23 p.m.

Donkey Is Dead

TOKYO (AP) — Japanese animal lovers mourned the death Saturday of Ichimonji, the donkey with the gold-filled false teeth. Ichimonji, a veteran of Japan's war on China in 1937, died of old age, at 30. Tokyo Medical University experts had fitted Ichimonji with a $2,000 set of gold-filled dentures last year to replace his decayed teeth.

Anti-Israel Plan

DAMASCUS, Syria (AP) — Army officers from Arab countries bordering Israel have laid down "a unified plan for concerted Arab action in the event of renewed hostilities with Israel," it was officially announced here Saturday. The plan was not made public, but the announcement said it would be submitted to the unified Arab high command in Cairo and the Arab League for approval.

SPRING — EASTER SHOE FASHIONS

It's Open Season Now For Soft Shoes

This season women truly walk in beauty . . . shoes are lovelier than ever, softer than before. Focus is on the ladylike look, the gentle look. This is the year of the refined, the proper lady. No more tough chic.

There is a choice of silhouettes, but the goals are the same. Seemingly a paradox, it all adds up to one thing . . . . Woman. There is the gentle-siren, the sexy lady, the girl-woman.

NOSTALGIC

Fashion is nostalgic, reflecting the romantic thirties and is influenced by such sentimental offerings as "My Fair Lady" and "The Sound of Music." It mirrors a woman who is vital, who thinks for herself, and demands an opportunity for self expression in every area of her life. Hence the range of possible looks is broad.

Hemlines sweep the floor or settle well above the knee. Anything goes as long as it contributes to the leggy, casual elegance that is so prized. And the shoes that underline the look are elegant too, in the softest, tenderest shapes of the decade.

LIGHT FANTASTICS

The little light shoe carries the most fashion weight, making the open shoe the best investment of the season, says the National Shoe Institute. The look is no longer tentative, no longer experimental. It is so absolutely right that there are expressions of it for every hour, every foray where fashion c_nts.

Sanda's look right in the city, solidly strapped and with swingy lowered heels for day. At night they go all feminine and fragile, with the barest minimum of spidery straps and higher, shapelier heels. Mules are traveling in town now, wearing wicked little night time expressions in sinuous silk, embroidered satin or glovey pastel kid.

The ubiquitous new openings lighten an afternoon shoe, give a breezy look to the sensible little walker, awaken the entire fashion scene. The closed pump which has reigned supreme for so long has almost toppled from its throne to make room for the sling. The usually closed pumps are now downright sandalous. Sometimes the heels are opened in strapping new ways, or both backs and sides might open up to exciting treatments of spaghetti straps, tiny buckles, side ties. Sometimes only the toes are bared.

Fashion's latest fancy is the ankle strap, causing a flurry all through the spring scene and important enough for special attention. Ankle straps are going to parties in printed patents and precious silks, swinging into town in bright kids and reptiles. One favorite look is the long, stringy strap that can be tied in limitless ways.

HEELS, TOES

Heels, for days are almost invariably in the medium to low range. Designers like the balance of the new broadened toe with a down to earth look at the back of the shoe. Generally the lighter the shoe, the slimmer the heel. The shelly lightweights and opened silhouettes like the curvy heels. So does any shoe

IN SHOE STYLES

Modern Merger Of Color, Texture

Through the centuries, the use of color on a shoe has indicated the status of the wearer. In ancient Rome a senator's sandal was red, while patricians could wear only black. Later, the luxurious purple shoes carrying rich ornamentation became the hallmark of kings and emperors . . . and so the expression "born to the purple."

Spring and summer 1965 bring a feast of color, color that rockets across the fashion picture. Color as sott as a bouquet. Women of every age are offered a fling with colorful shoes, part of the committment to total femininity.

STACCATO

Fashion, says the National Shoe Institute, likes the staccato of black and white, experiments with pattern and texture for new excitements. White snake is stamped with tiny black flowers; giant black dots liven up white ponyskin; diminutive white checks regiment soft black kid.

The tenderest tones are the pinky blues, the dusty roses, the periwinkles and the shrinking violets. Bold blues are good too. So are the turquoises, the deepwater shades, the iced pales.

Fashion likes a rage of red this season and it likes the coolness of pale gray. Neutrals take in popcorn, platinum, safaris, white wines and hot sands, pale snuffs and mushrooms, the warm camels and curries.

There are succulent shades of tangerine, ripe peach, mango and persimmon; sun - brights on the wild side such as chrome yellow, coral and stinging green. There are lush greens, yellowed, whitened or deepened with blue.

This is the time of showstopping shoes, when they are lightened, brushed and splashed with color and right for every moment of the day and night.

Shoes For Men Are More Elegant In New Styles

Today's man in our Great Society has an increasingly wider span of interests and activities, and the money to enjoy them. His leisure time is increasing too, making greater demands for variety in his wardrobe.

The quick changeover he makes from city to suburban living calls for the right shoes for the right occasion. Individuality in casual footwear ranks high since he has more opportunity to express himself in this category.

EXPLOSION

Spring and summer bring with it an explosion of patterns and colors. The leathers are soft, the styling relaxed, many styles are unlined . . . all adding to easy-going comfort.

Casual shoes take on an elegant look in glove leathers, brushed suedes and smooth grains, reports the National Shoe Institute.

Some of his preference for the unusual is expressed in the popularity of handsewn details . . . stitching emphasizing a moccasin toe, or whipped around the topline of a blucher. The tassel moccasin and the lightweight brogue are included among his favorites.

Colors are usually in the sand, sagebrush, smokey cider and olive tones.

Many Styles Are Offered This Spring

Spring 1965 . . .come - alive time. Time when new shoes are alive with texture, decorations, movement. Time when toes are shaping up to some of the biggest news of the season with attention focusing on the blunted toe, reports the National Shoe Institute.

Toes are rounder, softer and easily described by comparing the newest shapes to money. . . with the quarter the most popular and the half dollar prophetic. Liked for the way it shortens the vamp while keeping the prized long look of the arch, it has been interpreted in every category.

CRESCENT SHAPED

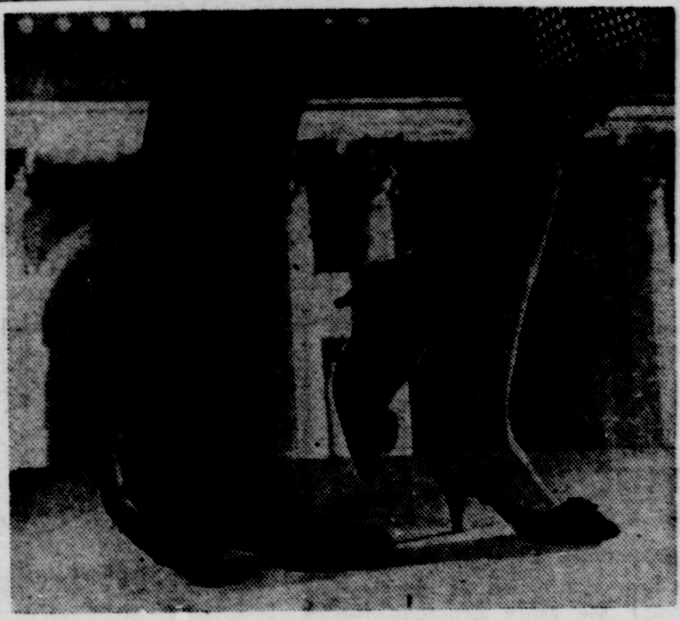
The slender crescent shaped like the dime or the nickel, is still very much on the scene, and will be in demand as long as elongation is equated with elegance. It looks graceful to the eye accustomed to the lengthened lines of past seasons. So do the softened squares and the very slightly widened crescents.

Soaring buckles, pleatings and bows, emphasize a high-fronted line.

TEXTURES

Textures have never had more scope or dimension. They run from lacquery patents and cloisonne calf to caviar lizard, silky snake, and pillowy, deeply grained alligator. Mesh is sheer sorcery. Summer suedes are loving to the touch in whisper soft colors, clinging lightly to the foot.

Suddenly its Spring . . . and shoes are having their way with the new, come-alive generation of every age!



A DAY IN SPRING! He wears pebble grain blucher with wing tip perforations and crescent toe. She wears a deliberately demure sling in navy blue calf, touched softly with a large, flat bow! National Shoe Institute Selections.

SAY EXPERTS

Perfect Fit Need For Precious Feet

Did you know that in the course of your child's lifetime, the feet he came into the world with will carry him about 250,000 miles?

Children today, from tot size all the way up to late teens have feet that are two sizes larger than their parents' a generation ago, and three or four larger than those of their grandparents' generation. The feet of today's children haven't become larger because they are more active. It's simply that children are taller and heavier than they were a generation or two ago, due to better nutrition and advanced medical care. Therefore feet are automatically larger.

START EARLY

The National Shoe Institute advises that care of these precious feet should begin as soon as a baby pulls himself up to his feet for the first time. A baby will start to walk when he is good and ready, and should never be hurried.

A child should get his first pair of shoes when he is able to stand unaided, and not before. But he should definitely have properly fitted shoes at this time, for they protect his feet, help him to stand steadily, and will encourage him toward another momentous event, his first step.

What kind of shoes should your child wear first? For the child who is standing, but who has not ventured to take the first dramatic step, the National Shoe Institute recommends a "pre-walker," a glove-soft shoe with a flat sole and no heel.

Once he starts to walk and run, a heavier, sturdier shoe is suggested, one with a strong, supple leather sole and firmer sides at the heel.

From that moment, it is vital that his feet are measured on a regular basis. Children outgrow shoes rapidly, and once outgrown they should be discarded immediately, no matter how new looking.

To be sure your child gets a perfect fit each time, first select a reliable store. Then choose your salesman carefully, and use him constantly. He will be familiar with your child's feet and be alert to any irregularities. Make sure that both feet are always measured. Shoes should be from one half to three quarters of an inch longer than the longest toe. The widest part of the foot should rest comfortably at the widest part of a properly fitted shoe.

New Dimension Is Added For Your Wardrobe

The white shoe has stepped firmly into the men's fashion picture. Newly important, it is found in brushed, smooth or grained leathers and in easily cleaned synthetics.

White is right, says the National Shoe Institute and it is interpreted in every category for summer 1965. The kiltie slip-on, the boot with elastic side gorings, the buckle shoe, the blucher.

There is the sharp teaming of white with black or dark brown, or white accented with a colored sole.

Check Shoe Size Every Time You Buy

Entering a shoe department with its enormous variety is as much fun as being let loose in a candy shop when you were a child. There are leathers, man made and natural, fabrics, colors, textures and shoe shapes in dizzying array. The selection is great making it possible for you to bring home shoes that fit the occasion as well as your own precious feet.

When shopping for shoes try to choose a salesman that you will go back to regularly. Ask for him as you do that special hairdresser who understands the eccentricities of your hair. A salesman familiar with your feet can save you a lot of time and pain by providing the shoes that are right for you.

EQUIPPED

Today stores are equipped with various foot measuring devices. But an expert fitter knows that isn't enough, it just tells him where to begin.

A quick examination of your old shoes can tell him a lot. Wear points can be an indication of fitting problems. If they bulge, they may have been too narrow, too much wear at the tips might indicate they were too short, too many creases along the vamp might mean that they were too long or too deep.

At any rate, both feet should be measured, since feet usually differ in size says the National Shoe Institute. Take into consideration the fact that your feet can change as much as a size in width and a half size in length, after you have been standing all day. Shoe sizes may vary slightly from brand to brand, and from style to style, so measure your feet every time you buy a new pair of shoes.

SKILLED HANDS

It is important for your salesman to have skilled hands. After using his mechanical device to measure your feet, he will feel the shoes on your feet to determine exact fit. There should be about one half inch between the tip of your shoes and your big toe. The heel should be snug, but not too tight. The arch should give you a feeling of support. Then walk around the store. Shoes should not be bought with the idea of "breaking them in." A properly made shoe does not change size after wear.

Finally, check the size of your stockings. Sometimes crushed toes can come from too-short hose.

MAJOR FORCE

Swinging Teens Set Fashion Pace

The teens are literally taking over the world . . . 40 per cent of our population is under 20, with a spending power of over 600 million dollars in footwear alone. Besides the actual money spent, their buying influence extends to four times that amount.

The impact of the teens in fashion is being felt in the adult world, as more and more, teenagers are setting the pace. They are more sophisticated, are shrewd appraisers of what's new, and completely individual in their taste.

Teenage girls have gone all out for the new rounded toe set against a small heel, according to the National Shoe Institute. The new no-flats are "in." They fit in with their way of life, their fast moving schedules.

The have a passion for straps, ankle straps, halter straps, and straps high across an instep. They like slings. One of the kickiest fashions they have taken over is the mule. Broad strapped thongs also fit into their wardrobe.

If the shoe is closed they like the sides curvy or cutout, and decorated with buckles.

They appreciate the new softness of leathers . . . the combinations of smooth and pebble grain, or the effect of reptile. Teenagers like the carefree appeal of dots, stark white teamed with black, and pastels lighting kid.

Fast Pace Eased By Shoe Change

A familiar scene for many years has been the sight of lovely young women dashing around carrying oversize hat boxes.

The young women are usually models, who, through experience, know the value of a "shoe break." They know that one pair of shoes will never get them through a day of fashion assignments. The day of the classic pump or all purpose shoe is gone. They need a variety for dress, casual or tailored costumes, a change for leisure clothes . . . for any of the different jobs that turn up each day.

They also need shoes for the walking their work demands. Nothing shows fatigue or age lines in a face faster than tired feet. A change of heel heights during the day gives leg muscles a chance to rest, and new found energy!

Now the tote bag has come into use in ever increasing numbers, and is proof of the emphasis all women place on the need for a change of shoes. In today's fast moving world, most women have jam-packed schedules, and the National Shoe Institute suggests the quick pick-up of a "shoe break" as a standard part of daily routine.

The breathers between a PTA or an organization meeting in the morning, marketing, chauffering, shopping in the afternoon and entertaining in the evening, are the natural times to change shoes for comfort and costume coordination.

For the woman on the job, it's a good idea to have an extra pair of shoes at the office. She could wear a lower heel on the way in to work, change to a higher one for appointments or meetings . . . and because hope springs eternal . . . have a dress pair for that surprise dinner or theatre date.

ITS OPEN

whose destination is dancing. Since the more generous toe curvings are seen everywhere, and a sinuous little satin sling might have precisely the same shape sported by a spectator in canvas or kid, the heel can make the difference. One might be a slender winestem and the other a strong little pyramid or keg.

In the middling to low range, shapings run to the Louis, comma, cowboy wedge . . . with a surprising number of variations within each type. But then the heels swing up, when the hemlines swing down to reach the longer, below-the-calf length for evening.

TOE STORY

The newest story from the National Shoe Institute this spring is the toe story. Many interesting designs and styles in women's shoes are featuring special motifs. Some shoes are opened toed, some have crescent toe sling, there is the lustre printed calf accented with patent heel and straps. The pug nose pump also is popular, and there is a honey beige calf framed with grosgrain ruffles. The bared toe sandal is another style.

GOING ALONG WITH A WOMAN'S PLANS . . . all the new silhouettes for spring! Left to right: The gentle touch . . . a draped leather bow softening a sling of angel pink kid; Completely open, an uninhibited sandal of summer sky blue kid; the Dolly look in a sandal of black and white printed cotton, with ribbons to tie any way you please; For daytime, the broadly strapped sandal of pale chamois alligator. National Shoe Institute Selections.

Your Shoe Wear Based On Use, Specialists Say

Shoe salesmen are constantly confronted with the challenging question: How long should a shoe wear? The National Shoe Institute says the average customer tends to use this as a sort of gauge of shoe value or performance. However the chief "catch" to this question is that the answer must be given in terms of time — in weeks or months. This is impossible. Two persons can buy the identical shoe for the identical price. One can wear it out in a few weeks. For the other it will last several months. One of the important differences, of course, is the actual wear given to a shoe. That is, how far did the shoe "walk" in its lifetime?

When a mother says that "Johnny's shoes lasted only 5 weeks," little Johnny may have covered 700 miles of scuff-slide-climb-jump-run activity. That's approximately the distance from Boston to Buffalo.

Work Shoes Have Plenty Of Appeal

Twenty years ago, men's work shoes existed in one style with minor variations. They were six inches high, they sported box toes and heavy soles. They were tough as gunboats—and nearly as heavy. The variations were limited to colors—yellow or black; and widths—"E" or wider.

Today's work shoes come in an infinite variety of styles, colors and materials. They are sturdier than ever, due to technological advances, but they look as though they had been fashioned for sport or dress wear — and in many instances they're worn for just those purposes.

NEW TYPE

Today's buyers of work shoes are largely a new breed, and in many cases far removed from the farmers, miners and laborers who were the principal work shoe users a generation ago. For at the same time that automation has sharply reduced America's heavy work force, it has also led to an immense increase in our leisure time. As a consequence, men from the professions and the business world are spending more time hunting, fishing and in suburban gardens than ever before. These sophisticated buyers have insisted on good looks as well as durability. It is they who have demanded the radical changes that the shoe industry has introduced in the world of work shoes.

Included in these changes are an infinite number of styles predominated by eight to ten inch boots and low oxfords. The boots which may be of either the laced or pull-on variety are designed to appeal to the out-of-doors urge latent in every white collar male.

MANY LASTS

They come in an endless variety of lasts, shapes and colors, and soft grained glove leather and brushed leather uppers have replaced the re-tan and elk leathers of the past. The box toe of yesteryear has given way to the moccasin types. Similarly, the new synthetic crepe soles (which are oil and acid proof) now used in place of the old rubber and cord soles, are playing their part in lightening and brightening the modern work boot. Even the brightly colored "one-pull" rayon laces add to their overall appearance and efficiency.

The pull-ons or Wellingtons are designed to be worn either inside the trousers (in which case the wearer appears to be shod in a well-styled dress shoe) — or on the outside for heavy weather, or for men who prefer a touch of the west in their get-up.

Plenty New In Styling For The Men

The American male is a doer . . . increased leisure time, rising income and suburban living have made him active, participating in boating, skiing, bowling and a number of other country-bred activities.

Recreation has become a way of life, and with this way of life, come demands for a shoe wardrobe.

FOR RELAXATION

More and more, men are dressing up to relax, and their wardrobes for loafing or living it up in leisurely fashion are light in color, well tailored, casually elegant.

Perforations now come in new designs suited to the rugged look, reports the National Shoe Institute. Woven leathers and wide-open meshes are tops for cool comfort. Boots are still liked. So are sandals and slipons.

The leisure look is distinctive, purely casual . . . and goes nowhere else!

Fuller Toes In Fashion For The Men

Spring and Summer 1965 is a season of fashion realized in men's shoes. Never before has there been so much style, combined with so much comfort.

Comfort is reflected in the newly flexible leathers, softened toes and unlined construction. The National Shoe Institute says the new shoes are as supple as gloves yet ruggedly masculine in appearance and wear.

FULLER SHAPES

Toe shapes are fuller and more natural. The high fronted look called the high cone is good with the shorter trousers. Bluchers are big. So are slipons with side gores, wing tips, perforations, flexible soles and unlined, soft leathers. Oxfords will have moccasin fronts, wing tips, guantone and ridge stitching.

Smooth, shiny, black leathers are still tops. Reptiles will be used in combinations with smooth leathers. Fine grain leathers such as llama are part of the men's fashion picture.

There's Fairyland Of Children's Shoes

In many fairy tales for children, shoes play a wonderful role. In Cinderella, the glass slippers fit the foot of our "girl by the cinders" and she wins Prince Charming. In The Wizard of Oz, Dorothy finds her way "down the yellow brick road" to the Wizard, with a pair of shoes given to her by a good fairy.

From the many fairy tales, children may derive a feeling of magic about shoes. Certainly nothing seems to delight them more than shopping for party shoes.

Now it is spring 1965 and there is a fairyland of shoes . . . in a variety of enchanting styles. What could be more charming for special occasions than the new young-lady shoes this season . . . beautiful in design and so much like mother's in fashion.

MOTHER'S ATTENTION

Like mother's the attention for the little ladies is definitely on full toes. The rounder, softer shapes are news says the National Shoe Institute. Sometimes buckles and bows are added to go with the frilly look in dresses. Shoes are open with high instep straps, or cutout with upfront treatments.

Leathers are soft, construction is light, colors swing and lively blue takes over! Textures slated for success are patents, reptile prints and glovey kid.

Our young prince charming prefers the slipons and loafers with the somewhat tapered shapings. This category includes the handsewn moccasins. Beatle boots and moots, the moccasins raised to boot power, are "in". Some of the dress boots have slightly higher heels.

MANY MATERIALS

He will want them in cordovan, antique brown and black. Both smooth grain and grained leathers are popular.

High on the spring roll call for school and play are all the classics . . . loafers, ghillies, suede casuals and dressed up saddles, and all in spring's lyrical new colors. There are whites, reds, bright yellows and flag blues, and the new softies too, the whippets, the cobbler tans, otters and grays.

There are overlays of bogus reptile, plaided tongues, sturdy ghillies with reinforced toes and leather lacings.

Like dad, young men have taken a stand on white, which has joined the ranks of classic colors. Sometimes white is teamed with black or blue.

National Shoe Fair Opening In New York

When the spring National Shoe Fair opens in New York today, one of the greatest and most comprehensive collections of footwear ever assembled, will be placed on view.

Over a thousand exhibitors will display more than 300,000 different styles of 1965-1966 fall and winter shoes to buyers from all over the country. The models will range from $200 custom made high fashion slippers to fold-aways that can be bought at chain drug stores for fifty cents or less. In addition to the more conventional footwear, such specialized items as skating shoes, work shoes and corrective shoes will be displayed in increased quantities.

In short, the National Shoe Fair in New York will clearly establish that more diverse footwear in more materials and new styles will be available to the American consumer than ever before.

IN GOOD FOOTWEAR

Enjoy Walking; Set Your Pace

Today, millions of Americans overlook their feet as a marvelous means of transportation. Instead they drive, are driven, or dangle on straps in crowded busses to travel a mile or less.

By now we all know that to keep physically and mentally fit we need exercise as much as a balanced diet and the proper amount of rest.

Obviously walking is the easiest, most natural and the most accessible of all exercises. You can do it on your way to and from work, and at any time during your leisure hours. Walking as a regular part of a day's activities makes for healthier feet, as well as heart, lungs and disposition.

You can walk as fast or as slowly as you please and derive the same benefits. It doesn't require any special equipment except comfortable, appropriate shoes. This season, says the National Shoe Institute, designers have lavished their talents on the walking shoe category. For women, the new lower heels are the fashion news. Technology brings the softer leathers, both natural and man made, fabric specially treated for wear and weather, and shoes that are lighter weight.

Walking can be utilized to take up the slack when active sports are not convenient.

Some medical experts say that walking about three or four miles during the day is generally all the exercise most people need. A rate of about four miles an hour provides "mild to moderate" exercise. They suggest that you walk along at a fair pace, swinging your arms and taking some good, deep breaths. This way the whole body is exercised.

RAMBLE, MEDITATE

You may prefer to ramble and meditate . . . "walk away" from the world for awhile and come back refreshed to tackle any problems. You may use walking as the time to get closer to your family. Often people feel more at liberty to confide in each other when they are out in the open. Or you may walk for the sheer pleasure of it.

"Success in walking," said the naturalist John Burroughs, "is not to let your right foot know what your left foot doeth." Make each walk a new enterprise.

When Mr. Truman took his legendary, pre-breakfast jaunts at a fast clip, a reporter ran beside him breathlessly and asked him why he kept on walking. "Because it will make me live longer," he answered simply.

Shoes Express Special Image, Say Authorities

Authorities claim that the image a woman wants to project of herself is often expressed in the shoes she wears. With the new shoes for evening she can project her most romantic fantasies through her choice of colors, styles and fabrics.

Shoes have never been as dainty and delicate as in this glittering spring and summer season. The feminine, foot-flattering silhouettes are often sensuous and deliberately so.

For late day it's the sandal, sometimes merely a webbing of thin straps for the widest possible exposure says the National Shoe Institute. Mules now are venturing out at night and slings and halter back pumps make it open season on the dance floor.

The new dancing craze sweeping the country has made shoes the focal point of the costume.

There will be more magnificence in colors, fabrics, in jewelled treatments, in embroidery . . . and in the surprise of silver snake.

Its all as old as Eve, as new as tomorrow.

Valentines

FOR EASTER

Foot Care Brings Comfort And Beauty

Your feet never give you any trouble? Be everlastingly grateful. W. C. Fields said, "If I say I've hurt my foot, I get sympathy, but if I say my feet hurt, everybody laughs." But foot troubles are no laughing matter.

Such things as corns, callouses, ingrown toenails can be annoying or downright painful, but they are often related to more serious ailments. For example medical authorities tell us 30 per cent of all backaches are caused by foot disorders.

EXPLAINED

Here is how they explain it. Well over half of us, especially during our later years, get what is called "fallen arches." This doesn't mean that the arches collapse. They simply begin to drop slightly, perhaps only a fraction of an inch, because our bones, muscles and ligaments tend to weaken and because we are apt to put on weight.

An arch drop in itself is no cause for concern. But sometimes one foot drops lower than the other. Then there is trouble. As slight a difference as one eighth of an inch can cause a tilt in the hips and the pelvis. This pelvis imbalance may cause, in turn, a shift in the spine and consequently a drag on the muscles of the lower back.

EARLY START

The National Shoe Institute suggests beginning in early childhood, to care for the feet through proper nutrition and cleanliness habits, toe and ankle exercise, and constant care in shoe and stocking fit.

For the more common kind of foot fatigue, there are several simple remedies or means to give quick relief.

One is the alternate foot bath. Two deep basins of water — one very cold, the other fairly hot. The feet are soaked alternately for about three minutes for a total of about twenty minutes. This "thermal shock" effect stimulates circulation.

If the skin of your feet is dry or chapped, rub it gently with baby oil after washing. However, if your feet perspire too freely, dust them with foot powder.

A brisk foot rubdown with a rough towel can be a further circulatory stimulant.

While seated, such as when reading a newspaper or watching TV, keep your feet rested on a chair or stool nearly knee high, with the feet crossed and the arches facing upward a bit. This relaxes the tendons and muscles in your legs.

Treat your feet to periodic, professional care and continuous pampering at home. You'll be rewarded with improved general health and comfort.

Fashion, Fit Teamed In Many Styles

Today we hear far less of such terms as "corrective" and "arch support" and "health" shoes. Back in the 1930's there were almost 1,000 different makes of these shoes.

Today there is only a handful. Does that mean that the "medical influence" has declined in the children's field? No, quite to the contrary. The medical influence is greater, but two significant forces are now in operation.

The National Shoe Institute says there is a demand for more styling in juvenile footwear, and a greater public consciousness of the importance of children's foot health via proper fit, more frequent size changes and better quality shoes.

Shoemen, parents and doctors are realizing more and more the psychological importance of shoes to a child. Children resent having their shoes look "different." The shoe industry has done wonders in providing such children with reasonably styled shoes, without sacrifice of foot health needs.

Keep Shoes In Proper Condition

There are some very important reasons for taking good care of shoes. One of the most obvious has to do with good grooming, or the "cosmetic approach." This means brighter, fresh looking shoes. It means bringing to life the original color or finish of the shoes with cleaners, creams or polishes. Nothing adds so much to a successful appearance as well cared for shoes . . . the focal point of every costume.

GOOD HEALTH

But even more important, shoe care is necessary for good health. Once shoes lose their shape, cautions the National Shoe Institute, they are robbed of the vital function of proper support. Today's polishes do more than shine, their use is more than "skin deep." They preserve the life of the leathers and keep them supple and new looking longer. Polish also prevents stiffness, caused by drying out after exposure to moisture, whether a puddle of water of perspiration. If your shoes do get wet stuff them thoroughly with paper toweling to dry the insides, wipe them with a dry cloth to remove all water and dirt and let them dry at room temperature. Never put them near any source of heat. Use shoe trees to protect their shape.

For suede, a good sponge will do, and for other materials, a clean, soft cloth does wonders.

When you buy your next pair of shoes, be sure to check with your salesman on the new techniques to clean them. With all the new natural leathers and man mades, and fabrics now available through technology, the methods may vary in each case.

QUESTION, ANSWER

Question: How do you keep the eyes of white shoes from staining the laces and the white leather tongue?

HELP FOR HOMEMAKERS

DEAR HELOISE:

Here's the way I use plastic squeeze bottles that contained liquid dishwashing soap:

Starting approximately three inches from the bottom, I cut two-thirds of the way around the bottle, then cut upward and across to form a tab. This gives me a handy three-inch container with a tab for attaching it to a wall.

Heating an ice pick, I punch a hole in the tab so that it can be thumbtacked to wooden cabinets or hung from gummed picture hangers on metal surfaces. Then I decorate and label it with a felt-tip pen.

These containers are wonderful in the kitchen for matches, pins, stamps, coupons, soap pads, etc. Used on bathroom walls or cabinets, they hold razor blades, small medicine bottles, pill boxes, and other small items.

Place one at the proper height in your shower stall to hold shampoo . . . no more stooping or groping for the bottle of shampoo.

MORE MEAT SAUCE!

DEAR HELOISE:

I cut a semicircle from the top of an inexpensive hand towel, then bind the curve with bias tape, leaving enough tape to tie around the neck.

These make wonderful spaghetti bibs!

Mrs. G. Walse

Wouldn't red towels be darling? Spaghetti stains wouldn't show! I once went to a spaghetti and lobster house and they tied red cotton bibs around our necks; but the terry-cloth idea is much better. Not stiff. No ironing.

Heloise

DEAR HELOISE:

My husband carries his lunch to work and has broken so many vacuum bottles that I just had to do something about it.

I finally solved this problem by cutting the foot off an old bobby sock and slipping the knitted top over the bottle before putting it in the lunch bucket.

The sock top is easily washed, and we haven't had a broken vacuum bottle since I started using this method.

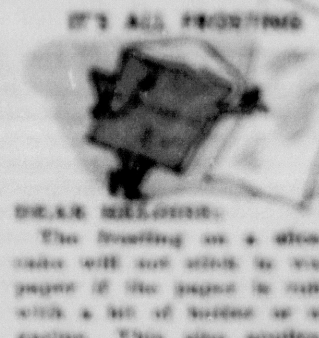
IT'S ALL FROSTING



DEAR HELOISE:

The frosting on a slice of cake will not stick to waxed paper if the paper is rubbed with a bit of butter or margarine. This also applies to meringue-topped pies.

Jennie Allen

DEAR HELOISE:

Rainy days are terrible. There's nothing to do! Books and games get tiring, but finally the problem is solved.

Schoolers grown into high-schoolers probably have saved a few drawings and papers with high marks from younger grades. It's lots of fun to take out these papers and compare them with recent ones!

It brings lots of laughs, and you'll be surprised at how good your kindergarten drawings are!
